CONFLICT CERTAIN.

King Fails to Get Compromise.

Summons Premier to Fruitless Conference on the Budget.

Effort to Have Land Taxes Dropped from the Bill Unavailing.

Ruler Is Cautioned Against Overstepping His Prerogatives.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Conflict between the House Lords and the Commons over the budget is inevitable.

King Edward is in an earnest controversy with Premier Asquith over the budget. His Majesty cares little about the budget itself, but he desires intensely to smooth away the conflict between the Lords and the Commons. Of the possible results of this conflict the King has said:

"It may leave me the only hereditary institution in the three kingdoms."

His Majesty's attitude became so aggressive recently, constant report has it, that the Premier was forced to tell him firmly he was overstepping his constitutional prerogatives. When the King summoned Mr. Asquith to Balmoral Castle a month ago he told the Premier peremptorily that the fight between the Lords and Commons must be averted at all costs.

The King proposed that Asquith drop the land taxes on condition that the House of Lords agree to pass the rest of the budget. The Premier refused to listen to terms which he said would drive practically his whole party into revolt. But Asquith offered to consider any proposition for a possible compromise with which Lord Lansdowne, the opposition leader in the House of Lords might approach him.

ROYAL DEMAND.

The Times correspondent hears that the last words the King uttered to the Premier at this remarkable interview were:

"An accommodation must be arrived at."

This command the King conveyed also to Lord Lansdowne. Moreover, His Majesty suggested indirectly to Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the speech he was about to make at Newcastle (October 8) be postponed.

The Chancellor was told that the King had already persuaded Lord Rosebery to refrain from speaking in opposition to the budget at Birmingham, and that Lloyd-George should return the compliment.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer expressed profound regret at being obliged to disregard the King's suggestion. He explained that his silence at that moment might seriously impair the budget's chances of becoming law and convey the impression that he was wavering as to the justice of some of its provisions.

REQUEST REFUSED.

Not only did Lloyd-George refuse to put off his speech at Newcastle, but in the speech he made there he took an uncompromising position for the budget in all its details, and so made possible the conference between the Premier and Lord Lansdowne, which the King has commended.

Furthermore, simultaneously with the King's arrival in London (October 11) Lloyd-George left for a motor tour on the continent to be gone for precisely as many days as the King's visit here lasted.

The King, according to his custom, summoned Lloyd-George to Buckingham Palace, there to bring fresh pressure on him, but the Chancellor's departure plainly intimated to His Majesty that the Chancellor could not be influenced. The conflict between Lords and Commons is inevitable now.

The King, it is said, admires Lloyd-George for his great ability and courage. But His Majesty hates Winston Churchill, whom he described the other day, it is reported, as "partly alien and wholly undesirable."

Lloyd-George and Churchill are the men who are making the fight for the budget, both in the Cabinet and in IOWA SUFFRAGETTES PLAN PANDEMONIUM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The militant methods of the English suffragettes, including the use of fists and the breaking of laws, the welcoming of jail sentences and the storming of legislative halls, are at last to become a reality in the United States. Iowa women are the leaders of the militant movement and they are now planning for a campaign that is liable to make the "stunts" of the Britishers seem tame in comparison.

The preparation for a militant campaign of the liveliest kind is being made as a result of the resolutions adopted ten days ago by the Iowa Woman Suffragist Association, by which "obstructive methods" were indorsed. In consequence the women are getting ready to move on the State Legislature in force this winter, defying police, militia and every other power in the State.

"There will not be enough policemen in Des Moines to put us out of the capitol, and if they want to get rid of us they'll have to call out the militia," that is the defiance voiced by Mrs. Julia Clark Hallam, the newly elected militant president of the organization. It sums up the attitude of the Iowa suffragettes, for it would seem that they are now suffragettes rather than suffragists.

This attitude means that for the first time in the United States the English idea of "fight for suffrage by any means, lawful or unlawful, fair or foul," is adopted by a responsible association. In the opinion of Iowa suffragette leaders this means that the American spark of militancy has been fired, and that a militant conflagration is likely to run through America as it has run through England.

The programme as thus far prepared shows that the women are ready to do these things:

Go in force by hundreds to the State Capitol this winter, when the suffrage bill is being considered.

Prevent by obstructionist methods the passage of other legislation, if the bill is not considered favorably.

Yell at the legislators, sound the festive fish horn, ring the melodious cow bell, shout suffragette battle cries and cause general pandemonium at the capitol.

Defy the police.

Laugh the militia to scorn.

Use their fists and probably their nails.

Break any old law that seems to need breaking in the carrying on of the campaign.

And lastly, but by no means leastly, to go to jail.

In other words, the suffragettes of Iowa are ready to go the limit on this proposition. They are thoroughly impregnated with the English idea that to get suffrage, even to get suffrage arguments listened to, it is necessary to force the question on the public mind. Consequently, Iowa women stand prepared to do anything their British sisters ever have done, and also ready to raise the British ante in causing trouble.

AMERICANS FIRST.

SUFFRAGETTE LEADER HOPEFUL

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Philip Snowden the English suffragette has informed the New York Equal Franchise League that she would not be surprised if American women obtained the right to vote before their English sisters did.

"If you do win the right to vote first," she said, "it will help us in our fight, and if we win first we will all leave our work at home and come to your aid. By working together we can win both battles."

EX-SOLDIER MURDERED.

PASCO (Wash.) Nov. 6.—Pat Cavanaugh, a laborer, was killed in a saloon here today by Jones McCabe, said to be an ex-soldier. Cavanaugh and McCabe quarreled, and McCabe slashed Cavanaugh's throat with a knife. McCabe escaped.

DECISIVE BLOW.

ZELAYANS DEFEATED BY REVOLUTIONISTS.

Under Gen. Fornos Diaz, the Insurgents Beat Back the Advance Government Troops, Killing and Wounding One Hundred.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BLUEFIELDS (By wireless to Colon) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rebels under Gen. Fornos Diaz engaged a force of government troops today at the town of Guatuaso, province of Chontales, and defeated them decisively.

One hundred of the Zelayans were killed or wounded. The loss of the rebels, who fought from ambush, was very slight.

Thus far every attempt of the Zelaya forces to invade the territory held by the revolutionists has been strongly repulsed. The men from the interior are fatigued and weakened by hard marching through the bush. There is no possibility of Zelaya retaking the lost territory. It is impossible for him to forward troops through the difficult country and should he attempt it his scouts would lose heavily.

Gen Chamorro still holds the San Juan Valley. He has fortified many strong positions along the river.

The reports of government successes from Managua are greatly exaggerated. They emanate from President Zelaya, who is afraid that his supporters in the interior will be forced to turn against him and support Provisional President Estrada.

AFTER MUNITIONS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Somewhere in New York there is a swarthy, keen-faced, bright eyed little man whose presence in this country is bothering the Nicaraguan legation at Washington so much that secret agents have been looking high and low for him in the little restaurants in Pearl street, in the small hotels in the cross streets near Union Square and in all those places where Spanish-Americans most do congregate.

The little man is Señor Don Enrique Espinoza, and he is a patriot attached to the staff of Gen. Estrada whose army is "revolting" all over Nicaragua, and trying to gain control of the government and oust President Zelaya. He is in New York as a purchasing agent for the insurgents, according to Señor Don Pio Bolanois, the Nicaragua Consul, and it is his purpose to buy a shipload of guns, tents, shot and shell and other munitions of war in this city and send them to Estrada.

So excited is the Consul that he has caused his agents to keep a close watch on a huge pile of masonry known as the Bannerman Castle, on an island about sixty miles up the Hudson, under the suspicion that some dark night Espinoza will back up in a boat and remove enough contraband of war to blow the whole southern republic to perdition.

"He is a menace, this Espinoza," said the Consul, "and the government of the United States should stop him. I have information that he has seen the Bannerman people, and that at the very first opportunity he will buy the guns and the ammunition and attempt to take them away. But I will keep a sharp watch, and I will call on the police of New York to help me.

"We in Nicaragua are much concerned over the attitude of the United States regarding this revolution. There is fear that the rebels may be recognized by this government, and if that is done it would be a most unfortunate thing. American interests in Nicaragua have nothing to gain by it, and it would be a violation of international law. Gen. Zelaya has just won a victory over Estrada, and I am sure the revolution is nearing an end."

NAVY SCUTTLED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Passengers arriving on the steamer Parisimina, from British Honduras, today told of the scuttling of the Honduran gunboat Tatumbia, and the murder of eighteen of her crew, after she had overhauled a British steamer engaged in smuggling between Jamaica and Honduras.

Six days ago, the Tatumbia overhauled the smuggler fifty miles out of Puerto Cortes and twenty of the gunboat's crew boarded her. The smuggler crew surrendered, and the smuggler captain told Capt. Zelella that there was plenty of good rum in her hold.

Zelella ordered a celebration. The prisoners feigned intoxication, and when the gunboat's crew succumbed to the rum, they were flung overboard. The smugglers crew scuttled the gunboat and then escaped.

Two of the sailors who were flung overboard reached one of the floating lifeboats of the sunken Honduran vessel, and reached Puerto Cortes with the story of the wholesale murder.

The scuttling of the Tatumbia deprives Honduras of her navy.

William Robinson, Editor and Author, May Be Next Governor of New Mexico.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ROSWELL (N. M.) Nov. 6.—William Robinson of Roswell, editor and author, today was offered the position of Governor of New Mexico to succeed Gov. Curry, according to a report current tonight.

The report was later confirmed by Mr. Robinson, who is being urged by his friends to accept.

Mr. Robinson is editor of the Roswell Register-Tribune, a well-known magazine writer and author of "Impressions of a Tenderfoot."

He has been prominently connected with political affairs of New Mexico for a number of years.

Mr. Robinson declined to indicate what his decision will be.

While Doctors and Nurses Stand Helpless Hospital Employee Struggles With Insane Patient.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER, Nov. 6.—While doctors, nurses and patients breathlessly looked on, William S. Southerner, driver of the County Hospital ambulance, struggled desperately for fifteen minutes with Norah Wheeler, an insane patient, on the narrow ledge at the top of the roof of the insane ward of the hospital today.

A dozen times it seemed as if the maniac and the man struggling to keep her from certain death would fall to the ground fifty feet below, but finally the woman's strength gave way, and Southerner, bleeding, and his clothing almost torn from him, dragged her to safety.

Mrs. Wheeler, a powerful woman, 28 years of age, escaped from the woman's ward and, to elude imaginary enemies, climbed to the roof of the building, thence to the narrow ledge. Her screams attracted the attention of the hospital attachés, and Southerner at once made for the roof.

He caught the woman just as she was about to jump

Youth Asks One Over Wire to Marry Him and There Are Others "on the Line."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FAIRFAX (Mo.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Henry Winston, a prosperous young farmer residing five miles from here, is experiencing all the trouble and annoyance that comes from being engaged at one and the same time to marry twelve young women. He doesn't know which he is to marry, because he doesn't know to which he first became engaged. The Winstons and Simpsons are on a party telephone line having fifteen subscribers, twelve of whom have marriageable daughters. The other day Winston rang up the Simpson house and asked for Miss Lorena Simpson. At the same time eleven other young women took up their receivers and listened. When Winston, after some preliminary conversation, asked Miss Simpson to marry him they all replied in the affirmative. Now Winston is wondering which young woman he is engaged to.

Fifty Thousand Persons Cheer Drivers as They Speed Away.

BEAUMONT, Nov. 7.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A big red car, believed to be Fenner's, passed through here at 12:58 o'clock and the operator at Banning reported it as passing there at 1:13 o'clock this morning. Operators report that between stations six and one-half miles apart the leading car covered the distances in seven minutes flat.

John Burr, former Sheriff of Los Angeles county, was perhaps fatally injured, and three other persons were severely bruised when a Columbia touring car driven by Fred L. Boruff swerved against a fire plug and crashed into a crowd of persons standing in Downey avenue, watching the Phoenix automobile racers go by, about 10:40 o'clock last night.

Outside of this accident the race was started successfully and fifty thousand persons cheered the drivers as they drove through the city, out past Eastlake Park, and thence east to far-away Phoenix, which they are expected to reach Monday near noon, after passing tonight at the control across the Colorado River, at Ehrenburg.

All the cars got away without mishap, and from in front of the Hollenbeck Hotel at Second and Spring streets, north to Main, and out Main to Eastlake Park and the city limits great crowds lined the streets.

The first accident to a car was reported from San Bernardino when the Pennsylvania sheared a pin on the brake rod ten miles west of that town. The car stopped at a San Bernardino garage and wired up the break. The car was sent away again at 1:07.

The Isotta-Fraschini was the first to arrive at the Gate City, making the run in 1h. 52m. The Elmore took 2h. 4m. to make the same distance. Then came a mix-up in scoring, as the Pennsylvania failed to appear. After that, cars kept going through at intervals for two hours.

There was no interference from the police of San Bernardino, and some of the cars tore through the streets at fifty miles an hour, though most of them kept down to thirty-five. Third street of San Bernardino was lined with people and special officers were stationed along the route.

It was hard to distinguish the numbers on some of the cars and there were several errors in checking, which took some time to straighten out.

The Studebaker swashed a radiator and put into a garage at San Bernardino and then went on. The Columbia also went into garage. It sustained a broken frame just west of town.

STEER INTO HYDRANT.

TOURING CAR DEMOLISHED.

Attempting to dodge a cloud of dust and gasoline fumes, which enveloped a car in the Phoenix road race, four men were hurled twenty feet, and the automobile in which they were riding was demolished when they hit a fire plug at Downey avenue and Eastlake, last night.

John Burr of San Fernando, former Sheriff of Los Angeles county, and a well-known Republican politician, received injuries which may prove fatal. He was found to have a basal fracture of the skull, internal injuries and contusions and bruises, which make his recovery doubtful.

E. O. Hanson, a real estate man from Hollywood, received serious cuts and bruises. He will recover. Clifford Judy, a grocer of San Fernando, sustained cuts and internal injuries. His wounds are not dangerous. Fred L. Boruff, manager of the Porter ranch, who was driving the car, was uninjured.

The car in which the party was riding was going at a high rate of speed when it reached Downey avenue and Eastlake, going east. The driver was suddenly startled by a cry of "Look out for No. 3!" He swerved his car just in time to permit a car to pass, but as he turned, the big machine which he was steering, skidded and bounded forty feet into a fire plug on the corner. The shock was terrific.

MONETARY.

REMEDY IS SOUGHT.

Reform of Currency Unsettled.

Senator Aldrich Says Plan Will Be Adopted After Long Study.

Makes Earnest Appeal for Counsel and Assistance in Work.

Surprises Chicagoans by Not Advocating Central Bank.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island tonight in an address before the Chicago Commercial Club, delivered the first of a series of speeches which he is to make throughout the Middle West on the subject of currency reform.

Senator Aldrich is chairman of the commission appointed by Congress to make a comprehensive study of a monetary system for the United States.

To those who expected Senator Aldrich to use the occasion for the promulgation of the central bank project or any other plan of national finance, his speech must have been in the nature of a surprise. He declared at the outset, "that the question of a definite plan for reforming existing conditions has not yet been taken up by the commission," and added that no plan would be adopted "until after an opportunity had been afforded for the most careful and exhaustive study of all the conditions that surround the problem."

APPEALS FOR COUNSEL.

He said he had accepted the present occasion as an opportunity to make an earnest appeal to you as representative men of an important section, to give to the commission the advantage of your valuable counsel and coöperation in securing the adoption of a satisfactory remedial plan, one that will surely conserve and promote the vital interests of all the people of this great nation."

He called upon Chicago business men, and through them upon the business men of the country, to feel their own responsibility, individually and collectively, for the satisfactory outcome of the work.

"It is my purpose tonight to call the attention of the bankers and business men of Chicago to some of the more salient features of the work of the National Monetary Commission. The question submitted to it is so vast and involves so many collateral issues that my statement must necessarily be fragmentary and incomplete.

FULL INFORMATION SOON.

"We expect to be able to give to the public within a comparatively short time the fullest information, with reference to the experience and practical methods of other countries and of our own.

"When this record has been submitted and time has been given to analyze it fully, we shall, before reaching any decision, ask representatives of business interests throughout the country for an opinion as to what, if any, portion of it is pertinent and valuable in the formulation of a plan for the United States.

"In other countries wherever great monetary systems have been constructed or essentially modified, men whose experience and research had given their opinions special value have been called upon for advice and assistance. Our commission will follow this wise precedent. Any plan to be successful must represent the consensus of intelligent opinion of our common country.

TASK OF COMMISSION.

"The task of the commission is not only important but is surrounded by many difficulties. We have first to consider the wants of 90,000,000 of people; then the requirements of 25,000 banks (18,000 state, 7000 national), with differing interests; some with the right of note issue, all jealous of their own rights, and all naturally conservative as to innovations, and all unwilling to accept changes that are not plainly along the line of acknowledged improvement.

"The problem is too serious to be passed upon lightly. Too many great interests are involved for it touches at too many vital points in the economic life of the United States and its future development. Any radical changes must become operative only from time to time, so as not to disturb these conditions and relations.

"Controversies over note issues and banking methods are as ancient as banks. To secure satisfactory results it is evident that we must all lay aside our prejudices, our preconceived notions, perhaps our predisposition to advocate certain methods, but with a fixed determination finally to agree upon some plan that will fairly present the combined wisdom of all."

Mr. Aldrich said that he regarded an efficient organization of the credit and banking system of the country as much more important than the question of note issue.

"I am aware," he said, "that in other countries in the past, notably during the last half of the eighteenth century and the first half of the nineteenth, the question of note issues—that is to say, who should have the right to issue bank notes, upon what conditions they should be issued, what kind of security should be required—furnished the subject of most of the monetary discussions of the time.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

"In these countries with a single exception at the present time all thoughtful men look on the proper manner and character of note issue as no longer an open question or one of paramount importance. The conclusion has been reached that bank note issues should be made under governmental control, or at least subject to strict governmental restrictions, and this can only be successfully done through one central bank of issue.

"Our existing system of bank note issue is equally unsatisfactory to those who believe that all banks should have a right to issue notes to circulate as money as freely as they open credit on their books, and that no evil results can follow a legislative grant of this right, and to those who are not satisfied to have the volume of note issues dependent upon the amount of government bonds available rather than upon the demands of trade. It was the intention of the framers of the legislation of 1908 to furnish an emergency remedy that should continue only until some permanent policy could be agreed upon."

The speaker briefly referred to the disastrous results that followed the financial crisis of 1907, and the conviction that with a better monetary system its widespread consequences could have been avoided.

SAFEGUARDS POSSIBLE.

"I am, of course, aware," he continued, "that with the sanguine nature of the American people whose nervous energy is not always confined by limits of prudence, we are certain to have recurring periods of overspeculation and of abnormal inflation of values. But I am sure that it is quite possible by confining the effects to the transgressors and their immediate financial supporters, to save the business and the great financial interests of the country from disastrous suspensions of banks and a general destruction of credit.

WHERE POWER LIES.

The Senator said the power of the great banks of Europe to prevent panics is largely in the inherent strength of the institutions and in the unquestioned confidence of all classes in their ability successfully to take care of any situation.

Mr. Aldrich continued:

"One of the most important questions with which the commission has to deal was as to whether weight should be given the fact that other countries have with unanimity adopted certain policies with reference to banking and monetary affairs and how far this uniformity of experience and action should be influential in the preparation of a plan for our country. We cannot afford to ignore foreign experience.

"We are not able at this time to put into definite form the character of a credit organization we think desirable for the United States, but we can agree upon certain matters and provisions that must be guarded against or eliminated from any possible scheme.

"First—It would be impossible to establish any credit organizations that would interfere with or control the existing banks, or whose resources or credit could be used for speculative purposes; or that could possibly be dominated by the financial men or [illegible] in one section of the country. [illegible] have many financial centers [illegible] importance in the United [illegible] between whom natural rivalry [illegible] and whatever form our organization might take it is necessary to guard against giving to one banking community any advantage over another.

TO LEARN FROM OTHERS.

"Second—It is of equal, if not greater importance to adopt some of the more important features or systems that have been successful in other countries. I have too much confidence in the inherent good judgment and intelligence of our countrymen to believe that the dead political issues of three-quarters of a century ago could be revived, or that the ghost of Andrew Jackson could be summoned to prevent a consummation that would be advantageous to all.

"Third—Whatever may be the advantages of a system of branch banking in other countries, I do not think it is possible to adapt it to existing conditions in the United States."

Mr. Aldrich said that as soon as the preliminary studies and conferences could be had the commission would begin preparing a plan.

It was evident that the commission would not be able to present a plan at the coming session of Congress, but he said it might be able to make a report at the beginning of the third session of the present congress.

HARRIMAN PLAN.

EIGHTY-FIVE MILLIONS WILL BE SPENT IN YEAR ON ONE SYSTEM.

Gigantic Improvement Work on New York Central Lines Means Greatest Expenditure Ever Made for a Single Project in Railroad Work in Twelve Months. Fifteen Millions for Lake Shore.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The death of Edward H. Harriman is to have no effect upon the extensive improvement plans which he inaugurated for the New York Central lines, and the task of rebuilding a large portion of the system lines is to be carried to completion with vigor.

In the accomplishment of this task there is to be expended during the coming year a total of $85,000,000, the largest sum ever spent on a single project in twelve months, which will go far toward making the New York Central lines capable of handling as large a volume of tonnage as the Pennsylvania and handle it as expeditiously.

When William Newman was taken from the presidency of the New York Central lines and W. C. Brown was put at their head through the suggestion of the late Edward H. Harriman, it was with the understanding that the new president would be given a free hand by the board in bringing the system lines up to the standard of physical perfection that pertains on the Union Pacific.

Harriman is said to have stated that to do this would take at least $100,000,000 and the directors were inclined to balk at first. Arguments of increased tonnage moved at less cost were used and finally prevailed. Mr. Brown was eager to undertake the task provided he was assured a sufficient amount of money. His plans were prepared and they called for an expenditure of $85,000,000 the first year. Again the board was inclined to balk but Harriman won it over in his usual masterful fashion and the expenditure was authorized.

Of the great sum to be expended fully $15,000,000 is to be poured into the Lake Shore, which for years had the reputation of being the best railroad physically in the United States. Its ballast, however, was sand and gravel, which has the twin faults of dust and instability. The great increase in the weight of locomotives and the size of cars, the great increase in the speed of passenger trains proved too great a strain on gravel ballast. The result was that the cost of maintenance on the Lake Shore became too great and there is to be a change to rock ballast. Fully 175 miles of new third and fourth track are to be built, 35,000 tons of new heavy steel rails are to be laid and 300 miles of crushed stone ballast put in. Over 5000 freight cars, fifty new passenger engines and seventy-five new freight engines are to be provided, tracks are to be elevated in Chicago and new ore docks built at Ashtabula. Fully $3,000,000 is to be spent on the Short Line, $1,000,000 in completing the Lake Erie and Pittsburgh. Details of the expenditures which are to be made on the eastern end of the system have not been made public.

FEAR REBUFF FOR KING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Is King Edward about to meet the first rebuff of his reign? This is the question asked by those who know the facts of the King's recent intervention in the budget struggle in favor of a compromise and the avoidance of a general election. The matter acquires acute interest from the passage of the budget Thursday night in the House of Commons, by an overwhelming majority.

The bill now goes to the House of Lords, which will have an opportunity to act upon or reject the monarch's advice. It will be remembered that the story of the King's unusual course in this case reached the correspondent of the Los Angeles Times from a Tory source some weeks ago. Now it is published in London in the Nation, a political weekly, with which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd-George, is closely identified, and to which he contributes this week a long leading article, triple-leaded and bearing his name.

"The House of Lords," says the Nation, "has some time yet in which to think the matter over, but we doubt whether the delay will prevent it from being led by the brewers and protectionists in throwing out the bill, disregarding all counsels, however, exalted, and flouting Lord Lansdowne. The Liberal party must be prepared for immediate and vital action. The storm is gathering.

"The lords intend to destroy the budget, and with it the House of Commons' age-long authority in finance. The day this act is consummated the House of Lords becomes superior in effect to the throne, and gets the power to dismiss ministries and dictate the course of the national policy. The monarchy will have been enfeebled, if not repelled by the rejection of its counsels.

"Every power of the constitution seems threatened with a serious shock."

There is little doubt that the editor of the Nation got his information from David Lloyd-George as to the King's action. The argument of the editor as to the disastrous effects likely to ensue to the hereditary institutions of England sounds remarkably like the argument used by the King, in his conferences with the leaders of the two great parties.

JAMES G. CLARK DEAD.

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James G. Clark, a distinguished Confederate veteran and prominent business man here for forty years, died last night leaving a family scattered well over the country. His second wife survives as well as a sister, Mrs. J. D. Bethune of Los Angeles, and a nephew, Frank Bethune, this city. When the war broke out Mr. Clark enlisted at Harper's Ferry with the Confederates and afterward was attached to Stonewall Jackson's brigade. He was a member of many New Orleans carnival organizations.

PRESIDENT WELCOMED TO HIS SOUTH CAROLINA HOME.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

AUGUSTA (Ga.) Nov. 6.—After spending the entire evening in historic old Columbia, S. C., with its many reminders of the Civil War, President Taft arrived in Augusta at 8:30 o'clock tonight, to rest until Monday.

The President often speaks of Augusta as "home," and his reception here tonight was in the nature of a home-coming celebration.

Augusta people are proud to claim him as their own, and hence the name of "Taft, William H., President of the United States," appears in the current city directory.

Tomorrow the President will attend services at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Episcopalian; will lunch with Landon A. Thomas and dine quietly at the Cummings home.

Monday morning the President will play golf on the links of the Country Club. At noon, or shortly thereafter, he will speak at the opening of the Georgia-Carolina Fair, leaving Augusta at 2:30 o'clock p.m. for Florence, S. C. The President will spend all day Tuesday in Wilmington, S. C., and all day Wednesday in Richmond, Va., reaching Washington at 8:35 o'clock Wednesday night.

VISITS STATE CAPITAL.

The President's afternoon in Columbia was filled with interest. He was entertained at luncheon in the House of Representatives at the State capital, and remarked that the State of South Carolina was the first to greet him within the walls of its capitol.

The only other President ever to visit Columbia was Washington.

During a long automobile ride the President was taken past the Baptist Church, where the secession convention assembled. The President also saw the palatial old Preston mansion, in which Gen. Sherman established his headquarters. He made a brief address to the students of the University of South Carolina on the campus. The President also made a speech at the State fair grounds.

TILLMAN DISAPPEARS.

Senator Tillman, however, disappeared as soon as the party alighted at the State capitol. He had been in controversy with those in charge of the luncheon arrangements and had declined an invitation, that carried with it an assessment for $10. Senator Tillman said he thought that was a horrible example for South Carolina hospitality, and that the city should bear the expense of all invited guests.

In his speech at the State Capitol, President Taft said:

"My friends, I am not inspired today, much, because I feel so much more than I can say. There is something about South Carolina and her traditions as I look into the faces of her great men, and think what she has done and the part she has played in all the great historical crises of this country, that makes me take this reception from you with a feeling that I am honored far beyond my deserts."

In his fair grounds speech at Columbia President Taft said:

"One must be blind indeed to the progress of this country and to the proper understanding of real advance in civilization and in the arts of peace, who does not realize the supreme importance of agriculture and the immense strides that have taken place in its cultivation throughout the country during the last decade."

REMEMBERS BIRTHPLACE.

Part of Julius Freidman Estate Sent Back to Mitau, Russia, for Indigent Poor.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—In the partial distribution of the estate of Julius Freidman, who died in this city eight years ago, leaving property valued at $400,000, Judge Graham ordered today that $50,000 be sent to the burgomaster of Mitau, Russia; to be distributed among the indigent poor of that town. Mitau was the birthplace of Freidman, who came to this country when a youth.

Since Freidman's death, his estate has increased to $650,000. With the exception of the Mitau bequest and $18,000 left to local charities, the property of the dead man was left intestate. Although it was believed at the time of his death that he had no living relaeives, 100 claimants have appeared.

These have been weeded out until only five are left who are considered to have legitimate claims.

Judge Graham estimates that the estate will be worth $1,000,000 before the final distribution is made.

WARNS NEVADA TO BE ALERT.

SENATOR TELLS THE PEOPLE TO GUARD THEIR RIGHTS.

Newlands in Speech Before Senatorial Committee on Irrigation, Hints That State's Interests in Water Power Project Are in Danger. Advises Watching Contract.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

RENO (Nev.) Nov. 6.—United States Senator Newlands, in an address last night, before the Senatorial committee on irrigation, warned the people of Nevada to be on the alert to see that their rights as consumers-to-be of electrical power were not infringed as a result of the contract under consideration by the President between the Hammon Waterpower people and the government, affecting Lake Tahoe and the waters of Nevada.

Senator Newlands, after reverting to the fact that the west had one-third of the representation of the senate, and, with Arizona and New Mexico admitted, would have even more and without partisanship could have a predominating influence on legislation affecting the west, turned his attention to reclamation and conservation, which he said were allied.

He said the reclamation act was the first blow at the spoils system of division of government money, and that the conservation policy of the government was directed to keep the lands, waters, mines and forests beyond the power of monopoly.

While he did not think it desirable for the government to go into the waterpower business, Senator Newlands stated that a restriction could be imposed by the government in whatever grant was made, whereby the rights of the people and safety from monopolistic control would be assured, and if the nation failed in this it would be incumbent upon the State to look about for protection.

Without discussing the precedence entailed, he stated that the people of Nevada had a right to secure the use of waterpower or electricity as a derivative at a reasonable charge.

Senator Newlands concluded with the surmise that it might be best to affirm the Hammon contract now before the president, but if it was to be affirmed a tribunal sitting as a public service commission should, under the sanction of both state and national governments, take in hand the matter of regulating charges and preserving the rights of the people.

DISOBEYS MANDATE.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY KICKS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

QUINCY, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At a meeting in September the Supervisors instructed Dist.-Atty. M. S. Kerr to confer with the Attorney-General and get an opinion from that official as to the legality of the election on the saloon question in August. This action was taken as a result of a refusal by the County Clerk and Auditor to audit warrants for pay of the election officers, holding that the election was illegal, having been held on a Saturday.

The District Attorney declined, in a written communication presented to the Supervisors at their last seassion, to ask the Attorney-General for an opinion on the question, on the grounds that his own opinion should be sufficient. The question involved is whether it is legal to hold an election on Saturday, since the Legislature made Saturday afternoon a judicial holiday.

MOTHER PLEADS FOR SON.

GOVERNOR GIVES NO PROMISE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The granting of the appeal of Martha Scott of Denver for clemency for her son, Virgil Canole, a former marine in the United States navy, now a convict under five years' sentence at San Quentin penitentiary, rests with Gov. Gillett.

Mrs. Scott today made an earnest plea for her son. Her plea was supplemented by another from Carroll Cook of San Francisco, who was retained by the grieving woman.

The Governor promised no relief. It is almost certain he will give none. His policy is not to give pardons except in cases of proven innocence. In any event, he would not give a pardon until the prisoner has shown good behavior on parole.

Canole's crime consisted in beating an officer, who was arresting two of his companions in the redlight district of Vallejo.

TO ATTACK LAW.

CORPORATION TO FILE WRIT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lawyers for the Merced River Electric Company have notified Secretary of State Curry they will attack the rule of law governing the corporations of the State, which prevents them from creating a bonded indebtedness greater than the initial subscription of stock.

The attack will be through a writ of mandate to the Supreme Court next week. The suit will involve question of whether the Secretary of State can be compelled to file incorporation papers that do not fulfill requirements of the law. The Secretary of State and Attorney-General will resist the suit.

The Merced River Electric Company is backed by men of responsibility, but if it wins its convention it will open up ahe way for countless wildcat schemes in California, it is claimed. It is capitalized for $1,500,000, but its actual scubscribed stock amounts to $2500. It wants to bond itself for an amount equal to its whole capital.

AS HUSBAND IS FREED.

MRS. HORACE G. M'KINLEY IS POISONED BY PTOMAINE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On the eve of her husband's discharge from the County Jail, after serving two years for complicity in land frauds, Mrs. Horace G. McKinley, formerly Miss Marie Ware, was stricken with ptomaine poisoning and for several hours lay in death's shadow. She is still seriously ill at her hotel.

"My wife and I had planned to leave at once for Borneo, where I had arranged to engage in the teakwood business, and where we purposed to begin life anew," said McKinley tonight. "But our ill luck seems not to have ended. Mrs. McKinley is now out of danger, and we will go as soon as she is able to travel."

McKinley, with S. A. D. Puter, Marie Ware and others, conspired to defraud the government of timber lands. They operated on an extensive scale. McKinley fled to China, where he was captured and brought back. He testified against the late Senator Mitchell and other "higher ups," and was given but light punishment in consideration of his services to the prosecution. He was sentenced to pay a fine in addition to his imprisonment, but escaped this by taking the pauper oath.

McKinley denied that he tried to escape serving his sentence. He denied the story that he took "Little Egypt," the dancer, with him, and continued that he was the peg upon which many untrue sensational stories had been hung.

M'KINLEY FREED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Horace G. McKinley, convicted of defrauding the government of public lands several years ago, was released from the Multnomah County Jail today. McKinley was convicted with a number of others and almost immediately fled the country, going to the Orient. He was captured by detectives, but escaped them, going into Manchuria, where he was again captured and brought to this city. He was sentenced to serve two years in the Multnomah County Jail, and to pay a fine of $7500. McKinley took the pauper oath, and was relieved from payment of the fine.

FIND MINER'S BODY.

HIS BABY WINS PRIZE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 6.—Coincident with the recovery of the body of W. K. Baertsch, a miner who was killed while at work in the Combination mine, the seven-weeks'-old baby of the dead workman was awarded first prize at a local baby show. The accident occurred September 27, a few days after the child was born. Fellow workmen have been employed in three shifts daily since the disaster trying to reach the body.

HOT IS "PLUG UGLY" RUSH.

Valiantly Seniors Defend the Stairs, Sweeping Juniors Back Into the Stanford Quadrangle.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The annual "plug-ugly" rush between the juniors and seniors last night was the fiercest battle that has ever been waged by Stanford upper classmen. Thirty men, mostly juniors, were knocked out during the fight and had to be carried from the field of action. No one was seriously injured.

For an hour the juniors charged against a solid phalanx of seniors massed at the top of the stairs on the east side of the quadrangle, and for the first time since the rush was instituted the juniors failed to break through, and were defeated. Time and time again the seniors swept the juniors off the steps. Smothered curses and the merry thud of fists swatting tall plug hats were added to the usual uproar of a "rough-house."

Several students were stripped of almost all their clothes and had to retire from the rush. The "plug-ugly" show was given on the baseball diamond. When the curtain rose the actors were greeted with a volley of eggs, vegetables and firecrackers, but they did not desert the stage. The juniors who were kidnaped were rescued yesterday, and the seniors who took them were captured. The senior class threatened to prevent the production of the show unless their men were produced, and just before the time set for the burlesque, the juniors brought them back.

HIS SECRET OUT.

BIGAMIST CONFESSES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WOODLAND, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Disptach.] District Attorney Anderson has received a letter from County Attorney Thomas J. Walker, of Butte City, who alleges that on Nov. 1, 1906, William S. Morton was married in that city to Mrs. Kate Hess, and that Morton was never divorced from Mrs. Hess but recently married a woman named Miss Sarah Bray of Woodland. The County Attorney says Morton's second wife lives in Butte and he thinks Morton should be prosecuted for bigamy.

Morton, when confronted with this letter, admitted its truth, but claimed he had diligently searched by letter for his former wife and believed her dead. He had been married before but his first wife died. His third wife is too sick to be told of this affair. Morton is the same man whose young son was kidnapped in the Grand Central Depot in Chicago recently. He believes the sister of his first wife kidnaped the boy, and that she is also responsible for his second wife's appearance. He says his sons will inherit property near Toronto worth $10,000 when they are of age.

LOVES TEACHER, SAYS WIFE.

Reputed Son of Millionaire Arrested With Woman for Whom He Deserted Family.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arthur J. Schureman, sales manager for a lumber company here and reputed son of a Chicago millionaire merchant was arrested here today on a charge of desertion preferred by his wife.

With Schureman was arrested also Miss Vivian Groves, a pretty young woman, who, so Mrs. Schureman alleges, eloped with Schureman from Dallas, Tex., and has lived with him for a year past.

According to Mrs. Schureman she and her husband lived happily with their two children at Dallas up to two years ago when Schureman met Miss Groves, who was teaching in the high school. The acquaintance between the husband and the teacher ripened into something more serious. When the school was closed in June, she and Schureman unceremoniously left the city, the wife alleges.

Mrs. Schureman and her children were deserted. After a short investigation she discovered the two people had left the city together, and they were traced throughout the East, and one year later came to Portland, the wife and children taking up their residence here the past year.

After several attempts of Mrs. Schureman to have her husband return to her, which he positively refused, saying that he cared more for the high school teacher, the wife made complaint against the two. She says they have been living at the St. Francis Hotel in connecting rooms. Both deny that there is anything wrong in their relations.

REPAIR MISCHIEF.

PUNISH YOUNG VANDALS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

M'MINNVILLE (Or.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twenty boys who had committed various acts of vandalism on Halloween about the streets of this town, put in today repairing, under directions of a police officer, the mischief they had wrought.

The boys were arrested and tried yesterday before City Recorder Lancefield. All were repentant and when the recorder sentenced them to restore what they had done, with the alternative of going to jail, they quickly chose the lesser evil.

All through today the youngsters labored, relaying sidewalks, resetting missed wheels to vehicles, restoring stolen gates and repairing fences and buildings, Policeman Howell, directing the work. By night practically all Halloween devastation had been effaced.

YOUNG WESTCOTT QUITS.

Berkeley Student Gives Up Wooing of Billie Burke and Is Going Back to Work.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Persuaded by his mother, Leo B. Westcott, Berkeley student and reputed worshiper at the shrine of the actress, Billie Burke, abandoned his projected trip to Seattle and Spokane, and left today on the Shasta limited for his California home. With him went his stepfather and his mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hancock of Oakland.

To the last of his stay in Portland young Westcott was seen occasionally in company of Miss Burke and Miss Barrett, her niece. But after the arrival of his parents on the scene it was observed that the young ladies seemed to be keeping out of the youth's way much of the time.

As, for instance, yesterday, when Miss Burke remarked that she intended to go autoing, young Westcott was not permitted to furnish the auto nor to accompany the young women, although he earnestly besought them. When he ordered an elaborate luncheon for the whole party at the hotel, he was chided by Miss Burke, who also told him he must not do so again. Between Miss Burke and Mrs. Hancock there seemed an excellent understanding.

"We have decided to go home, that is all," said Mrs. Hancock tonight.

"He is a nice boy, but we are only friends," said Miss Burke. "Why shouldn't he go home?"

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Missing Man Found Dead.

SAN JOSE, Nov. 6.—Noah Ball, aged 30, unmarried, who left his parents' home near this city three weeks ago, and had not been heard from since, was found dead this morning in a local lodging-house, apparently from natural causes. An inquest is being held.

Rible Not Guilty.

SAN JOSE, Nov. 6.—The jury in the case of T. R. Rible, on trial for the shooting of F. H. McCleave, in Palo Alto, on June 7 last, after being out twenty-four hours, brought in a verdict today of not guilty.

Fire Chief Would Retire.

SACRAMENIO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Henry A Guthrie, chief of the local fire department, the second oldest fire head in California, announced today that he intends to apply to the City Trustees for retirement on a pension. He entered the service of fighting fires when 17 years old. That was in 1869, and as soon as the local department was organized he went on up the latter until he was made Chief.

Rancher Killed.

BERKELEY, Nov. 6.—H. W. Newman, a well known rancher of Orinda Park, was thrown from his wagon and killed today by the sudden staring of his horses.

Dies on Train.

GLENDALE (Or.) Nov. 6.—Mrs. Jennie Whittaker of No. 444 East Nineteenth street, Oakland, Cal., died on a Southern Pacific train, near Riddle today. The body was brought to this place and awaits the arrival of the Coroner. The cause of death has not been determined. Mrs. Whittaker was on her way to Oakland from Seattle.

Forest fires are raging in many parts of the Kentucky mountains. Already vast areas of timber have been denuded. The town of Berea was threatened yesterday, but hundreds of men subdued the flames.

Fermentation and Flatulence Prevented

In the Stomach by Charcoal, the Great Absorbent, Anti-Fermentative, and Deodorant.

Some years ago Dr. Belloc, a retired surgeon of the French army, turned his attention to charcoal as a remedy for dyspepsia, fermentation and flatulence, or gas in the stomach or intestines. He was himself a sufferer from these symptoms, and thus had an opportunity of testing personally its therapeutic action.

He decided after many tests that charcoal made of willow wood was by far the best. He found that charcoal made of other woods caused a disagreeable taste in the mouth—even painful excoriations of the mucous membrane, as well as thirst, and a pinching sensation in the stomach; but not one of these symptoms ever occurred when willow charcoal was employed.

He was in the habit of prescribing from two to six teaspoonfuls for his patients, but he himself frequently took as much as 500 grammes, or more than fifteen ounces per day. There is really no such thing as taking too much charcoal. An excess cannot be taken, for the reason that the more you take the better it is for you, as it is entirely harmless, and through its use your system will be completely cleansed of all its impurities, the fermentation of food and the formation of gas in the stomach prevented and the absorption of toxic products or poisonous materials into the blood from the stomach and intestines estopped.

When a regular physician took as much as fifteen ounces of charcoal daily, its harmlessness and beneficial effects as an absorbent, deodorant, germ-destroyer and dyspepsia cure should be apparent to all.

The Academie Nationale de Medicine of Paris reported very favorably on a memoir which Dr. Belloc published on the use of charcoal, and in France it soon became a favorite remedy. Its reputation spread to this country and now we find charcoal lozenges extensively sold, prescribed and employed as dyspepsia remedies. Dr. Belloc's charcoal was administered to his patients in the form of a powder stirred up in water, which was very disagreeable to the taste, and its efficacy was far less than in the form of a lozenge.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are a great and happy improvement upon this form of administering charcoal. They are made of the best willow charcoal, freshly prepared, and rendered exceedingly palatable by the addition of pure honey, which gives them a taste that is in strong contrast to that of ordinary powdered charcoal. Nothing could be more efficacious in its effects than charcoal given in this desirable form. Two or three of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges taken after meals are sufficient to give complete relief. Go to your druggist and buy a box, but insist on having Stuart's, as there are many worthless imitations on the market, not made of willow wood, but of poplar, boxwood, dogwood, etc., which are not good for the system. For sale everywhere, 25 cents per box. Sample box will be sent free by mail upon request. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Family Overjoyed When Terrible Life-Destroying Cough Ceased

After Suffering Horrors With Throat and Lung Trouble the Sister of Henry Lena is now Well

New Orleans, La., June 20, '09.

Dear Sir — What I consider one of the greatest demonstrations in the history of medicine was performed some time ago.

My sister contracted a case of fever, just what kind of fever I do not know, for our doctor did not tell us. After the raging fever was over and his visits ceased, the doctor assured us that my sister had developed tuberculosis. This was indeed the last straw.

A cough which she developed with the fever became violent; so violent that we were unable to secure any sleep. We then asked our doctor, an eminent physician of this city, if he could give us something to remove the cough, and he told us he would try.

But I studied my sister's case, and concluded that the case was not tuberculosis, but a very bad case of bronchitis.

Well, the cough went from bad to worse; and, really, the future was one to be looked forth to with awe.

At last I persuaded my sister to use Hyomei — after trying various high-class patent medicines.

Fancy the joy we were all confronted with, that after the first bottle the cough had slackened and she could sleep at night, and after the second the cough was completely gone.

My folks were all vastly surprised, but I had foreseen the work of Hyomei, for I had already tested it before and knew through experience that its effects were miraculous.

I advise all people who are suffering from consumption, catarrh, bronchitis, etc., to resort to Hyomei, for I have found that it is the only medicine that can bring instant relief and final cure.

My sister is now well after being pronounced a person of tuberculosis, and is never without the inhaler, although she could do without it.

For myself, I have found that Hyomei cured a cold of mine with which I could not hear, smell nor taste, in two days.

You can use this letter of recommendation if you please. Yours truly, Henry Lena, 2903 St. Ann street.

Druggists sell Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me,) the remedy that made the above marvelous cure. No stomach dosing with Hyomei, no sprays, douches or atomizers. You breathe in this pleasant antiseptic air through a little hard rubber inhaler, and relief from catarrh, coughs, colds and bronchitis comes in five minutes. Complete outfit, including inhaler and simple instructions, costs but $1.00, and extra bottles, if afterward needed, cost 50 cents. Sold by leading druggists everywhere, who guarantee it to cure or money back.

I was almost crazy with pain, sent for the doctor and he said I had stone in the kidney and that I would have to be operated on or I would surely die. I sent for another doctor. He came and examined me, and said my kidneys were badly inflamed but he thought he could give me relief, and after I had taken his medicine without good results, a friend told me of your Safe Cure. I bought a bottle, and after taking a few doses of it I felt it was doing me good, and I am taking the third bottle now. I am proud to state that I am almost clear of my trouble, feel like a new man, am back at my work again, and I owe it to your wonderful medicine.

DECIDES COUPLER CASE.

COMPANY IS UPHELD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Nov. 6.—The Supreme Court today decided the Wichita car coupler case. The government was interested, and was represented by a special Assistant Attorney-General, as it involved the operation of the Federal law compelling railroads to use automatic couplers.

A passenger was injured because of a defective coupler on a Missouri Pacific train, and the lower court decided for the railroad company, on the ground that the road was not compelled to keep the couplers in repair. The Supreme Court upheld the lower court. The case will be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

MORE CARS ORDERED.

PENNSYLVANIA NEEDS THEM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 26.—More car orders are soon to be placed by the Pennsylvania railroad company for the lines west. Inquiries sent out last week have come to the car building companies for five thousand new steel cars of the standard type 100,000 pounds capacity for delivery next year. This inquiry is in addition to the 10,000 cars of the "battleship" type, on which car companies are bidding. Thus in all the Pennsylvania company now has under consideration a total of 15,000 steel cars for 1910 delivery, valued at about $18,000,000.

In connection with the new five thousand car order it was said yesterday that the railroad is asking for specifications that include steel wheels for that lot of cars. The big order for "battleship" cars with a carrying capacity of seventy-seven tons each also will include all steel wheels, as it is the use of these wheels that makes the larger cars possible. The railroad officials stated yesterday that all told the Pennsylvania probably would be in the market for 120,000 steel wheels during 1910 for freight cars alone.

NEW ORLEANS KICKS.

RATES ON BEANS DISPLEASE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Petitions to the Interstate Commerce Commission, asking an equitable adjustment of rates on beans from California points to New Orleans and Louisiana, and charging the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and unwarranted and unjust discrimination against this center, will be filed by the Board of Trade just as soon as the necessary papers and documents can be drawn up.

This important announcement was made following a meeting of the local bean handlers and attracted much attention. It means a determined fight for an adjustment of rates on beans that will put this center on a parity with Texas and other competing territory. January 1, 1909 the rate on shipments of beans from California terminals to all points which has taken a rate of 75 cents was advanced to 85 cents. This took in Texas and Oklahoma as well as Louisiana.

In May the old 75 cent rate was restored to points in Texas and Oklahoma, but the tariff to New Orleans and Louisiana points remained at 85 cents. Louisiana bean dealers complained that the difference constituted a discrimination against New Orleans in favor of Houston, Galveston and Beaumont.

JUDGE BACKS DOWN.

Called on to Prove Charges of Atrocities in Montana Prisons He Denies News Article.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The State Board of Prison Commissioners today directed a letter to District Judge Clements of this county, calling on him to submit proofs to that body concerning alleged atrocities at the reform school, including such treatment of a girl that she became insane, said to have been made by him while sentencing a boy yesterday. Today the judge summoned the reporters who wrote the story before him, and said that they had been misinformed.

On the other hand the county attorney's office insists that he did make the statements. At any rate the affair has resolved itself into a profound sensation with the lie being not infrequently passed, together with various other criminations and recriminations.

COLTON IS ISLAND GOVERNOR.

SAN JUAN (P. R.) Nov. 6.—Col. G. R. Colton was inaugurated today as Governor of Porto Rico, succeeding Regis H. Post.

Police Chief Steward's new motorcycle squad made its first appearance on the streets of Chicago yesterday. At present the squad consists of only three policemen, but if the idea of patrolling certain parts of the city with the aid of motorcycles proves a success, Chief Steward says he will increase their number.

SINGS AND SHOOTS FRIEND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTSMOUTH (O.) Nov. 6.—Five minutes after she had finished playing and singing his favorite song, Miss Bontha Wolf shot and fatally wounded Thomas Fetty in her home in New Boston last night. They had known each other from childhood. After finishing the song, the girl playfully pointed her father's shotgun at Fetty. It was discharged and Fetty bled to death before medical aid arrived. Fetty made an ante-mortem statement, exonerating Miss Wolf.

BANKER FACES MANY CHARGES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) Nov. 6.—Phil Allen, Jr., vice-president of the First National Bank of Mineral Point, which failed a month ago because of his alleged defalcations, was indicted by the grand jury today on twenty-six counts, including almost every variety of violation of the banking laws known to the Comptroller's office. Allen's trial was set for the December term of court. The bail was reduced from $60,000 to $50,000, which Allen expects to procure. The amount of the embezzlement charged in the indictment aggregates $90,000. Government officials, however, said this represented only a part of the defalcations, which are estimated between $500,000 and $750,000.

OPPOSES SCHOOL VACATIONS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LAWRENCE (Kan.) Nov. 6.—E. A. Ross, professor of sociology in the University of Wisconsin, in an address to the students of the University of Kansas here yesterday, declared that school vacations are a relic of pioneer days, and that children should attend school twelve months in the year. The fact that in the early days the children were needed to help with the crops is cited by Prof. Ross as the reason for the original vacation. Now that this necessity has passed, he advocates a continuous school term with lighter work during the summer months.

PARENTS FIGHT LANDLORDS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Chicago landlords may lose their lofty estate. The Chicago Tenants' Protective Association, which promises to inaugurate radical reforms in the relations between landlords and tenants, came into being yesterday and is now being incorporated. Two little children, Donald Longenecker, aged 5, and his three-year-old sister, Lela, are the direct cause of the organization. Six weeks ago Robert F. Schenck, real estate agent, wrote to their father, Rolla Longenecker, that he could not rent an apartment to him because of the children. Mr. Longenecker promptly retained a lawyer and brought suit against Schenck and the owner of the property, W. E. Boylston, charging violation of the law which makes refusal on such grounds a misdemeanor. The case is still on the court calendar, with the defense contending for the unconstitutionality of the law. Yesterday afternoon five tenants gathered in Mr. Longenecker's office, discussed the situation and agreed to form the association.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON WORKS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Nathaniel F. Moore, son of J. H. Moore, one of the powers in the Rock Island Railway system, yesterday started in the railroad business by beginning work in a freight house at $40 a month. Incidentally, it was learned at the La Salle Hotel that if he intends to live on his salary, he will have only two days to stay in his present apartments, which are costing him $20 a day. And this will have to be without meals. He is to begin work, according to schedule, as soon as President Winchell of the road returns to this country from Europe. He is emulating the career of his cousins, Edward and Paul Moore.

ELECTRICITY TO OUST DYNAMITE.

PITTSBURGH INVENTOR HAS NEW THING IN CANNON.

Gunpowder and Other Explosives Useless in His "Electric Gun," He Declares—Asserts He Can Discharge Projectiles at Higher Speed Than Ever Done Before.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An electric gun has been invented by Alexander F. Humphrey of No. 30 Federal street Extension, which he says will do away with the use of powder, and it will be absolutely noiseless in action. He claims to have discovered the method of propelling projectiles by electricity at a greater speed than powder or dynamite can. The plan of the gun is similar to that of rifles in use, except in the mechanism. The inventor says:

"My first design was of a gun of 18-inch caliber for coast defenses and as the principle of the electric cannon is adapted to either large or small caliber guns, I designed a gun for use in field artillery.

"This proposed gun could be manipulated by the application of electricity without noise, smoke or recoil. By pulling or holding the trigger a continuous stream of projectiles may be fired. These projectiles may be expelled with enormous muzzle velocity.

"In field practice the gun being remote from any permanent location of electrical supply, an armored auto car of special construction becomes the base of electrical supply, and that of transportation; also a battery of three or more of these proposed guns could be hauled by means of the auto car to any desired location.

"Several years ago I discovered the fact that metal missiles could be projected by the agency of electricity, just as they are projected by the powder guns of today, only with enormous speed. Embryo models proved the theory correct."

RURALES BALK SMUGGLERS.

Capture Thirteen Chinamen Undergoing Training Before Being Slipped Over the Border.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GALVESTON (Tex.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a raid made by rurales on an isolated farm in the southern part of the State of Tamaulipas, Mex., thirteen Chinamen were captured and taken prisoners. Three or four Mexicans and two Americans, said to be the promoters of the smugglers' school, made their escape and got away in a boat.

The soldiers had information that a "hang-out" for importing Chinese into the United States, had been in operation, the tip having come from American immigration inspectors on the border, who noted the attempted smuggling of several gangs of Chinese from Mexico.

The Chinamen are brought to Mexico and taken to a camp, located northwest of Tampico about 130 miles. Here the Chinese would be put through a course of training, to fit them for examination in case of capture by the immigration inspectors. They pay from $10 to $30 a head for this schooling. After this they would be taken to the border and smuggled across the Rio Grande into Texas. For this service the unwelcomed Mongolians would be taxed another fee. The prisoners pleaded that they were on their way to Tampico, having been refused admission to the United States, and that they were temporarily in camp.

FRAUD WAVE.

LOTS OF WORK FOR GRAND JURY.

MANY BANK DEFALCATIONS TO BE ACTED UPON.

Ten Persons Are Now Under Bond in Indianapolis, Who Will Probably Be Indicted as a Result of the Coming Investigations of Federal Inquisitors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Never before in the history of Indiana has the Federal grand jury, which has just assembled in this city, been called upon to investigate as many, and as varied a set of national bank defalcations and embezzlements as has been brought to its attention by the United States District Attorney at this session. There are ten persons under bond, and who will doubtless be indicted. The loss to the six banks from which the money was stolen is about $180,000, and in every instance the unfaithful employé "had the fullest confidence of his superiors."

One of the most interesting of these cases was in connection with the Capital National Bank of this city, which lost $31,000 through the alleged manipulation of its books by Max P. Emmerich, who was an individual book-keeper in the bank.

Another case that is going before the grand jury involves Elbert W. Shirk, a Chicago millionaire and president of the First National Bank of Tipton; William H. Marker, cashier, and Noah B. Marker, assistant cashier, of the same institution. The shortage footed up $102,000. It was charged that Noah Marker stole $50,000 from the safe on the night he fled from Tipton, but he returned in a week, and the people gave him quite an ovation, and don't believe yet that he stole anything.

James H. Philips, a book-keeper in the Terre Haute National Bank, is charged with embezzling $15,000; E. N. Dotzer, teller of the First National Bank of Fort Wayne, is charged with a shortage of $7000, and Oscar Cochrane, book-keeper in the American National Bank of this city, is charged with falsifying the books and getting away with $10,000.

WOMEN SOLVE PROBLEM.

Unconsciously Aid Elevated Conductors to Enforce Company's Rules Against Smoking.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The troubles of the Oak Park elevated railroad in enforcing its rule against smoking, continued today. One of the railroad guards hit upon the expedient of directing women in to the former smoking cars, and found that rather than annoy the women, the smokers refrained from violating the new rule of the company.

Two offenders who pleaded guilty to having created a disturbance yesterday on one of the "converted smokers" were fined in the municipal court today.

FRANCE HONORS WRIGHTS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Orville and Wilbur Wright, the aviators, it became known today, have been presented with the cross of the Legion of Honor, by the republic of France, through the Consul-General here.

Five persons, all railroad employés, were killed, and a score of passengers injured in an accident on the elevated structure in Jersey City yesterday. The wreck blocked the line, and many passenger trains were held up.

WASHINGTON.

PRESIDENT TO START WHEELS.

Many Weighty Matters Wait for His Return.

Appointments of Vast Importance to Be Made.

Departments Marking Time, Lacking Heads.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The return of President Taft next Wednesday, is expected to put an end to the policy of delay which has dominated the Taft administration since the passage of the tariff bill last August. Since the departure of the President and almost his entire Cabinet from Washington many matters of great importance have been postponed for settlement pending their return.

At present nobody in Washington pretends to know what the Taft administration expects to ask for passage at the coming Congress.

The State Department presents the most chaotic condition of any of the executive departments as a result of the policy of delay. Changes in the diplomatic corps at London, Paris and Peking are on the table, and the new Far Eastern and Latin-American bureaus are yet to be put on a working basis.

In the absence of Secretary Nagel the Department of Commerce and Labor is being administered by Solicitor Earl, who is the acting secretary since Ormsby McHarg, Assistant Secretary, resigned. The customs division of the Treasury Department, which administers the new tariff law, is being supervised by Charles D. Hilles, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in addition to his regular duties, which are in themselves onerous. This situation is the result of the resignation of James R. Reynolds, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who has become a member of the tariff board.

It is assumed here that all of these vacancies will be filled in the near future, and that the customs court authorized by the tariff law will also be appointed. To date only an assistant attorney has been appointed in connection with this board. There is also a vacancy on the Supreme Court, caused by the death of Rufus W. Peckham.

It is understood here that this hiatus of public activity on the part of the higher officials of the administration has not been without result. Practically all of them from the President down, have been giving a close study during the summer months to departmental affairs, with a view to outlining a definite administration policy in each.

TO TEST BIG GUN.

PREPARATIONS BEGUN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Preparations to test the biggest gun the navy has yet undertaken to try out, will be begun when the new 14-inch cannon just completed by the Midvale Steel Company of Philadelphia, arrives at the Washington navy yard.

The monster is on its way here. As soon as the gun is ready for firing tests it will be loaded on a lighter and towed to the proving grounds at Indian Head, Md.

If the tests are a success, the new cannon may take the place of the present twelve-inch guns in the turrets of the new battleships.

NOBLE WOMEN SELL MILLS.

Famous "Garner Girls" Help Cotton Men to Break Print Goods Trust of New England.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Marquise de Breteuil and her sister, Lady William Gordon Cummings, formerly known to American society as the beautiful and charming Garner girls, made a deal in this city yesterday in connection with cotton print goods that may revolutionize the industry in the country.

To a syndicate of southern and eastern cotton mill owners they sold the vast cotton print goods manufactories in the northern part of this State, which they inherited from their father, William T. Garner, who, with his wife, his brother-in-law and a guest, was drowned by the capsizing of his yacht Mohawk in New York Bay in 1876.

The acquisition by the southerners of the control of these print mills will, it was declared, free them from the yokes of the trust of the New England States.

The price for which the sisters sold their mills, which employ about 20,000 hands, was not disclosed officially. It was said to have been in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.

THE WAY OUT.

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I was twenty-five, when I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being cured by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a box and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—of course using Grape-Nuts every day. It is now four years since I began to use Grape-Nuts, I am the mistress of a happy home and the old weakness has never returned."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A Hotel of 600 Rooms and 600 Bath Rooms

California is unique in many things, and offers to the visitors many things which cannot be seen elsewhere in the world. One of her latest claims of excellence, however, is in having the only large hotel in the world in which every room has its attached bath. This is the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. The Fairmont was originally designed under the direction of a woman—its owner—Mrs. Oelrichs, who was Miss Fair. Perhaps because Mrs. Oelrichs appreciated the conveniences which appeal to the women, she had every room built with its attached bath and clothes closet. Both the bathrooms and closets are of immense size—large enough to delight the heart of every woman. Another feature of the Fairmont's construction is that it has no inside rooms—every room opens upon the streets with city or sea view, or upon a great open-to-the-sky court. Every room is equipped with local and long-distance telephone; also telephone connection to the dining rooms. Despite these many conveniences the rates at the Fairmont are low. For $2.50 per day and upwards European plan, one may enjoy a great room with attached bath. Richly furnished suites of parlor, sitting room, bedroom and bath may be had for as little as $14 per day at the Fairmont. The Fairmont is operated by the Palace Hotel Company, owners of the Palace Hotel on Market street.

WARRANT FOR WARRINER.

Ex-Official of Big Four Says He Is Glad That He Has Been Found Out.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—A warrant, charging Charles L. Warriner with embezzlement of $54,000, funds of the Big Four Railroad Company, was issued today.

"I am glad I have been found out," said Warriner, who, in charge of a detective, was leaving the Sinton Hotel when spoken to.

"Well, I'll say one thing to you," said Warriner, stopping. The detective remained at his side, listening, and watching. "I am not alone in this. And I want to say another thing I never played a game of poker in my life. There is no woman in the case—that is, as far as I am concerned. The perfect understanding between me and my wife precludes being mixed up with any woman."

"When did you first take any money?" was asked.

"I have no statement to make as to that," replied Warriner.

Warriner, it is said, first took money to speculate in wheat.

CRIES CONFESSION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. E. S. Cook, wife of a former Big Four Railroad clerk, whose aid is wanted by the police of Cincinnati investigating the alleged shortage of $54,000, in the accounts of C. L. Warriner, treasurer of the railroad company, was found in an apartment in the Lessing Annex, after Warriner's arrest in Cincinnati. When asked to tell the whereabouts of her husband, she became hysterical and shouted:

"My God! We have been found out!"

She ran frantically through the rooms of her apartment, seizing her hair, ringing her hands, moaning and sobbing alternately.

Newspaper men did not have an opportunity to give their reasons for washing to see Cook before she gained control of herself and said:

"My husband is an innocent man. He and Warriner have been business friends for years. Warriner is short $200,000, and now they are trying to lay it on to my husband. We will prove our innocence when the proper time comes."

From neighbors it was learned that Cook had been living at the Lessing Annex two years ago. He always appeared to have plenty of money, and was known to some residents as "the man of mystery." It was said he often had given theater parties and spent money lavishly.

RECEPTION.

WARM HANDS; CHILLY NIGHT.

Republican Candidates Are Well Received.

Cheers Greet Smith's Name at San Pedro.

Citizens Enjoy Sallies on the "Goo Goos."

Republican candidates for city officers received a warm reception at San Pedro last evening. It was an outdoor meeting and the air was so cool that a number of the speakers wore overcoats, but the crowd was made up mostly of men who are accustomed to the outdoor air. They stood for nearly two hours to hear the representatives of the party that has been responsible for much of their prosperity. They applauded every declaration to retire to the rear the freaks and fads of the "Goo Goos."

A big platform had been erected on a vacant lot at Sixth and Palos Verdes streets, and here the crowd gathered early when the San Pedro Marine Band began to play. Most of the candidates and speakers did not arrive from Los Angeles until the 8:40 car, but J. A. Atchison, precinct committeeman, called the meeting to order a little earlier.

George A. Smith, Republican candidate for Mayor, was introduced by H. Steiglitz, former City Attorney of San Pedro, who spoke of the representative body of men who had placed the candidate in nomination and the marked contrast to the methods of bosses who operated in back rooms.

Mr. Smith was suffering from a bad cold and made but brief remarks. He recalled that it was forty years since he came to Los Angeles to reside and that he came through the port of San Pedro when Los Angeles had but 3500 inhabitants. The promises made by the Consolidation Committee, he declared would be carried out in good faith, in the event of his election. At the conclusion of his remarks Smith was given a hearty round of applause.

COUNCIL CANDIDATES.

Several members of and candidates for the Council followed Smith, reiterating the pledges made to San Pedro, and declaring they would back up the Mayor in keeping the pledges to San Pedro.

"The Mayor, with a Council behind him," said Charles J. Letts, Council candidate, "can accomplish a great deal through harmony. If that harmony is needed anywhere, it is here. We want a big, loyal, strong, healthy man like George A. Smith, in the Mayor's chair, and a Republican Council behind him." [Cheer.]

M. J. McGarry spoke as the "lone Democrat" on the platform. He said he had come down to say a good word for his old neighbor, the Republican candidate for Mayor, whom he had known for many years.

"I do not see why it is necessary to point out a candidate as an honest man," said he. "It is the duty of all candidates to be honest. You hear Mayor Alexander's supporters continually boosting him as an honest man, but you don't hear any of them saying that Smith is dishonest.

"We hear that an honest man is needed to complete the work on the Owens River project. Remember that this project was started when Owen McAleer was Mayor and Smith was in the Council, and that the latter defeated a delay of two years on the project while Alexander was over at the Courthouse feeding at the public crib.

"For eighteen years Alexander has been wearing out shoe leather walking from the Courthouse to the City Hall, seeking any vacancy that might offer a job. He was a member of the Board of Supervisors and kicked hard when the people wanted to place in front of the Courthouse a statue of Stephen M. White, as a tribute to the great work that he had done for San Pedro harbor, because it would uproot a pair of measly palm trees."

Mr. McGarry also paid his respects to Mushet in reviewing the work of Smith in the Council, when he declared that, while chairman of the Finance Committee, he had reduced the tax rate 24 cents in two years and that no employé had his wages held up.

Smith, said McGarry, was responsible for the street car fender legislation (a statement that brought applause) and voted against the river bed franchise. Unlike Mushet, he has had years of experience in business and public life and was big enough and broad enough for the office of Mayor.

Col. George N. Black of the Republican Executive Committee told of the late recall campaign, when Uncle Aleck narrowly escaped being defeated by a Socialist candidate.

"The present administration got in by accident," he declared. "Do you want this man Alexander to go back to two years more?" [Cries of "No. No." from the crowd.]

"I have been guilty of holding a deputyship in the Auditor's office for eight years," said E. E. Bostwick, candidate for Auditor, "and during that time the debts of Los Angeles were always paid. If I am elected there will be no registering of demands."

Former Gov. Gosper said he came to speak for R. Heffelfinger, candidate for Treasurer. He paid a high tribute to the character and integrity of this man. "Vote for every man on the Republican ticket," said Gosper; "I know them all, and they are grand men."

MUCH CONFUSION.

John R. Laying said that confusion confronted the people of Los Angeles under the non-partisan charter and that a few courageous men assembled and decided to call the Republicans together to bring order out of chaos. As a result of that representative gathering, the fads by which a little set of men hoped to control the city under the guise of "reform" may be abolished.

Henry H. Lyon, W. E. McKee, W. H. O'Connell, Percy W. Ross and H. H. Yonkin, candidates for the Council, made brief remarks.

D. C. Casselman, chairman of the City Central Committee made the closing remarks.

Better Than Spanking

Spanking will not cure children of wetting the bed, because it is not a habit but a dangerous disease. The C. H. Breaking Away from a habit is sometimes difficult, even though the habit is known to be harmful.

The regular use of coffee is, to most persons, a harmful habit, because the drug, caffeine, in coffee interferes with the healthy action of heart, nerves and stomach.

It's easy to break away from the coffee habit if well-made (thoroughly boiled)

Marvel Whirling Spray Syringe

We have built up our enormous business by giving our thousands of customers and friends our honest opinion on every subject. We recommend only what we know to be absolutely the best. In syringes we can safely say that there has never been a perfectly satisfactory syringe made until the Marvel Whirling Spray came out, and now that it has been introduced it is only natural that many worthless imitations have been offered. They are only imitations and we cannot too strongly advise our customers to get the genuine or nothing. We can only say that the Marvel Whirling Spray Syringe is the most successful and perfect Ladies' Syringe on the market today, and there is nothing that will take its place.

LAMENTATIONS.

HENEY DEFEAT BRINGS TEARS.

SAN FRANCISCAN WEEPS WITH CITY CLUB AT LOSS.

Isadore Jacobs Comes from San Francisco on Programme Which Calls for Gloating and Joins in Funeral Services Here for the Departed in the North.

Like the lamentations of Jeremiah were the explanations of Isadore Jacobs, head of the "Goo-Goo" organization of San Francisco, to the City Club yesterday, of the way the "Goo-Goos" came out of the little end of the horn in the election in the Gate City last Tuesday.

Jacobs is the "Lissner of San Francisco" and he came here by arrangement with the Lissner of Los Angeles, boss of the "Goo-Goo" organization here, to tell the story of how Heney was elected. His topic was that favorite "Good Government," nebula of "Our Set."

"I had hoped at this time" said Jacobs, "to tell you the story of our glorious success. But instead I must tell you of our glorious defeat."

He explained that all the vicious and corrupt elements of San Francisco had banded together and won. In the next breath he declared the good government forces were in the majority, but had been deceived. They did not know what they were doing when they beat Heney.

Jacobs did not have an entirely sweet stomach because of the result and he released some of the fermentation in denouncing the San Francisco Call, Rudolph Spreckels and the Church Federation.

"We had a right to expect support from the Call" said he, "but not once during the whole campaign did it give aid to Heney."

Horrible!

"Because Mr. Spreckels believed that there was such a moral awakening in San Francisco that the people would elect Heney if no party nominated him," said Jacobs, "he opposed seeking partisan nominations, and the opposition obtained the Republican and Union Labor nominations."

Oh, you St. Rudolph; how could you do it!

"The Church Federation declined to indorse eight incumbent Supervisors because they had refused to vote for higher license, and they only lacked 1100 of election. The Church Federation represents 5000 votes. If it had indorsed our eight men and not put up eight of their own we would have controlled the Board of Supervisors. I intend to tell them so when I get back, too."

Then the partisan primary was another obstacle to success, and Jacobs said the "Goo-Goos" would advocate the adoption of the Los Angeles non-partisan system by charter amendment just as soon as they got their breath back.

The most remarkable portion of the meeting was when former Judge Works, president of the City Club, followed Jacobs and did not say something vitriolic about somebody.

LADIES OF MACABEES.

The Thimble Club of Los Angeles Rive, Ladies of the Maccabees, was entertained at the home of Mrs. K. Thompson, No. 2640 West Temple street, on Thursday. The Lady Maccabees will hold a ball in the old Masonic Temple, No. 431 South Hill street, Tuesday evening. The ladies have also arranged for the holding of a bazaar on December 14.

TOO MUCH FOR THEM.

Officers of Liberal Alliance, Which Supports Mushet, Quit Because of Political Orgy.

Because the Liberal Alliance, which is supporting Mushet for Mayor, permitted its meeting of Friday night to be turned into an orgy, in which booze flowed freely, Fernan Parmentier, treasurer of the alliance, has resigned, and H. H. Keck, a director of the organization, also has stepped out.

The Mushet meeting was held at Turner Hall, on South Main street, and was largely attended. It was notable for the quantity of refreshments of the "liberal" kind that were dispensed. Altogether, it was a grand old "whoop up" for Mushet, but not of the kind to please some of the members of the alliance, who previously had declared for Mushet.

The result is the departure of Messrs Parmentier and Kock from the ranks of the Mushet supporters. Just where they will go, politically, is a matter that they are not now discussing.

INTERESTING DEBATE.

Eastern and Local Law Schools to Meet on the Platform in This City.

The College of Law, U.S.C., has signed up for an interesting debate during the Easter holidays with the law department of the George Washington University, Washington, D. C., the team from the latter institution to come to this city. The law school of George Washington University ranks about seventh in size in the country.

Two men will be selected from each school. The local College of Law will have its tryouts December 1, 2 and 3, and twenty-two students have entered that contest. Any one of a dozen of these, it is believed, is strong enough to meet the representative of any similar school in the country.

TWO WIN PLACES.

Redlands and Long Beach Represented on Stanford University Debating Team—Vaudeville Show.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 5.—H. R. Person, of Redlands, and E. E. Tincher of Long Beach, won places on the sophomore team that will meet the freshmen in the annual interclass debate. The tryout in which fourteen students participated, was held last night. Southern California will have no representatives on the freshman team.

A vaudeville show, including fourteen acts, is to be staged by the combined musical clubs in the assembly hall on the night of the intercollegiate football game, November 13. Among the Los Angeles students who will participate in the entertainment are G. F. Morgan, '10; H. A. Lewis, '12; J. L. Beman, '12; and Edwin Ely, '13.

THE OLD AND THE NEW LOS ANGELES.

Arrangements have just been completed by Sunset Magazine for the issuance of a special Los Angeles edition for January, which will appeal to every one who has watched the evolution of this city from a pueblo to a metropolis. The leading article, which will treat of this development, has as its author one who is conspicuously fitted by occupation and long residence to tell the story.

In illustrating the article Sunset has had access to a unique private collection which has been gathered during past years by a local newspaper man. While this collection contains pictures of the sentimental as well as the commercial side of the city's history, those chosen for the special issue have been selected with a view to showing development by comparative illustrations, depicting on the same page a scene of the original site of some modern public buildings and immediately beneath, a reproduction of the building as it now stands. There will be not less than thirty-two pages of illustrations in colors and in addition the descriptive article above mentioned.

It is expected that the special edition of Sunset will reach a total of over 150,000 copies and already 20,000 copies have been spoken for by the public service corporations and merchants of this city for distribution through their individual publicity departments. When this January number appears there will be, no doubt, a great demand for it. The local agency of Sunset, at No. 600 South Spring street, is already receiving orders for copies of this edition and will mail them for purchaser to any part of the United States or Mexico.

TO BUILD BATH-HOUSE.

The Mount Hollywood Bath and Pavilion Company, which has been incorporated for $300,000 by W. H. Palamer, J. C. Marquardt, I. R. Bigsby, M. M. Ferguson, C. W. Stewart, R. A. Minto, H. G. Miller, C. E. Iyes, A. E. Sunbary, J. G. Buckner, S. K. Elliott, C. S. Hutchison and G. A. Kennedy, plans to build near Vermont avenue and Santa Monica avenue one of the most complete bath-houses and pavilions in the State. The plunge of the proposed structure will be 100x120 feet. The building will contain 500 dressing-rooms, 100 hot mineral baths, forty sun-radium hot mineral baths, private plunges, refreshment and ice cream rooms, a lounging parlor 48x100 feet, pavilion and stage for dancing, roof garden and promenade, bowling alleys and billiard rooms. The cost will approximate $150,000.

ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

The biological section of the Southern California Academy of Sciences will hold a meeting tomorrow evening in the laboratory of the Pacific College of Osteopathy. The lecture will be delivered by Dr. C. A. Whiting on "Modern Biology," and will be illustrated by a stereopticon. South Pasadena and Annandale cars pass the door.

SCIENCE OF AERONAUTICS.

Invitations are being issued to all who are in favor of the establishment of a permanent aëronautic station near Los Angeles by the government, to attend a discussion on "Navigating the Air," at the Simpson Auditorium, next Friday evening. Diagrams, illustrations and lantern slides, will be used, and different phases of the subject will be handled by William A. Spalding, William H. Knight and Melville Dozier, all former presidents of the Academy of Science; and by Capt. H. W. Slotterback, N.G.C., and Charles F. Holder, a scientific author.

MR. WHEELER'S POSITION.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6.—[To the Editor of The Times:] May I be permitted to make a statement to your readers as to my candidacy for the City Council? I consented to the requests of numerous friends, who believed I possessed the necessary qualifications to make a good Councilman, to permit them to file a petition in my behalf. The petition which they later filed with the City Clerk contained the names of many prominent and representative business and professional men.

Having been closely associated with the Good Government men in the recent charter amendment campaign and in the City Club, I naturally expected to be supported by them in whatever manner they would support other candidates. My surprise can be imagined, therefore, when I was informed by the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Good Government League "that while they recognized the fact that I was the peer of any candidate suggested for the Council so far as my integrity and business ability were concerned, yet it would be poor politics for them to get behind my candidacy because of my prominence as a Prohibitionist." This in spite of the fact that the very purpose of the charter amendments, eliminating all party designations, was that men might be selected for office for their merits and fitness alone and partisanship be eliminated.

This seemed to be to be a rank violation of the spirit of the amendment. Other friends of mine who were in the confidence of the leaders of the organization frankly told me that there was a definite purpose to avoid efforts in my behalf simply because it was considered bad politics owing to my well-known opposition to all immoral institutions.

The eevning paper that supports the Good Government League publishes from day to day a list of seventeen candidates for the Council whom they can recommend as possessing the necessary qualifications. My name is not included in that list, notwithstanding the managing editor has made to me and to others the kindest and most complimentary statements as to my qualifications for the Council. He, too, has expressed the fear that it would be "bad politics" to support me.

It seems to me these gentlemen do themselves and their cause a great injustice and are drawing a very severe indictment of their organization. If it is necessary for the Goog Government League to secure a portion of the vicious and immoral vote in order to win, they thereby discount the usefulness of their candidates before they are elected.

"I deny the allegation and defy the alligators." I appeal confidently to the great body of the people who will always sustain the right when they are familiar with the facts. I am an enthusiastic supporter of the Owens River water and power development controlled by the people, of broad harbor improvements, of an extension of our schools, parks and playgrounds and other large plans for our future growth and prosperity; but I am impressed with the fact that the greatest and the most important of our resources which we must conserve and protect, is the character and integrity of our boys and girls. I shall therefore stand at all times aginst all institutions that make it easier for them to go wrong and more difficult for them to do right, and for such policies and methods as will in my judgment reduce their influence to a minimum.

While I have been a lifelong Prohibitionist, and expect to be until we win, I am not running for the Council as a Prohibitionist, but as a citizen. If it was possible for me to join four other Councilmen and pass a prohibition ordinance destroying the liquor traffic of this city, I not only would not do it, but I should vigorously oppose such action for the reason that we have learned from experience that it is always a mistake to secure such legislation before we have the majority of the people behind the law to demand and secure its enforcement.

Again, we have the initiative and referendum in our city charter and the people can bring on a contest looking to the destruction of the liquor traffic whenever they get ready, in spite of the Council. I should therefore oppose the former and favor the latter method.

If any of our citizens agree with me in the matters stated above, I shall appreciate their support at the ballot box.

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE.

Will Form State Union at Gathering in Fresno Tomorrow—Many Delegates Expected.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Nov. 6.—The State Farmers' Union will be formally organized in this city next Monday at a convention which has been called for the purpose. Up to this time, the organization has been conducted in California without a charter. It is now announced that it has acquired the necessary 5000 members to entitle it to be recognized as a State organization with power to elect its own officers and conduct its affairs.

National President Barrett arrived in Fresno several days ago from Georgia for the purpose of attending the convention and has employed his time while waiting in viewing the surrounding country and addressing meetings of farmers.

Delegates from every section of the State will be in attendance at the coming convention and they will be formally welcomed by Mayor Rowell at a public reception Monday forenoon.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church yesterday sued the Presbyterian Church for possession of the Missouri Valley College, which represents a value of $400,000.

Stain Your Hair A Rich Brown.

Simple Preparation of Walnut-Tint That Defies Detection.

An interesting little book has been issued on the remarkable effects of walnut-juice in staining gray, faded or bleached hair. It has the advantage over hair dyes of being non-injurious to the hair, containing no silver, sulphur, lead or other poisons which cause hair falling, and containing no odor, no oil, no sediment and no grease. At the same time, an opportunity is given to every one who wishes to stain the hair to send for one of the laboratory trial packages which Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 890 Groton Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, will send by mail in plain, sealed wrapper.

Those desiring to procure a trial package of this walnut-juice hair-stain, as well as their book on hair, should write to the above address, and enclose twenty-five cents in stamps or coin, and if it is desired to continue the treatment, the preparation may be obtained at drug stores generally at one dollar for a full-size package.

It is said that the stain blends so softly with the actual color of the hair as to deceive experts. It can be applied in a few moments with the comb every 30 days. It stains nothing but the hair, and it does it evenly from tip to root. Any shade can be obtained from a beautiful rich brown to almost black. It does not rub off on the clothing. One bottle ordinarily lasts a year.

Send for the 25-cent trial package today.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is recommended and for sale in Los Angeles by the Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring st., 625 So. Broadway, and Fifth and Broadway.

CLIMAX TO ORGY.

TELL-TALE LETTERS BETRAY DEATH SECRET OF SUICIDE

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLORADO SPRINGS (Colo.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tell-tale evidence in the form of a letter found among his effects at the Antlers Hotel tends to confirm the opinion of Coroner David Law the theory that William Lyttle, alias James Cox, Jr., deliberately planned his death as the climax to an orgy.

At the eleventh hour when the body was being prepared for shipment the wires were put in motion tonight to check up the dead man's career on the Pacific Coast.

"I have thought from the first," said Coroner Law, "that the man may have taken a drug a few hours before he died."

The sheet of paper that has been brought to light suggests a love affair on the Coast, from which it is thought that Cox, as he was known in Los Angeles, sought to escape.

The hand is the fashionable scrawl of a society woman. The initials, O. R. C., are silvered in monogram. The letter says:

"544 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Dear Jim—This is the note you expected the other day, but didn't get. I thought perhaps you might call up last night, but was disappointed, and as it was I was in bed and fast asleep at 8:30 o'clock.

"Everything is O.K. with Elsie so don't waste your time making excuses to M——. Let him think whatever he cares to. If you have the time call me up at the house this evening. Lovingly, Ora, Oct. 20, 1909."

William Lyttle, was recently a resident of this city. He is a grandson of the Confederate general, W. F. Lyttle.

In 1903 William Lyttle shot a negro in Chicago, because of a levee dispute. He apparently had plenty of money. The night following his sister, who gave the name of Mary Gordon or Mary Glover, committed suicide in the Auditorium Hotel, thereafter admitting that she had made a tour of the "red light" district with her brother.

Lyttle formerly worked for the Juvenile Company, No. 534 South Broadway, and was in the firm's employ for seven months. He lived at the Santa Rita Hotel, No. 1104 South Main street. While here he had a reputation as a rapid spender of money and a salesman noted for his address and clever manners.

When he left town last Saturday he appeared to be in some mental distress. Shortly before his departure the manager of his hotel was forced to carry him to bed after an orgy, and it was noticed that Cox or Lyttle behaved in a peculiar manner.

The letter signed "O. R. C.," referred to in the dispatch was from Ora R. Clifford, a book-keeper for the Fowler Bros.' book store, No 542 South Broadway. She lives at the Sunnyside apartments on Ninth street, near Broadway.

When found at her home, Miss Clifford took the death of her former admirer as a humorous event, and expressed her delight in the fact that he had chosen to keep her letter above all others in spite of the fact that he was recognized as a "lady killer." She said that her acquaintance had not extended over more than two months, but that she had "been out" with "Cox" on several occasions.

Miss Clifford said that her friend was a "perfect southern gentleman," and that was one reason for her hastily formed friendship with him, and was reputed to be a "remittance man."

Names found in the letter and referred to by initial were M. Mecklinberg, a San Francisco plumbing supplies salesman, now at the Lankershim Hotel, and the "Elsie" mentioned is a clerk in the Fowler Bros. Company of this city.

The American Excess Of Good Living

The Principal Cause of the Great Prevalence of Digestion and Dyspepsia

Man inhabits every part of the globe where external influences can be successfully resisted. Food is an important element in effecting this, and nature has provided for it accordingly. The colder the climate the more animal food and oil substances are required; the warmer a preponderance of vegetables and fruits is necessary in one's diet.

The whale-blubber of the fur-clad Eskimo, and the rice of the nude African, are as much necessities of locality, as matters of choice. The same indications exist in civilization. Thus, the diet in America and England is essentially different from that in Italy, Spain and Egypt.

The effects of universal communication are nowhere more obvious than on the luxurious table. To furnish the refined cuisine, all climates, both sea and land, are laid under contribution, and the stomach is expected to digest without assistance everything that is put into it. Combining together such varied products, and the neglect of the relation between climate and foods, are very active causes of dyspepsia.

The heavy substantial dishes of this climate accord badly with the thermometer at ninety degrees; and an inflexibility in regulating the kind and quantity of food is a cause of a large proportion of the ill health and stomach troubles among the English and Americans.

Thousands of people who have suffered from stomach troubles, and a general ill-health resulting therefrom, because of a badly regulated diet, and the ingesting of an excessive amount of food at the table, have obtained speedy and permanent relief by means of a simple expedient—that of using one or two of STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS after each meal, or whenever any of the well-known symptoms of indigestion are present.

These powerful digestive tablets contain every element that exists in the stomach to digest the food, and in the exact proportion as found therein. They take the place of the natural digestive juices when the latter are deficient in quality or quantity, and do their work for them, removing the indigestion by digesting the food, and resting, strengthening and purifying the digestive tract.

There is no other digestive remedy on the market which has been found equal to Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; none which is so rapidly and powerfully efficient, or which removes discomfort, banishes stomach-pain, and relieves and cures all of the symptoms of dyspepsia and indigestion in so thorough and pleasant a manner as these marvelous little tablets, a single grain of which is capable of digesting 3000 grains of any and every kind of food.

All persons who are annoyed with stomach troubles of any kind should use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which will remove such troubles in a very short time. Purchase a box from your druggist for 50 cents and send us your name and address for free sample package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-five years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 526 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

The Isotta Fraschini Starting First in the Los Angeles to Phoenix Run, at 10 o'clock last night, from in front of the Hollenbeck Hotel, with Max P oismans at the wheel, Hervey Herrick in the mechanician's seat, and F. C. Fenner riding behind as coach.

STREAKS IN THE DARK.

GREAT CROWDS CHEER RACERS IN DASH FOR FAR-AWAY GOAL.

THE next time a road race is started in Los Angeles it will be up to the managers to "go hire a hall." Street corner demonstrations, such as that which took place at 10 o'clock last night, when the first of ten racing cars in the annual Phoenix run started from Second and Spring streets, digging its way out from under a struggling mass of humanity to get away ought to have some recognition. The start would have been a fine show if any one could have been able to see it.

Every one of a thousand individuals seemed bent on tasting the gasoline, punching a thumbnail in the tires and making a general inspection of each racer just previous to its starting. Traffic was impeded, the usual Saturday night hum and bustle of the street was obscured by bursts of cheering and a general buzz of excited preparation and consternation was spread among the feminine bystanders by the occasional shooting of a cylinder.

It was easy to tell which were the favorites in the betting. "You'll have to hurry," shouted some one as the Elmore Bulldog gave its first explosive snort, after Fenner's Isotta-Fraschini got away. "Go it you Elmore," came the responsive chorus from the backers of the car.

When Ralph Hamlin took the wheel of his Franklin the enthusiasm reached its climax. Several thousand dollars, they say, are wagered on this car and if that be the case every backer felt entitled to several hollers per dollar. There was no lack of good cheer for the last car as well as the first. The big Kisselkar starting last with Hanshue at the wheel had its ardent partisans who wanted to encourage Leon Shettler in his confidence that it would catch the Franklin this side of the river.

At 10 o'clock the Italian car with a name that ought to carry it most of the way to Phoenix started at the signal from John S. Mitchell, the referee. It dodged between street cars and headed north on Spring street between packed masses of humanity that opened just wide enough to form a lane for its passage.

At intervals of fifteen minutes the Elmore Bulldog, the Pennsylvania and the Dorris got away without other incident than the threatened breaking of several heads by the police who found it difficult to secure passage for the street cars.

Just before the Franklin started the "'Rah, 'rah boys" got into action. "Rah-rah, rah-rah, rah-rah, Hamlin," was the slogan for the favorite. The speedy Franklin took a flying start that seemed to carry it too hundred feet at a bound.

Then the Studebaker, looking bright and pert despite its desert experience, went off with a rush. The little Ford was next in line and the smallest car in the race seemed to be a ladies' favorite. Bunches of carnations and violets were hurled at Roger Stearns, the driver, as he drew up to the line. The backers of the small car set up a cheerful roar when it darted out without any fuss but with every indication of power and speed, the bunches of flowers on the radiator offering striking contrast to the grim racing garb of some of the big ones.

At 11:45 the Columbia with Harold Stone at the wheel dashed away, an unknown quantity to most of the spectators but a factor of importance with its San Diego record back of it. At the witching hour of midnight the "Buick 40" went out to make a white streak through the blackness of country roads. A number of Buick owners gave the machine a rousing send-off and it started smoothly.

Bringing up the rear guard Leon T. Shettler's big Kisselkar made some of the entries look like Christmas toys Harris Hanshue, the driver, as holder of a world record for stock car road driving, was given a personal tribute in the cheers that went up from a diminished crowd and the fact that Kisselkar was one of the betting choices added to the enthusiasm.

The entire race was started without a hitch. The crowds that stood in the streets indicated the tremendous interest there is in motor racing in Los Angeles.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

and the occupants of the automobile were hurled through space as their vehicle was twisted into a mass of wreckage.

Patrolman Phillips, walking his beat at Downey avenue and Daly street, heard a cry and a crash and rushed out into the street in time to see four human bodies flying through space. He called for the police ambulance and the men were rushed to the Receiving Hospital.

There surgeons worked over the men while an excited crowd of friends and persons attracted by curiosity, besieged the place. Chief of Police Dishman tried to get Burr to recognize him shortly before the latter was given an anesthetic, but the injured man only stared with blank and unreasoning gaze at his close friend and mopped the blood from his forehead.

Due to the fact that all of the injured men bled profusely, the hospital presented a gory picture until early this morning. The surgeons were kept busy working over the automobile victims while assistants answered anxious telephone inquiries.

Accounts differ as to just how near the racing car, which caused the accident, was to the men who turned aside to collide with the fire plug. Some say that it passed within a second from the time when the warning cry was heard and others assert that it was at least two blocks away.

It is believed that the roaring of the exhaust and the terrific noise made by the racer made the pleasure riders imagine that it was in close proximity and they made an emergency turn when it was not necessary.

If the crowd called out, "Look out for No. 8," it is probable the machine was the Pennsylvania car driven by J. C Coberly and Walter L. Vail.

The accident occurred at about 10:40 o'clock. The Pennsylvania car left from in front of the Hollenbeck Hotel at about 10:30 o'clock.

SPANISH TROOPS ADVANCE.

MELILLA (Morocco) Nov. 6.—Sixteen thousand Spanish troops, supported by heavy reserves, began an advance over the Beni Sicar territory today. The Infanta Carlos, of Bourbon, led the advance guard.

ARMY RECRUITS ESCAPE.

VIENNA (Austria) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The remarkable disappearance of army recruits in many rural districts of Hungary, which recently aroused the suspicion of authorities, led to the discovery of a conspiracy of emigration agents to smuggle young men across the border into Galicia and send them thence to America. In several districts fewer than half the recruits enrolled presented themselves at regimental barracks and in certain instances, the entire body failed to appear.

The investigation has revealed that to escape detection deserters grouped themselves into religious processions and headed by emigration agents wearing clerical robes, succeeded in crossing the frontier. Others adopted Gypsy costume, and forged traveling passports also were used.

The Hungarian government has resolved to adopt more stringent regulations governing emigration, as the wholesale desertion of active young men from the villages is causing serious embarrassment.

DEFENSELESS.

ROBBED, BOUND AND OUTRAGED.

TWO FOOTPADS OVERPOWER GIRL AND ASSAULT HER.

Schoolteacher Returning Home from Friend's House Meets With Terrible Experience—Thugs Leave Her Helpless and Unconscious in Rear of Vacant House.

Robbed and outraged by two footpads, who dragged her from the street into the rear of any empty house, and left her there bound and gagged for two hours, Miss Jeanette Baldwin, No. 1140 Elden street, was unable, when rescued, to give the police the least description of the two thugs who had assaulted her.

Miss Baldwin, a school teacher, was on her way to a party at the home of Dr. Manning, No. 1325 South Hope street, to which she had been invited.

She left home at about 8:30 o'clock in the evening. A little while after she had stepped off a car at the corner of Pico and Hope streets, two men walked up behind her.

One of them clapped his hand to her mouth while the other seized her arms, and the two dragged the overpowered girl to the rear of a vacant house near by. There they bound and gagged her and took away from her a pocketbook which contained only thirty cents.

Enraged at having obtained so little the bandits vented their bestial fury on the defenseless girl and left her lying there, unconscious.

Two hours later, Miss Baldwin recovered consciousness and, painfully working out of the bonds that held her limbs, she staggered into the house next door and told her pitiable story.

EARLE'S WEDDING VOID.

Experts in Paris Declare His Marriage to "Affinity" There Was Not Legal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The matrimonial troubles of "Affinity" Earle were revived today, when prominent lawyers testified that, according to French law, Earle's second marriage was illegal.

S. G. Archibald, who succeeded to the practice of the late Edmond Kelly and M. Vavin of Archibald's office, gave expert testimony before Sir Thomas Barclay, the referee, that under the French law insufficient time had elapsed after Earle's divorce from his first wife to enable him to contract a second marriage with his affinity. His marriage to his affinity is therefore null.

This testimony will be forwarded to New York, and it is believed that the court there will certainly grant Mrs. Earle a divorce on this finding.

FIND "SNOW MOUNTAIN."

Long Considered Myth by Scientists Third Expedition Succeeding in Discovering It in New Guinea.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

THE HAGUE, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The famous "Snow Mountain" in New Guinea, which was considered a myth by many scientists, though it has attracted the attention of Brilish, German and Dutch explorers for several years, has been reached by the third expedition organized for that purpose by the Dutch government, and commanded by Messrs. Hellwich and Weber. The peak was attained after the expedition had sailed up the Dignel River near the western frontier of the British part of the island. The mountain was formally christened Princess Juliana. Its altitude was found to be 15,000 feet.

On certain maps a range called the Snow Mountains is given as an extension of the Charles Louis, which runs eastward from the west coast of Dutch New Guinea. Geographers have continued to say of the natives' report of peaks covered with snow in this remote part of the mountain range: "Not authoritatively reported."

New Guinea, next to Greenland, is the largest island in the world, Australia being classed as a continent. It is almost exactly as large as Texas and Louisiana together

HUDDEL

We Can Restore Your Teeth. Time and Wear

Are the two things that decide the fate of dental work. Wear tests the workmanship; time reveals the defects in the materials.

We guarantee that the dental work that leaves our office is the best workmanship of expert dentists; that the materials are perfect; that every piece of work is as represented, and that if perchance there be anything wrong at any time it will be made right promptly and without any quibbling.

The advantage of dealing with an old established dental firm like this is that its guarantee is based on facts and amounts to something.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

ROD EFFECTIVE FOR BAD BOYS.

POLICE JUSTICE BELIEVES IN ITS APPLICATION.

Advises Parents of Three Little Chaps to Give 'Em "a Good Old-Fashioned Thrashing Such as Mother Used to Administer"—Comrades of Forties Reunited.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Nov. 7.—"A good old-fashioned thrashing, such as mother used to give" is the decree issued yesterday by Justice McDonald in the case of the people against three small boys who were found guilty of annoying Mrs. Etta B. Rheinhart by throwing stones at her. The little fellows were accompanied to the courtroom by their parents, who were instructed by the kindly justice to take the boys home and give them a sound thrashing, considering this treatment superior to a term in the reform school. "Spare the rod and spoil the child," said the justice. "In this case I do not believe the rod has been used very much. A little more rod and I believe these boys will become better. It is worth an experiment, anyway."

COMRADES IN ARMS.

Capt. Daniel McLaughlin went to the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle a day or so ago to meet some of the old boys at the home. While passing through one of the wards some one pulled at his sleeve. Turning around the captain was confronted by his old comrade and shipmate, George Spencer, whom he had not seen since 1846, when they were both on board the Cyane. Capt. McLaughlin is the sole survivor of the American marines who spiked the guns at the Presidio in 1846. He is now 80 years old, and Spencer is 87.

MISTAKEN KINDNESS.

As an act of kindness, George W. Ley of No. 401 North Michigan avenue, took Charles Patton, a distant relative, into his home a few days ago and gave him a bed, clothing and food. In addition he found Patton a job and started him to work. Yesterday Patton quit work in the middle of the day, and, it is alleged, went to Ley's home, fitted himself out in a good suit of clothes, went through Ley's pockets, extracted $46 in drafts and bills, and left. Ley swore out a warrant for Patton's arrest, but the police are unable to locate the man. The last seen of Patton he was on his way to Los Angeles.

PLANS FOR TOURNAMENT.

The Tournament of Roses Association has disposed of the big push ball used this year. It has been sold to a carnival association in Albuquerque, N.M., for $100, just half what it cost. Push ball will not be one of the attractions of the coming tournament.

President Cary states that arrangements have virtually been completed for the chariot races. There will only be two in the contest and the prizes will be $1000 and $500. Several more acres have been added to the grounds and the race track has been extended until now it is a full half mile. Polo grounds are being built inside the race track which will be full size, in accordance with English measurements. The managers of the celebration hope to add several new features, including a football game between two prominent Eastern college teams, and demonstrations of airships.

CAUGHT IN CAVE-IN.

Samuel Tinson, No. 607 South Fair Oaks avenue, was badly hurt late yesterday afternoon by being caught in a cave-in while loading gravel in the Arroyo Seco. He suffered the dislocation of four ribs on his left side and a fracture of three ribs, a broken finger and many severe bruises. He was treated by Police Surgeon Williams.

ATHLETIC PROGRAMME.

The official opening of the Pasadena Athletic Association took place last night in the rooms at Raymond avenue and Colorado street. The evening's entertainment was in charge of Prof. Uyttenhova. The programme consisted of double handball, won by Kendall and Chapin; single handball, won by Van Court; punching bag exhibition, by Mrs. Uyttenhova; bout with the foils, Kendall against Beris, score 7 to 5 in favor of Beris; dueling sword contest between Pitkin and Dr. Madison; boxing bout between Coe and Silverman, three rounds; boxing bout between Boscha and Dameron, three rounds

FORMALLY ANNOUNCED.

Dr. Blaidell's Appointment to Pomona College Tardily Told of by the Faculty.

CLAREMONT, Nov. 6.—A week ago The Times announced, on the authority of an exclusive dispatch from Beloit, Wis., that Prof. James A. Blaisdel had accepted the presidency of Pomona College. Today the fact was formally "made public" by the faculty.

Prof. Blaisdell, who is recognized as one of the strongest educators in the Middle West, is a careful student, talented orator and excellent administrator. He is a son of the late Dr. Blaisdell. Both father and son have been leaders at Beloit College for years.

Pomona College now has about 600 students, is one of strongest, growing colleges of the West and a great future is anticipated under Prof. Blaisdell's administration.

UNWELCOME.

SEEKS ARREST OF ADMIRER.

WOMAN SAYS RICH MAN FORCED ATTENTIONS ON HER.

Has Warrant Issued Out of Court of Santa Monica Justice of Peace for Wealthy Angeleno, Whose Wife Is Said to Have Gone to the Country—Civic Nominations.

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 6.—Alleging that he was forcing his attentions upon her against her wishes, Mrs. Bernice Wadsworth today had a warrant issued out of the court of Justice of the Peace Steele for the arrest of John Porter of Los Angeles. The accused is stated to be an aged man of wealth, whose wife has gone to the country. An officer went to Los Angeles late this afternoon with the warrant.

NOMINATIONS FILED.

The last day for filing nominations in connection with municipal offices to be filled on December 7 developed no sensations. It is contended by legal talent that while this is technically the last day, still as California has no Sunday law there is no valid reason why the City Clerk should not accept all nominations that may reach him tomorrow. Likewise it is construed that any withdrawals filed tomorrow must be accepted. There were no withdrawals today, and the race for Mayor, as it stands now, will lie between T. H. Dudley, Roy Jones, P. S. Lindsey and Robert Dollard. The only surprise of the day was the entrance of Morgan Holder into the race for City Treasurer and Tax Collector. The only other candidate for that office is Ralph Bane, incumbent. At the eleventh hour, L. C. Badgley became a candidate for Councilman in the Seventh Ward. A citizens' ticket for members of the Board of Education was filed late this evening. The candidates are J. D. Blanchard, C. W. Rogers, L. H. Case, J. C. Porter and J. B. Pollock.

DESERTED WIFE DIES.

Under the name of Edna Hubbard, the deserted wife of N. J. Ocksreider died today at the sanatorium on Second street. That is the name Mrs. Ocksreider gave upon entering the institution three weeks ago for treatment. She was then suffering with valvular heart disease, and during the night on which Ocksreider was arrested at Salt Lake City on the embezzlement charge it was thought she would die. Knowledge of the fact that he had been placed under arrest was kept from her. She was about 30 years of age. The couple had no children.

WASTE FALLS ON HEAD.

South Pasadena Man Rendered Unconscious When Bale Hits Him as He Mounts Stairway.

SOUTH PASADENA, Nov. 6.—Roy Torrence, driver for the Oneonta Hardware Company on Mission street, was seriously hurt this morning while delivering goods to the Dodge felt factory, Dolgeville. While ascending the stairs a bale of waste struck him in the head, knocking him unconscious. Concussion of the brain is feared by the attending physician.

The residents of Oak Lawn are complaining because of the lack of lights at the foot of the cement bridge, on the city's property. They will file a formal petition to the Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Howard Holmes entertained with a violet luncheon and card party, Thursday, at her residence, No. 1928 Fletcher avenue.

The report of E. H. Smith, agent for the Santa Fé and Wells-Fargo express in this city for the period from January 1 to October 1, makes a favorable showing. The business of these corporations in this city has nearly doubled in that time as compared with the corresponding period last year.

At the Methodist church tomorrow evening a sacred concert will be given under the direction of the organist and leader, Miss Mabel Bishop, assisted by James W. Rice, violinist, and George Chaplain, baritone soloist.

Mrs. L. J. McConnell, No. 1011 Monterey Road, left yesterday for a month's campaign in Arizona in the interest of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.

The Women's Improvement Association appointed Miss Bertha Moore, Mrs. Norman Marsh and Mrs. Charles Cramer as delegates to the District Federation meeting which will be held in Pasadena, November 16-18.

Frank Haines of Virginia Place has returned from Philadelphia.

VENICE.

VENICE, Nov. 6.—Abbot Kinney and C. S. Bentley have arrived at their home on the beach, after a tour of the principal cities of the East. During the absence of the "Doge" of Venice no general improvement work was in progress, but the belief is that during his trip he developed ideas which will be incorporated into the outdoor garden, for which the plans in general have already been drawn. There is a revival of talk that the proposed hotel will also be constructed. For this structure the foundation has been waiting the past four years, having been laid at an expense of more than $20,000.

LONG BEACH.

STEEL IN EYE, BALL MUST GO.

BLACKSMITH VICTIM OF VERY PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Mule Kicks Man in Forehead, Cutting Two-Inch Gash to Bone—Lumber Worker Has Leg Broken Under Log—Gas Company Employee Is Burned in Miniature Explosion.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 6.—J. F. Kempley, a blacksmith at Fourth street and American avenue, will probably lose his eyesight as the result of an accident this morning. He was at work at his anvil when a piece of steel about the size of the end of his thumb flew up and struck him in the right eye. Physicians say it will be necessary to remove the eyeball and fear the sight of the other eye will also be affected.

W. C. Moore, living near Wilmington, was kicked in the head by a mule this morning and lay unconscious for more than an hour. He came to Long Beach for treatment. He has a gash two inches long in his forehead, cut to the skull bone.

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED.

When the report of the receiver of the Citizens' Savings Bank was filed with Judge James this morning the injunction restraining the officers from managing its affairs was dissolved, with the proviso that the receiver shall pay out the $58,000 due the non-consenting depositors. The bank will reopen for business next week.

While at work in the yards of the Hardwood Lumber Company at Ostend, the metal part of a cant hook which J. E. Walker was using broke and Walker fell over backward. His left leg caught under a log and was fractured.

Mord Millard, an employé of the Long Beach Gas Company, on going to the fire box at the plant to turn off a burner, was badly burned about the face and arms by an explosion of collected gas. The flames enveloped the upper part of his body. The wounds, though painful, are not serious.

SAN JOAQUIN LECTURE.

On the invitation of the management of the Hotel Virginia, Messrs. Bledsoe and Platt will give an illustrated lecture on the San Joaquin Valley and higher Sierras in the salon tomorrow night. There are seating accommodations for a large audience. The San Joaquin Valley Lecture and Information Bureau is at The Times branch office, No. 531 South Spring street, Los Angeles, and is accomplishing splendid results for the valley. The people of Long Beach will not be disappointed in the fine panoramas they will see or in the address.

A meeting at Carroll Park Schoolhouse last night was attended by 125 citizens of Belmont Heights, who were refused the use of the schoolhouse and City Hall in their own municipality. Mayor Wyndham, Councilman Callahan and Attorneys Long and Swaffield told the suburbanites that if consolidation is effected all the taxes paid in would be spent in the municipality for street improvements, lights, fire and police protection, and in addition Long Beach would build a firehouse and furnish an automobile engine.

RUN OVER BY AUTO.

Johnny Marshall, aged 11, was struck down by an auto driven by G. F. Lowe, a grocer, yesterday evening, on American avenue. The wheels passed over his body badly bruising his face and limbs. No bones were broken. Mr. Lowe turned a corner rapidly and ran down the boy before he could stop.

A live devil fish, two and a half feet across, was caught off the wharf this morning, and gave its captors a lively fight before it was put into a jar. It wrapped its tentacles around the arm of Fisherman Counts, and was with difficulty torn loose.

Beet Sugar Factory at Chino Shuts Down After Successful Run. Realty Changes.

POMONA, Nov. 6.—The large beet sugar factory at Chino shut down for the season last night after the most successful run in the history of the institution. About 80,000 tons of beets were sliced, which made over 22,277,000 pounds of sugar. The Chino Land and Water Company have brought about 3000 head of cattle from pasturage in the hills to the silos near Chino to be fattened on the beet pulp. The factory commenced its run in July and has been working crews night and day ever since. Much improvement is manifest in Chino in the past few months and there is a good demand for property there.

REALTY CHANGES.

Activity in realty circles continues active here. Emmons E. Marshall yesterday sold his building on East Second street, formerly the old postoffice, to J. B. Rutherford for a reported price of $20,500, through the agency of J. C. Enell.

Frederick Schwan has traded his flats on West Center street and a house and lot for a ten-acre orange and lemon grove at Cucamonga with Hamilton Johnson through the agency of F. E. Harrison.

Morris H. Wilson has sold three lots in the Ganesha Park tract and two in the Walker-Dole tract.

A plantation medley by the members of the Girls' Glee Club was a feature.

CUTTER AT SAN PEDRO.

Perry's Crew Happy at Prospect of Spending the Winter in the Sunny South.

SAN PEDRO, Nov. 6.—The United States revenue cutter Perry dropped anchor in the outer harbor today with forty-two men and officers happy over the prospect of spending a winter in the sunny south. Last winter the Perry spent the winter at Juneau, Alaska, and the season before at Seattle.

The Perry is the smallest cutter in the cruising fleet, being only 451 tons register. She was the only one to capture a seal poacher last summer in Alaskan waters. This was the Japanese schooner Teryu Maru with seventeen men. Three of the men caught red-handed shooting seals were convicted at Valdez.

The only stop made by the Perry on the cruise from Valdez to San Pedro was at Seattle.

SAN PEDRO.

SHOVELS CHANGE HARBOR FRONT.

APPEARANCE MUCH ALTERED BY IMPROVEMENTS.

Development of Minor Fill and Cutting Away of Nob Hill Give Town a Much Different Look—Filling of Submerged Land Makes Sites for Warehouses.

SAN PEDRO, Nov. 6.—Harbor improvements are making notable alterations in the appearance of the waterfront. One of the greatest changes that will take place in the physical aspect of the front within the next few months will be the development of the Minor fill and the cutting down of Nob Hill. Although these two projects are more than a mile apart at extreme ends of the business section the one is an accompaniment of the other.

It is semi-officially announced that a big steam shovel will soon begin eating its way into the hill on the property of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and loading the dirt on to trains of dump cars to be hauled to the outer harbor where there are 173 acres on the Minor fill that will be made into sites for warehouses and terminals. Already the train of cars and an engine are on the ground ready for the work. The dirt will be hauled over on the Pacific Electric tracks, which have lately been extended out over the submerged land to be filled over a trestle.

While the filling of submerged land is the making of sites for warehouses in the outer harbor the removal of dirt from the hill will make available acres of land on the inner harbor for other commercial enterprises requiring access to the water front. The property of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company comprises about thirty acres. Most of this is level land at the entrance to Happy Valley, there being but four or five acres covered by the north end of Nob Hill.

BUILDERS BUSY.

A building boom seems to be in sight here. Since consolidation there has been an influx of population that has filled up dwellings and apartment houses until it is almost impossible for the newcomer to find a place to live.

There were thirty-three permits issued last month aggregating $20,843. Nine of these were for new cottages that will cost about $1200 each. The National Lumber Company is building a brick dry kiln for lumber on Terminal Island that will cost $3570 and the San Pedro Lumber Company is erecting a shed that will cost $3000. Twelve permits for additions and alterations to cost $3045 were issued. There were thirty-three plumbing permits and fifteen gas piping permits.

In September the building permits numbered fourteen and the aggregate was but $11,537. A permit will be taken out soon for the new Elks' Home to be built at the corner of Seventh and Palos Verdes streets. This will be a three-story building, costing $34,000. It will have four store rooms on the ground floor with offices and lodge and banquet halls above.

Among the dwellings for which permits were issued were these: Thomas B. Stephenson, No. 3623 Pacific avenue, $2500; N. W. Jackson, No. 333 Dodson street, $750; C. N. Crog, No. 628 Seventh street, $2000; Charles Robertson, No. 400 West Tenth street, $1500; John H. Mathlin, No. 524 Sepulveda street, $850; Salt Lake Railroad, Terminal Island, $500; Capt. Espp, No. 737 West Fourteenth street, $500; Kornsto Lindholm, No. 537 O'Farrell street, $900; Anna McMahon, No. 271 West Fifteenth street, $1550.

A. C. Hall of Los Angeles will begin the erection of a twenty-room flat building on Beacon street between Eight and Ninth streets within a few days. It will be two stories in heighth and contain four modern flats. This week permits were issued to F. M. Cannon for a six-room dwelling at No. 211 Sepulveda street, $2000; Louis White, eight-room two-story dwelling at No. 811 South Gaffey street, $3000.

"Hotel del Coronado" is booming.

CHECKS NO GOOD.

CALLS HIMSELF A COUNT, FAILS TO PAY ACCOUNTS.

ANAHEIM, Nov. 6.—A man calling himself "Count" F. P. Von Alsen, but whose real name is believed to be John Morgan, has left this city for parts unknown. He resided here for about two months and leaves behind a number of $5 and $10 checks, drawn on the German-American Bank of this city. The checks were given in payment for board and other bills.

Von Aslen constantly boasted of his great wealth and showed slips representing alleged large deposits made in the local bank. At one time he deposited $25 and checks were honored only to the extent of this amount as the bank officials believed the man was sailing under false colors.

Just before leaving the city the "Count" gave a $10,000 check on a New York bank to his landlady, requesting her to deposit it to his credit here. The check was not accepted by the bank as a telegram from the East stated that the check was bogus. Checks for $2000, $5000 and $2500 drawn against Von Alsen's account here have been received from San Francisco and the banks of that city have been notified that the "Count" has no money on deposit here. If the man was successful in working any of the San Francisco banks it has not been made public here.

OPEN FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

New Ontario Chamber of Commerce Has Municipal Affairs Under Consideration.

ONTARIO, Nov. 6.—The Chamber of Commerce is now organized with a membership of ninety-six. By-laws have been adopted. A meeting has been called for next Thursday evening at which there will be addresses by many public men. A committee appointed to investigate the securing of additional water for the city reported favorably at the last meeting. It is only necessary to raise the money needed, to bring the water into use.

Another matter that a Chamber committee is at work upon is that of finding an available site for a city park. This was unprovided for when the town was laid out. At present, the most favorable site seems to be a strip of land lying north of the Southern Pacific railroad and extending west from Euclid avenue for several blocks. It is expected that, to secure a park now, bonds will have to be voted.

Another matter, upon which action has long been considered, is to change the names of the streets running east and west. At present they are known alphabetically. This is confusing to strangers. It is suggested that they be changed to the names of fruits and trees.

Excess fat is a disease—a dangerous disease.

You read almost every day of people dropping dead from apoplexy, fatty degeneration of the heart, etc., which means that there is too much fat.

Avoid these dangers by using Rengo—nature's remedy for reducing fat.

Rengo is pleasant to take—you eat it like fruit or candy.

It compels the proper assimilation of food by the blood, and the nutriment goes where it belongs and builds up the muscle, brain and nerves, instead of piling up in the form of excess fat.

You can easily reduce fat to the extent of a pound a day by the use of Rengo and do it with perfect safety, for Rengo is harmless.

There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo. For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full sized box, or by mail prepaid, by the Rengo Co., 3257 Rengo Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

FREE The company will gladly send you a 50c box free by mail, if you will write them direct to Detroit, and enclose 10 cents in silver or stamps to help cover postage and packing; no free packages at drug stores.

For sale and recommended in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring and 5th and Broadway.

JOIN OUR MUSICAL CLUB.

No Initation Fee Required; No Money Necessary This Year.

The Only Requirement Is That You Own a Piano; The Music Is Furnished You Free.

On page 5, part VI, is an announcement of extraordinary interest to every one who owns a piano. There is no one who is musically inclined who does not hope at some time to own an AUTOPIANO.

The new club which is being formed and which will be completed before ten days from date, is a rare opportunity for any one who wishes to own an AUTOPIANO. Only fifty AUTOPIANOS will be put out on this club plan and it depends entirely on the make and condition of your old piano as to which class you will be allowed to enter. If you are interested in the matter call, telephone or write to the Bartlett Music Co., 231 South Broadway, opposite the City Hall, at once.

There have been sold in Los Angeles and vicinity nearly a thousand of these AUTOPIANOS; no doubt you have two or three neighbors who have bought one from the Bartlett Music Co. We furnish the music absolutely free and have over fifteen thousand (15,000) rolls in our free library.

We sell only genuine AUTOPIANOS which play 88 notes, every key on the instrument, and the piano can be used in the ordinary way for hand playing as well as with the music rolls. If you have not seen the AUTOPIANO you have not seen the best player piano, as there is nothing in music which it will not play correctly.

When this club of fifty AUTOPIANOS is filled there will be no opportunity to join on the terms offered.

The store will be open day and night for ten days. Will you attend to the matter now?

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, Nov. 6.—As E. E. Sharp and Joe Boyd started to drive from this city to their home in Fullerton last night at breakneck speed the livery horse ran away, demolishing the buggy and nearly killing itself. Charles Lineberger of Fullerton, owner of the horse, had the two men arrested and they were fined $5 each. Sharp paid his fine and Boyd was taken to jail this afternoon to serve out his sentence of five days. The men worked in a nursery near Fullerton.

BURNT-CORK BENEFIT.

For the benefit of the Grand Army Memorial Hall fund, the Sons of Veterans, the Daughters of Veterans and the Ladies' Auxiliary have joined forces to give a minstrel performance next Tuesday evening. Excellent home talent has been engaged to take part in the show, which will be well staged and be replete with new and original songs, dances and jokes. The performance will be in Blanchard Hall.

Inner Tubes

We've been telling you how good the Grey Seal Inner Tubes are, and how well they meet all requirements. We don't believe any other Tube on the market ever proved so popular in the same period. They're cheaper, too. But this week we will let the user tell the story. Here it is:

"Brawley, Cal., Nov. 1, 1909.
"W. D. Newerf Rubber Co.
"Gentlemen: Kindly send me prices on Inner Tubes. Early last spring I got a Grey Seal Inner Tube from you, and have used it down here in this hot climate all summer. So far, I have had but one leak in it and that was caused by a nail picked up on the road some place, and then it held the air until I pulled the nail out.
"I think the name of the one I got last spring was Grey Seal, 30 by 3½. I want the same kind.
"Very truly Yours,

Never before have I been able to get here hats, so perfect in every respect, at such reasonable prices. This was the outspoken opinion of a well-known lady who received for the first time hats which were made to order by Mrs. Kruseman, milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich. As Mrs. Kruseman makes nothing but order work, she is always reasonable, as she charges only according to materials used and work done, without any other additional expenses. Long personal European experience is the only reason that order work made by Mrs. Kruseman is always perfect, so that she can and fully guarantees all her work. Ladies ordering run no risk at all. Mrs. Kruseman, 1302 Pico, corner Rich, gives retrimming the same careful attention and all work is only strictly first-class.

DRUGGED, ROBBED, SHOT AT.

Russian Tells Police of Narrow Escape He Had at Hands of Italian Bandits.

Peter Vonkofsky, shot through the arm three times and cut about the head and shoulders, told the police last night that he was the victim of Italian bandits who inveigled him into their wagon near Burbank on the pretense of giving him a job.

Vonkofsky, who lives in the Russian colony of Los Angeles, had gone to Burbank to look for work, so he said. On the way in, he met a wagon driven by two Italians and he asked them for employment. They told him that they owned a ranch near San Pedro and would give him work if he accompanied them at once.

The Russian says that he climbed into the wagon, which was loaded with boxes of fruit, etc., and that the men gave him a drink of sweet wine, after which he went to sleep. When he awoke, he saw the two Italians bending over him in the wagon. They had robbed him, he says, of $25 in money, his shoes and a glass scarf pin.

Vonkofsky jumped out of the wagon and the two Italians cut at him with knives as he jumped, then fired several shots at him. He could give no description of the robbers.

AROUND THE WORLD ON PICTURE-TALKS.

Two Local Students Tackle a Long Trip With Short Purses and Win. Personal Experiences of Travelers Exciting and Amusing.

BY CLAUDE BRADEN.

TO GO from Los Angeles to Los Angeles by the longest route—twenty-five thousand miles and around the world—with practically no money to spend on traveling, looked like a possibility to two young men in college at Claremont, and they tackled and accomplished the trip. They got through without manual labor, though frequently their exchequer dwindled to a few cents and meals were not in sight. Some of their adventures in strange faraway lands were full of thrills, and oftentimes funny. These are set forth in the following account by one of the wayfarers.

Fritz and I were walking down the campus at Pomona College one afternoon, discussing an illustrated lecture of travel, which we had heard the evening before.

"Some time I am going to take a trip around the world and see these things for myself," I said.

"So am I," replied Fritz.

"Let's go next year."

We shook hands, and the trip was decided upon. We also decided at that time not to put over $500 a piece into it.

For a month or six weeks we discussed various means of earning our way around the earth. We thought that it would not be wise to try to work our way with manual labor. After much consideration, we decided to give illustrated lectures of the United States. We provided ourselves with a first-class lantern and the best [illegible]lides obtainable. The slides were of [illegible]e various scenic wonders of the [illegible]ntry—New York, Washington, D. [illegible] and a number of other subjects [illegible] we thought would be of interest [illegible]eigners.

[illegible] left Pasadena on June 23, last [illegible] and visited the Yosemite Valley, [illegible] Mariposa Big Tree Grove, Lake [illegible]e and other places of scenic in[illegible]t along the Pacific Coast, going [illegible]r north as British Columbia.

[illegible] August 11, 1908, when the Pacific [illegible] liner Siberia left San Francisco, [illegible] of the most enthusiastic passen[illegible]s were Fritz Macdonald and Claude Bradan. We had tickets as far as Manila, and a little extra money in our pocket.

We stopped two weeks in the Hawaiian Islands, and gave one lecture there. Living expenses are so high in Honolulu that our stay cost us over twice as much as we received from our lecture.

When we arrived in Yokohama we were met by Mr. Odanaka, a former Pomona College student. He took us in charge, and a few hours later we were comfortably located in a Japanese hotel in Tokio. As we entered we were requested to remove our shoes. After we had done so, house slippers were furnished us. We entered the main hall and started up the very steep stairs. The slippers were so loose, and the stairs so steep, that getting to the top with our slippers on our feet was quite a task. Several times I got about half-way up the stairs and lost one of my slippers. It went tumbling to the bottom, and I went down after it. After this had happened three or four times, I decided that if I was to get to the top it would be policy to remove my slippers and carry them. When we reached the door of our room, we were requested to remove our slippers and enter in our stocking feet. There was no furniture except a little fire box and two little mats. We sat down upon the mats, and soon the girls were busy making a charcoal fire and preparing us a cup of tea.

We were the first Americans, with one exception, ever to stay at the hotel. The servant girls were all very much amused by our coming. Everything we had seemed to interest them, and everything we did seemed to amuse them. They investigated all our belongings, and it was quite impossible to keep them out of the room. There are no locks on the doors of the Japanese hotels, so that a person can enter a room at any time he may choose. The first evening we had twelve Japanese callers. Many of them could not speak a word of English, but they were anxious to see and hear the foreigners.

There is no dining-room in a Japanese hotel, all the meals being served in the guests' rooms. At first we had a hard time eating with chop sticks, but finally became so expert that we could eat poached eggs or any other delicacy.

"IN THE SWIM."

One evening, after we had been at the hotel a week or more, I was taking my bath, when some one spoke to me from the adjoining room. It was really one room divided by a little partition about six feet high. I could not understand the words, but recognized the voice of the proprietor's wife. I had heard much of the Japanese men and women bathing together, and thought that would be a good time to find out if it were true. I had asked Galen Fisher, the national Y.M.C.A. secretary of Japan and several of the missionaries about the character of the hotel, and without exception they had told me it was first class. A number of Japanese and some Americans had also told me that mixed bathing was a thing of the past. On the pretence of wanting soap, I opened the little door in the partition and asked the lady to loan me her soap. At first I could not make her understand what I wanted, but finally I succeeded, and she pleasantly brought it to me. She did not have a stitch of clothing on, but it did not seem to disturb her in the least. Several times, while we were staying in Japanese hotels I went to the bathroom and found it filled with men and women, guests of the hotel, all bathing together.

Our first lecture in Japan was given in Tokio at the Y.M.C.A. We left most of the arrangements with a native secretary, as we thought he could get an audience, better than we. Later we noticed the time for beginning had been placed at 6 o'clock. I asked him if that was not rather early. He replied that they would not begin at that time, that they would probably start at 6:30 or 6:45, or probably at 7 o'clock. After the lecture was over and we figured up we found that we had lost just $1.50. Stock in the Braden-Macdonald touring company took a sudden drop. However, this loss was doubtless a good thing, for it taught us that if we were ever to get around the world, we would have to hustle.

We decided that in traveling over Japan we would have to go third-class. We reasoned that it did not make much difference on short trips, and that we could not afford to go any other way on long trips. One day I said to Fritz: "Let us go to the general passenger agent of the Imperial Railways and see if we cannot get passes to travel on."

A LIVE PASSENGER MAN.

We were expecting to get material for illustrated lectures, and I thought that the advertising Japan would get through these lectures ought to appeal to the general passenger agent. We found out who the agent was, and where his office was located, and called upon him. He listened very attentively, and then he said: "How do I know you are who you represent yourselves to be, and that you are responsible people?" We told him that we would procure a letter from the American Embassy, and also bring several other letters that we thought would be of sufficient proof. In a few days we returned with our credentials. The general passenger agent looked them over, and then asked us where we wantd to go. We told him to all the principal places in Japan. He hesitated a moment, then turned to his secretary and said: "Please make out transportation for Mr. Braden and Mr Macdonald to the various places they wish to visit." After that we traveled

LEMON TO GO UP SOON.

RAILROADS TO HAND SOUR ONE TO SHIPPERS.

Increase of Fifteen Cents Per Hundred Pounds, Announced by Transcontinental Freight Bureau Between California and Eastern Points, to Become Effective December Sixth.

On December 6 the increase of 15 cents per 100 pounds announced by the Transcontinental Freight Bureau between California and eastern points on lemons will become effective. The tariff has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and on that date lemon shippers will pay extra toll.

A great clamor was raised by both growers and shippers, and a lengthy protest filed against putting the rate in force. This, according to H. A. Jones, freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific, was carefully considered, but the railroads maintain that the increase is justified, and will adhere to the original announcement. The increase was intended to apply November 1, but the roar of the shippers caused action to be postponed until the protest could be heard. Officials say the apparent increase is not really such. Some years ago, as a temporary measure, the rate on lemons was reduced from $1.25 to $1, and the increase is simply restoring a portion of the old rate. Shippers should get consolation out of that fact, according to the railroad view of the matter.

Lemons move in practically a ceaseless stream. One season ended October 31; the next followed close, November 1. Last year about 6000 cars were moved. This year the crop will be short at least 1000 cars, according to railroad officials. The increase is effected in time to affect the entire movement, and strong pressure is to be exerted to have some reduction made, according to reports.

SERIES OF LITTLE FIRES.

The fire department was kept busy yesterday by a series of alarms. None of the fires was of consequence. Children playing with matches ignited E. J. Nordquist's barn, in the rear of No. 1422 Bellevue avenue. Neighbors put out the blaze. Sparks from a chimney reached W. R. Burke's rooming-house at No. 949 South Broadway. The damage was about $25. A fence in the rear of No. 3713 Central avenue, owned by Don McClandlish, was destroyed by flames. A grass fire at First and Ohio streets alarmed the neighbors. It was put out, after it burned over two lots.

MONEY AND GOODS GONE.

Mrs. William Fullerton of No. 401 Lamar street reported to the police yesterday that $25, several dress patterns and dress goods valued at $70 have been stolen from her home.

TOWERING.

FAR SKYWAR HOTEL TO

Plans for Eighteen-Sto Alexandria Up.

City May Be Asked to Lift Height Limit.

Some Councilmen Favoring Policy Change.

A skyscraper hotel building, the first in Los Angeles, is the plan of the Bilicke-Rowan Company for the improvement of the Alexandria, Fifth and Spring streets, already one of the famed hostelries of the world.

Planning expansion of the beautiful structure to the Broadway frontage of the land owned by the company, it has been found that business prudence requires larger additions than may be made under the limit of height—150 feet—adopted by the city as its policy a few years ago.

The acquisition of ninety-six feet additional on Spring street will not, in the judgment of the company, furnish enough room for the enlargement deemed necessary.

In an effort to make the skyscraper plans possible, John S. Mitchell, manager of the Hollenbeck, and one of the members of the Bilicke-Rowan Company, called at the City Hall yesterday to talk to Councilmen and other officials about an application for a change of the building ordinance increasing the height limit to probably 250 feet.

He explained that it is the purpose to build a sixteen-story structure facing on the Spring-street and Broadway frontages, and at the Spring and Broadway fronts two extra stories, making the total eighteen. Between the two extra stories facing Fifth street, a tropical roof garden, unique in its character and original in many of its conceptions, is to be a feature.

WILL HAVE SUPPORT.

The magnitude of the improvement, which may cost in excess of $1,000,000, and the appearance of need for an exception to the city's general policy as to the height of buildings, appealed to several Councilmen, and the proposal to change the [illegible] have support when presented on Tuesday, if it is decided to bring it then. The return of A. C. Bilicke will probably determine the question.

Mr. Mitchell also saw the building inspector and the Board of Public Works, but did not get reassuring answers from either. J. J. Backus, chief inspector of buildings, declares it will not be possible for him to recommend any change in the ordinance, because the policy has already defeated high building plans by others, particularly the Story block, just nearing completion at Broadway and Sixth street, and has also been the chief obstacle to the building of a sixteen-story office structure by a trust company at Sixth and Spring streets.

The plan for increasing the capacity of the Alexandria [illegible]fold presents a concrete case where the policy of limiting height to 150 feet—practically ten stories—may be considered in all its phases. Those who favor the continuation of the policy say it must be maintained because of the buildings that have been constructed in compliance with it.

INSPECTOR OPPOSES CHANGE.

Its [illegible] be for decades [illegible] stands by the pres[illegible] of sky-line, the admission [illegible] inspector, air to the streets, the distribution [illegible] huge structures over a large area, are just as much needed now and in the future as when the policy was adopted, according to his view.

Those who favor a change argue that the business part of the city has spread over a large area already, that there is a tendency to concentration, and that this means that the skyscraper will become a business necessity. In the case of the Alexandria, it is pointed out, it would be impossible to gain the capacity planned by the acquisition of enough land to fit a building only ten stories high, for the land would cost an enormous amount, so valuable have adjacent building sites become. The only outlet is upward, and the plans of the company cannot be made to meet the anticipated demand of future business if the 150-foot limit is preserved. It is also pointed out that the change would work no injury to other buildings, as it would permit their growth upward.

GRIEVING WIFE HEARS.

Gets Word from Her Husband Who Has Been Missing, Saying That He Will Return Home.

Within a few hours before the time when friends came to inform her that the body of a man found floating in the ocean near Long Beach Tuesday might be that of her husband, Mrs. D. T. Hill, corner of Fourth and Eucalyptus streets, Palms, heard from her missing spouse.

Hill is a building contractor at Palms, who had offices in the same building where he lived. He disappeared October 19, and was not heard from until yesterday, when his wife received a letter from him, saying that he will return home before the 15th inst.

The fact that the man whose body was found in the ocean had two front teeth missing, which corresponded with a description of Hill, as well as the similarity of complexion and general contour of features, led to the belief that he was the missing citizen of Palms.

At the time of his disappearance H boarded a car for Los Angeles, and said that he was going to do some shopping. He had considerable mon with him when he left, and when did not return it was feared that might have met foul play. Later the were hints of money difficulties, a no special search was made.

Whatever his difficulties may ha been the missing contractor has gla dened his wife with news of his whe abouts, and mentions no financial d ficulties as his reason for departi suddenly.

HEAD CUT BY FALL.

Abe Larner, 5 years old, sustained severe scalp wound yesterday wh he fell head first from a fence n his home at No. 608 North Figue street. The police surgeons sewed the cut.

The complete official ballot for this week's election, marked for party candidates.

FOR THE GUIDANCE of voters of Los Angeles, the Republican City Central Committee has sent by mail to each of them a sample of the ballot to be used at the primary nominating election of next Wednesday. This sample ballot is stamped with a cross opposite the name of each candidate indorsed by the Republican convention of September 23, and on the reverse side is printed a communication to the citizens, calling to their attention the fact that the crosses indicate the candidates approved by this great gathering of party delegates, representing every precinct in the city.

The communication to voters, which is signed by D. C. Casselman, chairman, and Dudley Robinson, secretary, of the Republican City Central Committee, is as follows:

"Mr. Citizen of Los Angeles:

"You are vitally interested in this letter and we respectfully submit the following for your careful consideration.

"At an advisory convention of 2000 representative citizens, the candidates marked with an "X" on the other side of this letter were the choice of the Republican party.

"They will give you a sane, safe, rational and progressive administration of city affairs.

"They represent no individual clique, or faction. They have the indorsement of a great political party directly responsible to the people—a party which has always given this city a competent and creditable administration.

"All of our candidates are good men, with splendid records of previous service in public office, or in the business and professional life of this city."

In respect to Mr. Smith, the following facts about his record are given:

"He has lived here forty years. He is a large property owner.

"He served honorably and faithfully as chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council from 1905 to 1907.

"In 1905 he reduced the tax rate from $1.40 to $1.20.

"In 1906 he again reduced the tax rate from $1.20 to $1.16.

"During the time he was chairman of the Finance Committee, no city employé had to wait for his wages, and no other demands against the city were held up on technicalities or for lack of funds.

"There was no deficit during his administration, but, at the end of each fiscal year, a substantial surplus.

"He was responsible for the street car fender legislation.

"He voted against the river-bed franchise.

"At the most critical period of the Owens River proposition, his personal efforts averted a delay of two years which would have been fatal to the success of that great enterprise, as the records of the City Council will show.

"No man knows the city's needs better than he, or is better qualified, by successful business experience, to cope with the great municipal questions that will confront us during the next two years.

"Party principles are at stake. Restore the Republican party to the control of city affairs in the interest of progress, prosperity and civic peace, which we need so badly at this period in our city.

"Mark your ballot like the sample on the reverse hereof, and take no chances by voting for unknown or untried men."

SCIENTISTS STANDING FIRM.

NO SYMPATHY IN LOS ANGELES WITH MRS. STETSON.

Local Practitioners Show Little Disposition to Talk on the Subject, Except in a General Way, and Usually Refer Inquiries to the Publication Committee.

The announcement from New York hat Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson had been ustained by the First Church of hrist, Scientist, and that no attention hatever would be paid to the edict f the directors of the mother church n Boston, was read with wide interst in this city. Mrs. Stetson was harged with false teaching and inorrect practice, and as punishment er license to practice Christian Science was revoked for a period of three ears. The action of the New York hurch was to pass resolutions susaining Mrs. Stetson on every point.

A number of local practitioners were alked with yesterday by a Times re- rter, to discover if there is any symathy here with the New York church its determination to become inde- ndent of Mrs. Eddy, and there seems be none, though there was little sposition to talk about it.

"Why, I have never given the mat- r much attention," said Dr. John F. oley. "According to our bylaws there n be no sympathy with the New ork church, for there is only one ader. Mrs. Stetson is not a leader; e is simply a practitioner, and no- dy will follow after her. It is pure- a local question."

rs. Rebecca P. Gay, a practitioner, said: "I don't think you'll find any defection here, but we don't have anything to say about it; that's not our field."

F. P. Reed, also a practitioner, said: "It's purely a local affair; call on Mr. Brown; he'll give you all there is about it."

"There will be no disturbance whatever here," said Dr. W. E. Boggis; "most all the workers here understand the case, but the laymen don't pay much attention to it."

Mrs. Fannie Reese Cunningham said. "You know Mr. Brown is the Publication Committee here; well, that's all I can answer you."

William E. Brown, who is the Committee of Publication for California, said that his sole function, with the aid of seventy assistants throughout the State, is to correct errors that find their way into the papers, concerning Christian Science.

"There's really little to say about the Stetson case. There's nothing for her to do but accept the judgment of the mother church. Christian Science, like every other movement, may find it necessary to purge itself occasionally, and this is a case of that kind. We are forbidden to treat anybody without their consent, and treatment must be for one purpose only—that of benefiting the patient. Mrs. Stetson seems to have lapsed into practice for selfish ends, and Christian Science will not countenance that."

HAYNES OPERATIONS.

October Report of Progress Is Considered Very Gratifying to Company.

Complete reports for October of the operations on the Haynes property at Jerome, Ariz., show very gratifying results in footage on the two drifts which are being driven from the seventh station in the Haynes shaft, to open ground at two points prospected by the diamond drill borings in the early days of development.

During October a total frontage in the two drifts of 265 feet—141 in No. 2 and 124 in No. 3—was made with all necessary track and air pipes laid. This brings No. 2 197 feet in from the station and No. 3 drift 160 feet in from where it left drift No. 2, fifteen feet northwest of the station itself.

The formation passed through in the two drifts has changed constantly, showing diorite, quartzite, jasper and some porphyry with constant panels carrying considerable sulphides of iron and some sulphides of copper. The latter were sufficiently strong at one point in the No. 2 recently to warrant its being classed as a low-grade ore body.

For much of the distance made in both drifts during October, there has been considerable jasper, which has made drilling and the working very hard; but thanks to excellent equipment and to the ample power provided, good progress has been made, notwithstanding these conditions.

It is reported that the face of No. 2 is making considerable very acid water. This drift is approaching the porphyry dike, which is its objective point and which is expected to carry enrichment. The flow of strongly acid water increasing so fast as this drift approaches this dike, may well be taken as a particularly favorable indication of ore in close proximity.

At the end of October the face of No. 2 was all in jasper, which showed a quantity of sulphides in parallel bands. This jasper is considered to be a continuation of the jasper dike which all who are familiar with the United Verde will remember as showing up so prominently at the surface, to the southwest of the United Verde's big shaft. In fact, Mr. Campbell, the engineer in charge of the Haynes states that there is no difference in the general structure of these two bodies of jasper and that a transit reading practically confirms the belief of it being one body.

AROUND THE WORLD ON PICTURE-TALKS.

Two Local Students Tackle a Long Trip With Short Purses and Win. Personal Experiences of Travelers Exciting and Amusing.

BY CLAUDE BRADEN.

TO GO from Los Angeles to Los Angeles by the longest route—twenty-five thousand miles and around the world—with practically no money to spend on traveling, looked like a possibility to two young men in college at Claremont, and they tackled and accomplished the trip. They got through without manual labor, though frequently their exchequer dwindled to a few cents and meals were not in sight. Some of their adventures in strange faraway lands were full of thrills, and oftentimes funny. These are set forth in the following account by one of the wayfarers.

Fritz and I were walking down the campus at Pomona College one afternoon, discussing an illustrated lecture of travel, which we had heard the evening before.

"Some time I am going to take a trip around the world and see these things for myself," I said.

"So am I," replied Fritz.

"Let's go next year."

We shook hands, and the trip was decided upon. We also decided at that time not to put over $500 a piece into it.

For a month or six weeks we discussed various means of earning our way around the earth. We thought that it would not be wise to try to work our way with manual labor. After much consideration, we decided to give illustrated lectures of the United States. We provided ourselves with a first-class lantern and the best slides obtainable. The slides were of the various scenic wonders of the country—New York, Washington, D. C., and a number of other subjects that we thought would be of interest to foreigners.

We left Pasadena on June 23, last year and visited the Yosemite Valley, the Mariposa Big Tree Grove, Lake Tahoe and other places of scenic interest along the Pacific Coast, going as far north as British Columbia.

On August 11, 1908, when the Pacific Mail liner Siberia left San Francisco, two of the most enthusiastic passengers were Frits Macdonald and Claude Bradan. We had tickets as far as Manila, and a little extra money in our pocket.

We stopped two weeks in the Hawaiian Islands, and gave one lecture there. Living expenses are so high in Honolulu that our stay cost us over twice as much as we received from our lecture.

When we arrived in Yokohama we were met by Mr. Odanaka, a former Pomona College student. He took us in charge, and a few hours later we were comfortably located in a Japanese hotel in Tokio. As we entered we were requested to remove our shoes. After we had done so, house slippers were furnished us. We entered the main hall and started up the very steep stairs. The slippers were so loose, and the stairs so steep, that getting to the top with our slippers on our feet was quite a task. Several times I got about half-way up the stairs and lost one of my slippers. It went tumbling to the bottom, and I went down after it. After this had happened three or four times, I decided that if I was to get to the top it would be policy to remove my slippers and carry them. When we reached the door of our room we were requested to remove our slippers and enter in our stocking feet. There was no furniture except a little fire box and two little mats. We sat down upon the mats, and soon the girls were busy making a charcoal fire and preparing us a cup of tea.

We were the first Americans, with one exception, ever to stay at the hotel. The servant girls were all very much amused by our coming. Everything we had seemed to interest them, and everything we did seemed to amuse them. They investigated all our belongings, and it was quite impossible to keep them out of the room. There are no locks on the doors of the Japanese hotels, so that a person can enter a room at any time he may choose. The first evening we had twelve Japanese callers. Many of them could not speak a word of English, but they were anxious to see and hear the foreigners.

There is no dining-room in a Japanese hotel, all the meals being served in the guests' rooms. At first we had a hard time eating with chop sticks, but finally became so expert that we could eat poached eggs or any other delicacy.

"IN THE SWIM."

One evening, after we had been at the hotel a week or more, I was taking my bath, when some one spoke to me from the adjoining room. It was really one room divided by a little partition about six feet high. I could not understand the words, but recognized the voice of the proprietor's wife. I had heard much of the Japanese men and women bathing together, and thought that would be a good time to find out if it were true. I had asked Galen Fisher, the national Y.M.C.A. secretary of Japan and several of the missionaries about the character of the hotel, and without exception they had told me it was first class. A number of Japanese and some Americans had also told me that mixed bathing was a thing of the past. On the pretence of wanting soap, I opened the little door in the partition and asked the lady to loan me her soap. At first I could not make her understand what I wanted, but finally I succeeded, and she pleasantly brought it to me. She did not have a stitch of clothing on, but it did not seem to disturb her in the least. Several times, while we were staying in Japanese hotels I went to the bathroom and found it filled with men and women, guests of the hotel, all bathing together.

Our first lecture in Japan was given in Tokio at the Y.M.C.A. We left most of the arrangements with a native secretary, as we thought he could get an audience, better than we. Later we noticed the time for beginning had been placed at 6 o'clock. I asked him if that was not rather early. He replied that they would not begin at that time, that they would probably start at 6:30 or 6:45, or probably at 7 o'clock. After the lecture was over and we figured up we found that we had lost just $1.50. Stock in the Braden-Macdonald touring company took a sudden drop. However, this loss was doubtless a good thing, for it taught us that if we were ever to get around the world, we would have to hustle.

We decided that in traveling over Japan we would have to go third-class. We reasoned that it did not make much difference on short trips, and that we could not afford to go any other way on long trips. One day I said to Fritz: "Let us go to the general passenger agent of the Imperial Railways and see if we cannot get passes to travel on."

A LIVE PASSENGER MAN.

We were expecting to get material for illustrated lectures, and I thought that the advertising Japan would get through these lectures ought to appeal to the general passenger agent. We found out who the agent was, and where his office was located, and called upon him. He listened very attentively, and then he said: "How do I know you are who you represent yourselves to be, and that you are responsible people?" We told him that we would procure a letter from the American Embassy, and also bring several other letters that we thought would be of sufficient proof. In a few days we returned with our credentials. The general passenger agent looked them over, and then asked us where we wantd to go. We told him to all the principal places in Japan. He hesitated a moment, then turned to his secretary and said: "Please make out transportation for Mr. Braden and Mr Macdonald to the various places they wish to visit." After that we traveled

LEMON TARIFF TO GO UP SOON.

RAILROADS TO HAND SOUR ONE TO SHIPPERS.

Increase of Fifteen Cents Per Hundred Pounds, Announced by Transcontinental Freight Bureau Between California and Eastern Points, to Become Effective December Sixth.

On December 6 the increase of 15 cents per 100 pounds announced by the Transcontinental Freight Bureau between California and eastern points on lemons will become effective. The tariff has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and on that date lemon shippers will pay extra toll.

A great clamor was raised by both growers and shippers, and a lengthy protest filed against putting the rate in force. This, according to H. A. Jones, freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific, was carefully considered, but the railroads maintain that the increase is justified, and will adhere to the original announcement. The increase was intended to apply November 1, but the roar of the shippers caused action to be postponed until the protest could be heard. Officials say the apparent increase is not really such. Some years ago, as a temporary measure, the rate on lemons was reduced from $1.25 to $1, and the increase is simply restoring a portion of the old rate. Shippers should get consolation out of that fact, cacording to the railroad view of the matter.

Lemons move in practically a ceaseless stream. One season ended October 31; the next followed close, November 1. Last year about 6000 cars were moved. This year the crop will be short at least 1000 cars, according to railroad officials. The increase is effected in time to affect the entire movement, and strong pressure is to be exerted to have some reduction made, according to reports.

SERIES OF LITTLE FIRES.

The fire department was kept busy yesterday by a series of alarms. None of the fires was of consequence. Children playing with matches ignited E. J. Nordquist's barn, in the rear of No. 1422 Bellevue avenue. Neighbors put out the blaze. Sparks from a chimney reached W. R. Burke's rooming-house at No. 949 South Broadway. The damage was about $25. A fence in the rear of No. 3712 Central avenue, owned by Don McClandlish, was destroyed by flames. A grass fire at First and Ohio streets alarmed the neighbors. It was put out, after it burned over two lots.

MONEY AND GOODS GONE.

Mrs. William Fullerton of No. 401 Lamar street reported to the police yesterday that $25, several dress patterns and dress goods valued at $70 have been stolen from her home.

FAR SKYWARD HOTEL TO GO?

Plans for Eighteen-Story Alexandria Up.

City May Be Asked to Lift Height Limit.

Some Councilmen Favoring Policy Change.

A skyscraper hotel building, the first in Los Angeles, is the plan of the Bilicke-Rowan Company for the improvement of the Alexandria, Fifth and Spring streets, already one of the famed hostelries of the world.

Planning expansion of the beautiful structure to the Broadway frontage of the land owned by the company, it has been found that business prudence requires larger additions than may be made under the limit of height—150 feet—adopted by the city as its policy a few years ago.

The acquisition of ninety-six feet additional on Spring street will not, in the judgment of the company, furnish enough room for the enlargement deemed necessary.

In an effort to make the skyscraper plans possible, John S. Mitchell, manager of the Hollenbeck, and one of the members of the Bilicke-Rowan Company, called at the City Hall yesterday to talk to Councilmen and other officials about an application for a change of the building ordinance increasing the height limit to probably 250 feet.

He explained that it is the purpose to build a sixteen-story structure facing on the Spring-street and Broadway frontages, and at the Spring and Broadway fronts two extra stories, making the total eighteen. Between the two extra stories facing Fifth street, a tropical roof garden, unique in its character and original in many of its conceptions, is to be a feature.

WILL HAVE SUPPORT.

The magnitude of the improvement, which may cost in excess of $1,000,000, and the appearance of need for an exception to the city's general policy as to the height of buildings, appealed to several Councilmen, and the proposal to change the ordinance will have support when presented on Tuesday, if it is decided to bring it then. The return of A. C. Bilicke will probably determine the question.

Mr. Mitchell also saw the building inspector and the Board of Public Works, but did not get reassuring answers from either. J. J. Backus, chief inspector of buildings, declares it will not be possible for him to recommend any change in the ordinance, because the policy has already defeated high building plans by others, particularly the Story block, just nearing completion at Broadway and Sixth street, and has also been the chief obstacle to the building of a sixteen-story office structure by a trust company at Sixth and Spring streets.

The plan for increasing the capacity of the Alexandria more than two-fold presents a concrete case where the policy of limiting height to 150 feet—practically ten stories—may be considered in all its phases. Those who favor the continuation of the policy say it must be maintained because of the buildings that have been constructed in compliance with it.

INSPECTOR OPPOSES CHANGE.

One of those who stands by the present policy is the building inspector. He says the same reasons that led to its adoption are potent now, and will be for decades to come. Preservation of sky-line, the admission of sun and air to the streets, the distribution of huge structures over a large area, are just as much needed now and in the future as when the policy was adopted, according to his view.

Those who favor a change argue that the business part of the city has spread over a large area already, that there is a tendency to concentration, and that this means that the skyscraper will become a business necessity. In the case of the Alexandria, it is pointed out, it would be impossible to gain the capacity planned by the acquisition of enough land to fit a building only ten stories high, for the land would cost an enormous amount, so valuable have adjacent building sites become. The only outlet is upward, and the plans of the company cannot be made to meet the anticipated demand of future business if the 150-foot limit is preserved. It is also pointed out that the change would work no injury to other buildings, as it would permit their growth upward.

GRIEVING WIFE HEARS.

Gets Word from Her Husband Who Has Been Missing, Saying That He Will Return Home.

Within a few hours before the time when friends came to inform her that the body of a man found floating in the ocean near Long Beach Tuesday might be that of her husband, Mrs. D T. Hill, corner of Fourth and Eucalyptus streets, Palms, heard from he missing spouse.

Hill is a building contractor a Palms, who had offices in the sam building where he lived. He disap peared October 19, and was not hear from until yesterday, when his wi received a letter from him, sayin that he will return home before the 15th inst

The fact that the man whose bod was found in the ocean had two fro teeth missing, which correspond with a description of Hill, as well the similarity of complexion and ge eral contour of features, led to the b lief that he was the missing citizen Palms.

At the time of his disappearance Hil boarded a car for Los Angeles, an said that he was going to do som shopping. He had considerable mon with him when he left, and when H did not return it was feared that h might have met foul play. Later the were hints of money difficulties, a no special search was made.

Whatever his difficulties may ha been the missing contractor has gla dened his wife with news of his wher abouts, and mentions no financial d ficulties as his reason for departi suddenly.

The complete official ballot for this week's election, marked for party candidates.

FOR THE GUIDANCE of voters of Los Angeles, the Republican City Central Committee has sent by mail to each of them a sample of the ballot to be used at the primary nominating election of next Wednesday. This sample ballot is stamped with a cross opposite the name of each candidate indorsed by the Republican convention of September 23, and on the reverse side is printed a communication to the citizens, calling to their attention the fact that the crosses indicate the candidates approved by this great gathering of party delegates, representing every precinct in the city.

The communication to voters, which is signed by D. C. Casselman, chairman, and Dudley Robinson, secretary, of the Republican City Central Committee, is as follows:

"Mr. Citizen of Los Angeles:

"You are vitally interested in this letter and we respectfully submit the following for your careful consideration.

"At an advisory convention of 2000 representative citizens, the candidates marked with an "X" on the other side of this letter were the choice of the Republican party.

"They will give you a sane, safe, rational and progressive administration of city affairs.

"They represent no individual clique, or faction. They have the indorsement of a great political party directly responsible to the people—a party which has always given this city a competent and creditable administration.

"All of our candidates are good men, with splendid records of previous service in public office, or in the business and professional life of this city."

In respect to Mr. Smith, the following facts about his record are given:

"He has lived here forty years. He is a large property owner.

"He served honorably and faithfully as chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council from 1905 to 1907.

"In 1905 he reduced the tax rate from $1.40 to $1.20.

"In 1906 he again reduced the tax rate from $1.20 to $1.16.

"During the time he was chairman of the Finance Committee, no city employé had to wait for his wages, and no other demands against the city were held up on technicalities or for lack of funds.

"There was no deficit during his administration, but, at the end of each fiscal year, a substantial surplus.

"He was responsible for the street car fender legislation.

"He voted against the river-bed franchise.

"At the most critical period of the Owens River proposition, his personal efforts averted a delay of two years which would have been fatal to the success of that great enterprise, as the records of the City Council will show.

"No man knows the city's needs better than he, or is better qualified, by successful business experience, to cope with the great municipal questions that will confront us during the next two years.

"Party principles are at stake. Restore the Republican party to the control of city affairs in the interest of progress, prosperity and civic peace, which we need so badly at this period in our city.

"Mark your ballot like the sample on the reverse hereof, and take no chances by voting for unknown or untried men."

UNCOMMUNICATIVE.

SCIENTISTS STANDING FIRM.

NO SYMPATHY IN LOS ANGELES WITH MRS. STETSON.

Local Practitioners Show Little Disposition to Talk on the Subject, Except in a General Way, and Usually Refer Inquiries to the Publication Committee.

The announcement from New York :hat Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson had been ustained by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, and that no attention vhatever would be paid to the edict f the directors of the mother church n Boston, was read with wide interst in this city. Mrs. Stetson was harged with false teaching and inorrect practice, and as punishment er license to practice Christian Scince was revoked for a period of three ears. The action of the New York hurch was to pass resolutions susaining Mrs. Stetson on every point.

A number of local practitioners were ilked with yesterday by a Times reorter, to discover if there is any symathy here with the New York church its determination to become indendent of Mrs. Eddy, and there seems be none, though there was little sposition to talk about it.

"Why, I have never given the matr much attention," said Dr. John F. oley. "According to our bylaws there n be no sympathy with the New ork church, for there is only one ader. Mrs. Stetson is not a leader; e is simply a practitioner, and nody will follow after her. It is purely a local question."

rs. Rebecca P. Gay, a practitioner, said: "I don't think you'll find any defection here, but we don't have anything to say about it; that's not our field."

F. P. Reed, also a practitioner, said: "It's purely a local affair; call on Mr. Brown; he'll give you all there is about it."

"There will be no disturbance whatever here," said Dr. W. E. Boggis; "most all the workers here understand the case, but the laymen don't pay much attention to it."

Mrs. Fannie Reese Cunningham said. "You know Mr. Brown is the Publication Committee here; well, that's all I can answer you."

William E. Brown, who is the Committee of Publication for California, said that his sole function, with the aid of seventy assistants throughout the State, is to correct errors that find their way into the papers, concerning Christian Science.

"There's really little to say about the Stetson case. There's nothing for her to do but accept the judgment of the mother church. Christian Science, like ever other movement, may find it necessary to purge itself occasionally, and this is a case of that kind. We are forbidden to treat anybody without their consent, and treatment must be for one purpose only—that of benefiting the patient. Mrs. Stetson seems to have lapsed into practice for selfish ends, and Christian Science will not countenance that."

HAYNES OPERATIONS.

October Report of Progress Is Considered Very Gratifying to Company.

Complete reports for October of the operations on the Haynes property at Jerome, Ariz., show very gratifying results in footage on the two drifts which are being driven from the seventh station in the Haynes shaft, to open ground at two points prospected by the diamond drill borings in the early days of development.

During October a total frontage in the two drifts of 265 feet—141 in No. 2 and 124 in No. 3—was made with all necessary track and air pipes laid. This brings No. 2 197 feet in from the station and No. 3 drift 160 feet in from where it left drift No. 2, fifteen feet northwest of the station itself.

The formation passed through in the two drifts has changed constantly, showing diorite, quartzite, jasper and some porphyry with constant panels carrying considerable sulphides of iron and some sulphides of copper. The latter were sufficiently strong at one point in the No. 2 recently to warrant its being classed as a low-grade ore body.

For much of the distance made in both drifts during October, there has been considerable jasper, which has made drilling and the working very hard; but thanks to excellent equipment and to the ample power provided, good progress has been made, notwithstanding these conditions.

It is reported that the face of No. 2 is making considerable very acid water. This drift is approaching the porphyry dike, which is its objective point and which is expected to carry enrichment. The flow of strongly acid water increasing so fast as this drift approaches this dike, may well be taken as a particularly favorable indication of ore in close proximity.

At the end of October the face of No. 3 was all in jasper, which showed a quantity of sulphides in parallel bands. This jasper is considered to be a continuation of the jasper dike which all who are familiar with the United Verde will remember as showing up so prominently at the surface, to the southwest of the United Verde's big shaft. In fact, Mr. Campbell, the engineer in charge of the Haynes states that there is no difference in the general structure of these two bodies of jasper and that a transit reading practically confirms the belief of it being one body.

A Brave Man.

Former Gov. William Sprague of Rhode Island celebrated last month his seventy-ninth birthday. He is the only surviving war Governor.

A reporter questioned Gov. Sprague one day at Narragansett about bravery.

"There is a finer bravery shown in civil than in military life," the veteran statesman said. "I remember one of our Providence fire chiefs.

"A green fireman resigned from the Providence service because his chief, he said, was cruel and inhuman.

"'How cruel and inhuman?' they asked him.

"'Why,' the fireman whined, 'at last week's tenement fire he ordered me to carry a section of hose right in between two walls that were just on the point of tumbling.'

"'And what did you do?'

"'I refused, of course. I told the chief it was as much as a man's life was worth to go in there, and I wouldn't do it.'

"'Well, what did the chief do then?'

"'Ha, ha, ha! The crazy fool carried the hose in himself.'"—[Washington Star.

Why He Was Alive.

"Explorers hate to take back or amend anything they have written," said F. S. Dallenbaugh of the American Geographical Society. "They are like the Waldo editor there.

"A man entered the Waldo editor's office and shouted angrily:

"'You said in yesterday's paper that I'd been hanged. It's false. I've never been condemned, let alone hanged.'

"'Well, my friend,' said the editor, 'it's our policy never to issue direct contradictions. They shake the confidence of the reader. But I'll tell you what we'll do for you. We'll say you were cut down before life was extinct.'"

Mistake to Mix Things.

David H. Lane, the Republican leader of Philadelphia, was telling stories at a Republican banquet.

"And it is always a mistake," said Mr. Lane, "to mix politics and religion—politics and prayer.

"There was a preacher out Cinnaminson way who mixed politics and prayer to his cost. He prayed on the eve of a general election:

"'Grant, O Lord, that the great reform party may all hang together.'

"'Amen!' cried a scoffer.

"'Not, O Lord,' resumed the preacher, 'in the sense in which that profane scoffer would have it understood; but let the party hang together in accord and concord.'

"'It's all one to me,' the scoffer again interrupted, 'what cord it is, so long as it's a good, strong one.'"—[Detroit Free Press.

The Editor Got Even.

Mayor Schunk of Dubuque at a recent press banquet recalled a quarrel between two Dubuque editors.

"But Smith," he said, "got the best of Brown unquestionably when Brown, who owned a small farm, bought a mule.

"Smith printed a paragraph about this purchase and headed it 'Extraordinary Case of Self-Possession.'"—[Washington Star.

Strangely enough, there is a good deal of talk about waterways on the cocktail route, now and then.

It is said that Democrats will generally vote for Mr. Farish at the primaries. Well, every little bit helps.

This being the year of the big ballot in Los Angeles, it must also be known as the year of the big wind.

Speaking of Dr. Cook, a man who has taken so many long climbs wouldn't be afraid to take long chances.

A suggestion to remodel our courts has been made. It probably comes from lawyers who usually lose their cases.

We are inclined to the opinion that Chicago is not the place for us to look for diplomats to serve the government.

Surely no voter will be so stupid that he can't make a choice of nine out of seventy-five candidates for the City Council.

We don't exactly remember what kind of a hat Senator La Follette wears, but we see that he is still talking through it.

If Americans are determined to drink wine we are here to say that California ought to have a show to get some of the returns.

With so many men so willing to serve it by holding public office, Los Angeles need fear the future no more than any other city.

Why is it that those ladies who are candidates for the Board of Education have not tacked their pictures to the telegraph poles?

Mr. Bryan did not support Judge Gaynor in the New York campaign, which fact may, to some extent, explain why Gaynor received so many votes.

We think that when Jim Hill said there will be a shortage of food in this country he meant, really, that there might be a shortage of the price if things continue to soar.

Des Moines papers proudly announce that their city is to have "a new hotel." Lordy! And we build them in Los Angeles in bunches from one year's end to another.

A poem entitled "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue" has caused a great stir in England. We don't know whether it refers to Kate Keegan or one of the Pankhurst girls.

A new projectile weighing 1400 pounds, that can be hurled a distance of twenty-five miles from a warship, is under consideration by our government. Let's have it and hope we never need it.

"Southern California seems to need more guide posts," says the Chicago Record-Herald. Yes, with so many candidates, the telephone, telegraph, electric light and trolley poles are not enough.

After all is said and done, perhaps a cheerful, harmless liar is much more to be welcomed than the man or woman who insists on the truth that breaks the heart and leaves behind it an incurable wound.

When you realize that the law never yet prevented a murder or headed off a man from making himself a drunkard, you will have your doubts as to whether the law is all that it is cracked up to be or not.

"Fruit growing in the Far West," reads a headline in an eastern paper. Sure, and as far as California is concerned, fruit will be growing when the East is covered with snow and locked in an icy embrace.

There ought to be no hard feelings among the candidates for City Council. Men who are not acquainted with one another, and most of whom nobody else knows, should not allow their angry passions to rise.

THE CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Good newspapers are, like individuals, guided by reason and subject to the influence of circumstances and conditions. Not always—indeed seldom—have we advocated such a thing as voting a party ticket containing the names of many aspirants to office without a scratch. But we believe it is the only thoroughly intelligent, duly-considered and effective action for a conscientious, patriotic citizen to take in Los Angeles next Wednesday.

We will not conceal the fact that in giving this advice we are considering among other things the future welfare of the Republican party, not only in Los Angeles but in California and in all the States in the Union. There is at the present time a widespread and malicious conspiracy on the part of a numerous and thoroughly-organized body of American citizens to do everything in the power of the conspirators to emasculate the Republican party as to its principles, to weaken its influence in local and national affairs, to prevent the election of stalwart, thoroughgoing Republicans to office high and low. In this conspiracy (and that is the worst part of it) there are a large number of persons who are ostensible members of the Republican party, and yet whose principles are radically opposed to the party doctrines, whose notions are in exact accord with those of the open, active enemies of the Republican party. These insurgent Republicans talk with, advise with, train with, and act with the bitterest enemies of the Republican party and of Republican principles.

If there is a fundamental principle which lies deeper down and does more to sustain the Republican party than that of protection through duties imposed upon imports from abroad we do not know and never heard what that principle was. It is against this fundamental principle that the attacks of recalcitrant Republicans and Democrats in the open are most frequently made and with the greatest violence.

We see very clearly that those who are not of the Republican party are in this conspiracy and are drawing into it as aids all the Republicans they can reach, not for principle's sake, not for the good of the country, not for the good of their own party. The Republican party is triumphantly dominant in nearly every State in the Union with the exception of those composing what is known as the solid South. And Republican principles are taking root and growing vigorously in that section. The growth of the protective tariff idea in the South during the last sixteen years has been marked. Were it not for the negro question, one altogether extraneous from national politics, the growth of the Republican party in these Southern States would be accelerated very greatly. What lies at the root of the conspiracy for the most part is found entirely in the breasts of politicians who are in politics for what there is in the game. They have been office-chasers ever since they have been known in public affairs. They have been office-holders whenever they could reach an office, and many of them have lived on office all their lives. They have been members of hide-bound party organizations among which are many of the most unscrupulously corrupt political bodies the country has ever known. They have belonged to clubs that were as unconscionable in their methods as any Tammany ward boss in the city of New York. That is all these conspirators aim at, all they care for. Outnumbered, discarded in city, State and national elections so often, they have become hungry for the public crib and desperate in their failure to reach it.

The virus of this conspiracy is working broadly all over the United States. A year from this very month we shall be engaged in carrying through a national Congress election. There will be made the most determined, unscrupulous, crooked effort ever seen in any campaign to defeat the Republican candidates for Congress in every State in the American Union. The conspirators are looking ahead to two years later and a Presidential election. We believe their hopes are vain and their efforts will be futile; but the desperation of the cause only adds force to their efforts and increases the deviousness of their ways. They will not succeed in disrupting the Republican party either next year or two years later than that, unless the real Republicans of the country are less intelligent and wide-awake than they have ever been and than we think they are now.

It may seem a long call from the local election this week in Los Angeles to the Congressional election all over the country next fall and to the Presidential election in 1912. But there never has been a time when graver difficulties beset the Republican party than arise out of this hypocritical conspiracy on the part of these so-called non-partisans, falsely-called "reformers," of a great army of greedy office-seekers, of these practical politicians as unscrupulous in their ways of reaching for a public office as they are ardent in their longing for a public crib.

But grave as the danger which besets the Republican party in the State and the nation is in our eyes, that is not the only reason The Times has for departing from its historic record of absolute independence of party ties in local politics to advise all who will listen to reason to vote a straight Republican ticket at the primary election here this week. It is only in outward appearance that The Times is swerving one hair's breadth from its policy ever since the founding of this journal. In principle we are pursuing exactly the same straight and narrow path where our feet have trod for a quarter of a century. We advise the voting of the Republican ticket straight at the primary election next Wednesday because it is the only ticket that has behind it any semblance of public influence. It is the only ticket that represents anything but the personal desire of the candidate to hold office, unless it be the indorsement of a mere clique, boss-ridden by selfish interests, who, through these political tools, hope to control the destinies of the city in the present era so important for the great public enterprises to be carried through.

There are just three courses for any citizen or any journal to take in Los Angeles politics at this moment. One is to take the dictation of these three or four selfish political bosses whom we believe to be as insincere and as dangerous as the old labor-union city government of San Francisco headed by Eugene Schmitz and bossed by Abraham Ruef. In our opinion there is no choice between a city government under the leadership of that San Francisco administration of the recent past and one under the control of men of the reputation and character of E. T. Earl, of Meyer Lissner and the bosses who from behind the scenes are working the wires to defeat the candidates of the Republican convention. Never having taken dictation or suggestion from a political boss of any name or alliance in the past, The Times refuses to take the suggestion or dictation of the bosses who are manipulating the present efforts to get control of the city government.

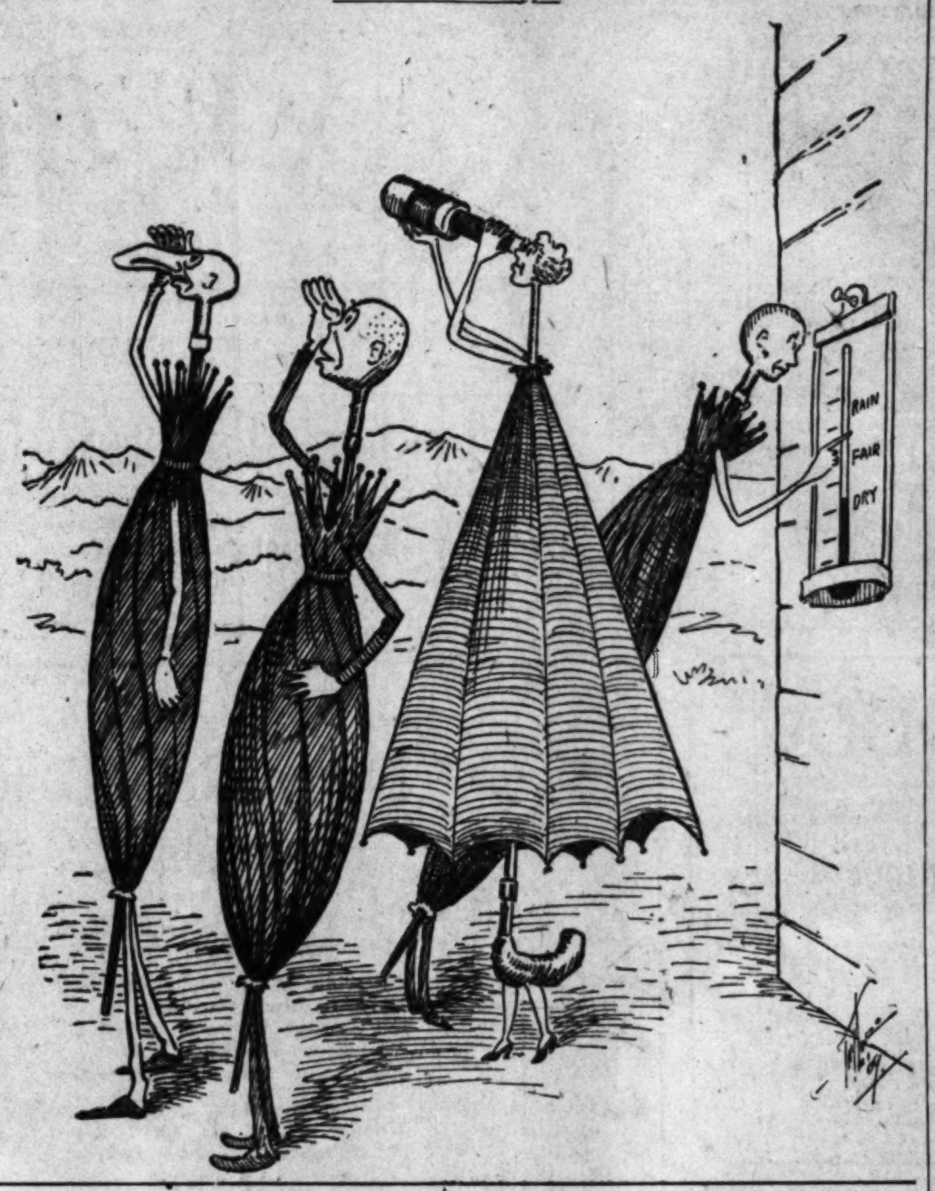
The second choice for citizen or journal is to support a scattered rabble of candidates scrambling for office "on their own hook." No body of citizens, organized or otherwise, has uttered a single word or taken a single step to induce this rabble to enter into the race for city offices. It is simply an office chaser's game from beginning to end—that and nothing more.

In contradistinction to these two paths we have a third choice. The Republican party in the city of Los Angeles is composed of a large net majority of all the citizenship of the city. The authorized representatives of these citizens called for precinct caucuses; time and place were published and all invited to take part. This invitation resulted in drawing together many thousands of the Republicans of the city of Los Angeles. Those who participated in these caucus meetings selected an average of ten of their neighbors in each one as delegates to a convention in order to select a ticket which in their opinion would be worthy of recommendation to the voters of the city of Los Angeles. Nearly if not quite 2000 of these delegates met in open convention, and untrammeled, without a word of dictation, these delegates in absolute sincerity and with as much care and intelligence as usually mark the deliberations of a meeting of this kind, selected a list of candidates which they recommend to the citizens of Los Angeles to elect to office. We believe these candidates are boss-free. We believe that they are honest. We believe that most of them are men of capability to render efficient service.

There we have the three paths radiating before our feet. Shall we, exercising a right we have if we wish so to do, arbitrarily select a ticket which would properly lie under the imputation of being our own ticket, or shall we open our ears to the siren voice of the Goo-Goo bosses and become a mouthpiece of E. T. Earl and Meyer Lissner, recommending the ticket they have picked from their own subservient tools to the good citizens of Los Angeles, and advise them to stretch out their hands one and all to have the fetters of those cold-bloodedly selfish men, bosses of tarnished reputations, fastened upon their wrists? Or shall we take the ticket selected by the 2000 conscientious and intelligent members of the Republican convention and commend them as the best under the circumstances to elect to office?

The Times stands for the routing of the conspirators against the Republican party. There is but one way to spoil the schemes of the Lissners, the Earls and the La Follettes, so far as Los Angeles is concerned, and that is to vote for Smith and the whole Republican ticket next Wednesday.

GETTING ANXIOUS.



A SHAKESPEAREAN REVIVAL.

At the New Theater in New York City on Monday evening next the playhouse will open for the season with the presentation of Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra."

This is an event which will be watched eagerly by theatergoers and theater artists. It has been quite generally assumed that there was to be no future serious effort at a Shakespearean revival. Lo, here the critics and prophets are contradicted!

Yet it will scarcely be a test of the popular taste for Shakespeare. There is no artist in the cast to compare with those great personages which played Shakespeare in the past. E. H. Sothern essays the role of Marc Antony, and A. E. Anson, a young English actor, little known, we believe, in this country, is to play Octavius Caesar. The Egyptian queen will be personified by Miss Julia Marlowe, and the rest of the cast are people little known generally in the theatrical world. We may remember Sothern when he appeared in comedy. He was an artist of considerable skill, finish, polish, a studious, careful person in the presentation of characters. Miss Marlowe enjoys a fair reputation as a lovable histrionic artist, and the others are more or less unknown.

Again, "Antony and Cleopatra" has never been regarded as among the masterpieces of Shakespeare. There is a salaciousness in the play which perhaps stamps it as most suited to twentieth-century audiences in New York; and that may lend a little element of success which will not add luster to the Shakespearean reputation.

When we look into the past and think of Booth, Barrett, Henry Irving and the great actresses who appeared in Shakespeare by their sides, we see a great difference. And when we think of the four great tragedies, "Lear," "Macbeth," "Hamlet" and "Othello," and compare them with "Antony and Cleopatra," we can see that, comparatively speaking, there is very little Shakespeareanism at stake at the New Theater in New York next week.

NEW YORK REVENUES.

The new municipal government in New York will have money enough to handle to make the fingers of dishonest politicians twitch with ambition. The revenue of New York proper for next year will amount to $153,686,356, an increase over last year of $9,233,783. If we add to this income from New York that of New York county, considerably over $3,000,000; of King's county, over $1,660,000; of Queen's, over $356,000; Richmond, over $113,000, and the estimated deficiency of $4,000,000, we have a total income for Greater New York of $163,049,450. The increase over last year for the whole of Greater New York amounts to over $10,580,000.

In New York proper the interest on the city's debt calls for over $32,000,000, the redemption fund for over $7,000,000, installments payable over $7,000,000. The police department calls for over $15,000,000 and public education for more than $28,500,000. For charitable institutions the city proposes to spend $4,724,252.

In submitting the budget for New York the heads of departments made demands that totaled more than $179,500,000, but these were cut down by a little more than $16,500,000.

Jacob Schiff, in discussing the matter, said: "The people of this city believe that only good and no harm need come from expecting the city to live next year within $160,000,000. Because you gentlemen in your published statements convinced us not only that savings are possible and that you yourselves know where the city can begin immediately to save, we ask you to take this step and not to leave it to your successors, whoever they may be."

People seeking election to city offices are great economists when they are asking for the suffrages of the people, but whether they succeed themselves or some of their friends get into office, they are very likely to forget what they said upon the public platforms. And the professional reformer does not succeed any better in keeping his preëlection promises than the human cog in the political machine that carries the biggest amount of grease.

THE ESTHETICS OF 'EM.

Having performed all these temperamental gymnastics, is it possible that San Francisco means to startle the world by turning "high brow?"

Last Thursday the Portola wave of revived Spanish romance, of musical language and the memories of lyric days, struck the tough old water front where the union stevedores are accustomed to beat up the "scabs" and where other deeds, not of romance, have taken place. The tawdry, commonplace "East street" suddenly offended the esthetics of one of the San Francisco Supervisors, who rose and moved that East street be harmonized back into the picture. The scene is thus described by an over-awed San Francisco newspaper reporter:

"There is nothing musical to 'East' street, and I think we ought to introduce more musical old Spanish names in our beautiful city of San Fran-CEES-co," said Supervisor Murdock, and the board immediately agreed.

Clearing his throat and gazing out upon the quaint beauty of the city, Murdock continued:

"I move that the name of 'East' street be changed to—Em-bar-ca-der-o' street.'"

"I beg pardon, I did not catch the name," said several members of the board, starting suddenly.

Then Murdock pronounced.

"'Aye-em-bahr-ca-day-roh,' very musical and much better than East street."

"Well, I think, 'Aye'—the name suggested—would be more musical and better sponded another of the the motion.

How mortifying to reflect that cisco is soaring to these heights of mance and culture, our own City mitted the shameful deed of street to the tame and hopelessly Broadway."

For each correct answer a check for $125 will be mailed to the contestant from one of the many manufacturers of whom we purchase pianos. For each error made $25 will be deducted, and for more than four errors a check of $10 will be given. These checks will be made payable to the Lucore Piano Co., and when indorsed by you can be applied only on the purchase of any new piano in our house. Every person sending an answer will be notified by mail. Our one-price system protects the piano buyer and enables them to purchase an instrument at the lowest possible cash price. We are today the world's Largest Exclusive Dealers in Pianos, and it is now necessary for us to have two factories to supply the demand for Lucore Pianos. A short time ago we supposed our Los Angeles factory would keep the demand supplied, but we have found it impossible, and within a short time our Chicago factory will be turning out double the number made in our Southern California plant. The Lucore Piano has been acknowledged as the World's greatest Piano at a medium price.

The Reason For This Creat Publicity Gontest

From the success obtained in the past by the assistance of the manufacturers in an advertising way, we have used more than the number of pianos agreed upon. Now we have interested other manufacturers and with their assistance we now inaugurate the greatest contest ever held by any concern, no matter where located. See that your answer is mailed at once to the Piano Manufacturers' Contest Manager. This contest will close November 15th at 6 p. m. All answers must reach our store by that time. NEVADA.

PRODUCTION IN SIX MONTHS.

State's Official Data Make Big Showing.

Tonnage Three Times Same Time Last Year.

Copper in White Pine, Lead in Eureka.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 5.—The following estimate of the mineral production of Nevada is based upon reports received by the State bullion tax collector and State mine inspector. The bullion tax collection does not disclose the mineral production where the properties have the value of their product absorbed by improvements or maintenance, but the figures are pretty close to the real facts, as they are the result of personal observation, examination and conversation. The figures have been prepared for the Los Angeles Times, and will serve to throw new light on the vast increase of the industry. While these figures only cover six months, reports coming in indicate that the average will continue for the entire year. The official figures give the tonnage for six months at 1,371,027, as against 369,579 for the same period last year. The value of this was given at $13,234,692.77, as against $5,328,161.29 for the first six months of 1908. The bullion tax collected amounted to $121,512.77, as against $45,519.65 for the first six months of 1908. White Pine's output is almost entirely copper. The lead output is confined for the most part to Eureka county, though some lead is being shipped in White Pine, Lincoln, Elko and Humboldt. Here is the table:

Counties	Tons.	Value.
Churchill	500	$ 50,000
Douglas	100	7,500
Elko	30,000	120,000
Esmeralda	300,000	7,500,000
Eureka	60,000	500,000
Humboldt	5,000	250,000
Lander	1,000	100,000
Lincoln	150,000	600,000
Lyon	10,000	50,000
Nye	250,000	5,000,000
Storey	30,000	450,000
White Pine	750,000	2,750,000
Totals	1,586,600	$18,377,500

FLORENCE MILL.

A new gyratory crusher is being installed in the Florence mill, the old one having been worn to a point where it failed to perform its functions. The mill has been treating from 125 to 150 tons daily, and with the installation of new parts for the crusher it is thought there will be no difficulty in maintaining a daily capacity of at least 150 tons, and the mill will be capable of treating 160 to 170 tons every twenty-four hours. A pipe line has been laid from the mill to a point south of the Florence Hill, and through this pipe the tailing is being pumped to the flat near Milltown. There is ample rock at this point, and, as it is desired, the pipe may be lengthened and the tailing carried farther south. Ore for the mill is being taken from many points at various levels and mixed in order that an average may be maintained in the mill heads of somewhere between $20 and $30 per ton. The drifts between the company shaft and the old Reilly lease workings have developed a large, good milling tonnage for a distance of several hundred feet. The Engineer's vein is still proving a source of great riches, and throughout the mine the reserves of both high grade and excellent mill ore are constantly being augmented by development. The new crusher has a capacity of about 200 tons daily, and by its use one man will be enabled to do the work formerly requiring the services of three.

MONTEUMA STIRS.

An immense strike of silver lead has been made in Montezuma, one of the first camps in the southern desert of Nevada. Forty years ago it was well known when the old Bullion and Arizona attracted the attention of the mining world with their riches. It has been known for some time that the January property had values which ran well above the average, but the real worth of the late find was not apparent until the past few days, when the stringer being followed from the surface began to widen and increase in richness, until yesterday, when it is said that as high as 600 ounces in silver to the ton was opened in a vein which is reported to be about three feet wide. The depth of the strike is said to be only a few feet, and that from present indications there is every reason to believe that with further development a veritable bonanza will be opened.

A peculiar feature of the strike is expected to show in the fact that it is the impression of the leasers, that a tunnel driven from a point far down the mountainside has already passed through the ledge, or is very near to where the rich vein should exist. It is said the work of searching for the ore in this tunnel is to commence in a day or two. The new find is said to be the characteristic lead-silver stuff of that section, but even to eclipse anything found in the old workings, which were famous forty years ago. It is also considered that the values at this time have continued to the point where incessant sucking of the rich ore goes forward hourly, and within a short time a shipment will leave the ground. The names of the leasers are given as Williams and Lamb, and they have only been engaged in opening the ground during the past three or four weeks. The ground adjoins some of the old, rich blocks of the Bullion and the Arizona, and it will doubtless result in a resumption of activity in the lower levels of those old properties.

AUSTIN REVIVING.

OLD CAMP IS AGAIN UP.

AUSTIN (Nev.) Nov. 5.—The gold-bearing ledge on the King Midas has been a truck at depth, and the rock will average between $40 and $50 gold per ton. The group constitutes the acreage bought last spring by S. T. Pearson from George Gooding, and situated up the Reese River. The ledge was cut in a tunnel that has been worked for the past few months, the object being to prospect the hill and to ascertain the quality of ore at a reasonable depth. The strike confirms the theory that the ledge would prove deep-seated, and it is confirmed that the property has the makings of another producing gold property in the upper valley tributary to Austin. The plans of the King Midas include the erection of a mill when sufficient ore is blocked to justify it. There is a fine tunnel site lower down the hill, from which a drive will be made to tap the same vein at a dtpth of 800 to 1000 feet on its dip. This tunnel will be used to deliver the ore at a point where milling and general handling of the product will be most convenient.

The big mill belonging to the Austin-Manhattan will before many weeks be dropping stamps on Austin ores. It is reliably reported that G. D. Kilborn, for the Nevada Equity Company, will build here within the next six months and begin the hoisting of that already blocked. Mr. Kilborn has just returned from three months in Europe, and his plans have not been perfected. A ten-stamp unit will be started within the next sixty days on the Austin Manhattan. The mill plant will be installed according to the system suggested by a San Francisco metallurgist, who is superintending the installation. The new equipment will include a Chilean mill for recrushing, card tables, cone classifiers, tube mill, cyanide tanks and the Merrill filter process.

COPPER SMELTER.

BUSY AT YERRINGTON.

CARSON CITY (Nev.) Nov. 5.—It begins to look as though the smelter for the copper country is going to materialize without further delay. During the week the first shovelful of dirt was turned on the site at Yerrington. Engineer Boileau is present with a corps of men driving stakes and completing the preliminary survey. The company has been going along and getting everything in shape since there was no trouble about finances, that have been negotiated six months ago. The first work will be the erection of boarding houses and offices and until accommodations are finished only fifty men will be employed. The plant will have a capacity of 1500 tons daily as the company has received assurances backed by guarantees that the adjacent mines will be able to furnish enough ore to keep the plant going. Hundreds of thousands of tons of copper ore are lying on the dumps awaiting the action of the smelter and the building will revive interest in the entire Mason Valley. The Bisulphide mine owned by the Yerringtons is being retimbered and placed in shape for working. This property will be started at once as the ores will be needed for fluxes and it is the intention to have a large quantity ready for the first blowing in of the smelter.

ALAMO SHIPMENT.

CAREFULLY SORTED CARLOAD.

LUCKY BOY (Nev.) Nov. 5.—The Alamo, formerly known as the Hubbard lease, is preparing a phenomenal shipment of lead silver ore which is expected to run $50,000 for the car. It is not the desire of the owners to represent this as an example of the value of the property as they give it distinctly to be understood that this is a carefully sampled shipment. The car is about completed and is likely to get out the first part of next week. The Fairfield-Mitchell lease which has had ups and downs enough to dishearten the average observer is asserted to have entered into a good body of ore at a depth of 450 feet with a twelve-inch streak of rich silver black metal that is being sacked. The company expects a carload that will average $250 per ton. On the Ingalls property Ingalls has bought out his partners who were disgusted with the slow returns from what they expected to be a quick proposition and says that he is going to make a mine out of the property.

On the Oddie Shaft a streak of good ore was encountered in the shaft that gave promising returns. The company is well financed and in case the rich vein is not cut on the 300 foot level the shaft will be sunk deeper.

The McCormick Company is regarded as a dream of the promoters who have been using a lot of printer's ink for the purpose of making an impression and it is held by observers as remarkable that they should go into other camps when they say they have so much ore in sight here. The Broken Hills Company is deemed something of a joke owing to the constant reports of high-grade and the failure to connect with dividends.

In the Pamlico district ten miles east of Hawthorne, leasers who are operating on the big properties shipped five gasoline cans of bullion to the Carson City mint during the last week that gave the shippers a return of $5000. From the same vein a shipment of thirty tons was reduced at the Premier mill that netted the leasers $100 per ton. The placer properties are showing up well and the operators are believed to be nearing the channel as the gold is constantly becoming coarser.

NATIONAL'S OPENS.

UNION POWER IS BROKEN.

WINNEMUCCA (Nev.) Nov. 4.—Another important strike in National is that made on what is known as the Fender claim, owned by J. L. Workman, the discoverer of the district. The Fender claim is located on Auto hill and in a tunnel that has penetrated a five foot vein for thirty feet, ore is being taken out that assays $41.40 to the ton in gold and silver. The ledge matter is very similar to that in the bonanza property and every indication points to the exposure of rich shoots so characteristic of the Charleston hill bonanza. A significant feature of this new strike is that the ore near the surface only assayed $2 or $3 per ton. The importance of the find is the extent of the mineral belt as this property is at least three quarters of a mile west of Charleston hill.

Last operations were resumed as an open camp with the Goldfield scale of wages in vogue. During the time the mines were closed the disturbing element left the district, it is thought, as well as many who did not belong to this class. The famous Wihuja lease on the Therien has been taken over by the Coalition company. The workings of that lease are to be connected up with those of the Kindergarten mine, the lease shaft is to be straightened and equipped with a new hoist, and a new pumping plant is to be installed.

The Kindergarten vein which was opened on the 300 foot level of the new workings only a short time before the mines were closed, opened eighteeen feet on its strike and by a raise of fifteen feet the vein carried two feet of ore at $150 a ton.

While the mill run from the lease of the Mazuma lease is not yet completed, enough has been taken from the plates to insure a good clean up. Another run will be made before the 10th of next month. Owing to the fact that the lower workings have had to be drained, the work of taking out ore on a large scale has been impossible. By next week, however, this work should be completed and a force of men put into the stope on the 400 foot level. The ore shoot has increased both in size and quantity with every foot of depth and when this is opened up from below the shipments should be large both in tonnage and value.

CALIFORNIA.

WORK ACTIVE ON MOTHER LODE.

CALAVERAS AND TUOLUMNE ARE DRAWING MONEY.

Angelenos Investing in Mineral Properties in the Central Part of the State—Solano Farmers Want to Close Selby's Smelter, Which Blames Oil Refineries.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON (Cal.) Nov. 5.—The Mother Lode mines in Calaveras and Tuolumne counties are more active at the present time than has been the case for several years. A large number of new properties are receiving attention, while the old producers show no sign of a falling off. Southern California capital is particularly active in new propositions, a large number of Los Angeles men having become interested during the past few months. One of the latest developments of this nature was the acquisition a few days ago of eighty acres of gravel lands near Columbia by the Tuolumne Mining and Development Company, composed principally of Southern Californians. It is intended to install a large dredge on these holdings, if tests prove satisfactory, and as the lands are located in the heart of a rich placer section, it is believed that the erection of a gold-ship will be commenced next spring.

The North Fork Consolidated Mines Company, another Los Angeles concern, has sent its new shaft down fifty feet, but is temporarily handicapped by the turning off of the power. The company has valuable holdings, and will probably construct a gasoline power plant to facilitate rapid work. The new five-stamp mill for the Eureka has been completed, and will be in operation as soon as connection is made with the power line. Custom ore will be handled until the production of the Eureka is sufficiently large to keep the plant operating at full capacity. A new hoist has been installed at the Gold Spring mine, near Sonora, and two machine drills are in operation in the sixty-foot shaft. The thirty-foot vein runs from $3 to $18 per ton, and is showing well with increasing depth. Sinking will be continued indefinitely. Diamond-drilling is about to start at the famous Dutch mine at Quartz. This property has been one of the great producers of Tuolumne, and large reserves remain in the upper workings. The drill will prospect the lower levels, and is expected to demonstrate the presence of large ore bodies at depth.

At the Melones the big adit is in over three miles, and will be continued five miles farther. Several veins running ten to forty feet wide are reported, and the 100-stamp mill is operating at full capacity. The tunnel is thoroughly equipped with electrical machinery and cars. This is one of the largest producers in Calaveras. The Utica continues to rank as the greatest property in the county, and is producing steadily. The big mill is operating at full capacity, and the present season is said to be the most prosperous record ed for many years. The Lightener, Etna-King, Angels, and a number of other important properties are maintaining a steady yield and developing good reserves of milling ore at considerable depth. Five stamps will be shortly added to the Easy Bird mill. Late developments in this property have opened large bodies of ore, carrying excellent values. The Montana mine has been secured by eastern capitalists, and will be extensively operated. A ten-stamp mill will be erected immediately. The Reiner Mining Company is actively proceeding with the development of the lower gravel channel. It is eighteen feet thick, runs about $2.50 per ton, and lies at a depth of 240 feet. It is worked through a triple-compartment shaft. Southern Californians are largely interested.

ANOTHER SMELTER ROW.

The case of Solano County vs. the Selby Smelting and Lead Company is still attracting considerable attention. The hostile interests are straining every nerve to keep the smelter practically closed, while the company is actively endeavoring to prove that the fumes from the big plant are not causing any damage to vegetation or endangering health. Costly devices to eliminate the escape of the gases have been installed, and the company contends that the damage attributed to its plant is proceeding from the oil refineries in the immediate neighborhood. This has been one of the hardest fought cases ever tried in a California court, and promises to be long drawn out. On the result will depend to a marked extent the future battles between smelter operators and conflicting interests in this State.

MARIPOSA COUNTY.

The Mariposa county gold belt is showing considerable animation. The Mountain King mine has opened rich ore in the lower level and will probably increase the capacity of the mill in the near future. The ore bodies in this property have been proven for several hundred feet and deep developments are showing good results. At present the ten-stamp mill is in full blast, but is unable to handle the ore produced. At the Hite Cove twenty stamps are in commission, and before the end of the year it is expected to have fifty in operation. Large bodies of ore running into milling values have been demonstrated in the lower levels and the property is about to enter on the largest production in its history. At the Clearing House some good ore has been opened. Operations are proceeding steadily. The Josephine, Mariposa and other large producers are maintaining their usual rate of production.

MONO COUNTY.

The Standard Consolidated Company at Bodie has inaugurated the leasing system and large sections of its extensive holdings will be thoroughly explored by this means. Operations in the main workings will continue on company account. As soon as possible large electric pumps will be installed and developments carried forward in the lower levels, which have been full of water for twenty years. The mill is operating steadily on good-grade ore from the upper levels. At Masonic the Pittsburgh-Liberty continues to produce rich ore. No attention is being paid to the immense reserves of low-grade quartz, but this will be handled immediately following the completion of the railway line. The company is reported to be producing excellent profits. The Golden Cycle, Boston Masonic, Jump-up-Joe and several others are showing well. The United States Gold Corporation is pushing extensive work at the Sunny Jim and adjacent properties.

ALLEGHENY OPERATIONS.

High-graders raided the assay office of the Rainbow mine at Allegheny last Friday and secured about $500 in specimens and amalgam. They also visited the tunnels of the Rainbow Extension and Twenty-one mines, but were unable to secure anything of value. Heavy doors have been placed at the entrance of both tunnels, a precaution that will be probably adopted by other companies. C. C. Crary of Allegheny and J. C. Spencer of Wyoming have purchased the Colorado-Yellow Jacket and will commence active work at once. The adit is in 300 feet with good ore in sight. It will be continued to cut the rich ore bodies developed by neighboring properties. The Red Star, Rainbow, Gold King and one or two others are milling good-grade quartz. Drifting for the main ledge at the Tightner is progressing.

SHASTA COUNTY.

At a meeting held in Redding last Saturday the Executive Committee of the Farmers' Protective Association of Shasta county agreed to extend the time for the Balaklala Copper Company to devise means of controlling the escape of damaging fumes from its plant at Coran. This was in answer to the request of high officials of the company. It is probable that the Balaklala people will adopt smoke-condensing devices. At the Mammoth the erection of the baghouse is proceeding and will be in operation by April 1, 1910, according to Manager Frederick Lyons. Furnace No. 2 is being provided with a settler similar to that in use by furnaces Nos. 3, 4 and 5. The remaining four furnaces are operating steadily. At the Spread Eagle excellent ore is being developed and a shipment will be made within a few days to the Selby smelter. The new drift is in sixty-two feet. The Milkmaid is producing good-grade ore. This mill is again in commission.

Large deposits of asbestos and talcum have been discovered by San Francisco people in Trinity county and a syndicate is being formed to work the properties extensively. Specimens of the minerals brought to San Francisco shows the deposit to be of high quality. The discoverers state that a power site will be purchased and operations on a large scale commenced as soon as the winter is over.

The Champion Gold Mining Company has been formed by Chicago capitalists to take over and operate the Champion mines at Nevada City. The company is organized at $5,000,000 and expects to commence activities before the end of the winter. The Champion group has a productive record of $20,000,000. At present eighty men are employed and thirty stamps are in operation. The entire milling capacity is 140 stamps. Four shafts have been sunk on the property, but the new concern will sink a vertical shaft through which the extensive acreage will be advantageously worked. George F. Fitzgerald of Chicago will be manager

MIAMI COMPANY BUSY BUILDING.

THREE HUNDRED MEN WORKING NEAR GLOBE.

Old Dominion Has Twelve Hundred Men Employed in Mine and Smelter and Produced in October Three Million Pounds of Copper. What Ray Is Doing.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 5.—About 300 men are working on the new Miami copper reduction works near Globe. Grading for the concentrator is done and actual construction will begin within a few days. Preparations are being made to build a power plant of the most modern character, the mill and power plant together costing over $1,000,000. New offices and a large number of cottages will be built at once. In the mine over 40,000 feet of work has been done already and the ore is to be extracted by top-slicing and by the caving system. First to be worked will be the ore from the 370-foot level to the surface, a block in which it is estimated there are 3,500,000 tons. Nine levels have already been established and about 3000 feet of work is being done a month. It is asserted that over 13,000,000 tons have been developed, from which it is expected an average of forty pounds of copper will be extracted per ton at a cost not over 9 cents a pound. The company is about to issue $1,500,000 first mortgage 6 per cent. bonds, to pay for work in progress.

In the Miami district is a new incorporation, the Boston-Miami Development Company, which has forty-two claims, acquired by F. W. Hoar, formerly manager of the Old Dominion works. The land has been bought at a total cost of $400,000, on which the payments will extend over a period of three years. Two churn drills have been ordered for development purposes. The copper lies in gray schist and porphyry and is especially suitable for concentration.

About twenty tons of high-grade matte is being turned out a day from the new Arizona Commercial smelter, shipped by rail to the converters of the Old Dominion smelter, three miles distant, for final reduction. The company employs about 400 men.

Nearly 1200 men are in the employ of the Old Dominion in its mines and smelter, and the greater part of October four furnaces were being operated in the smelter. The product of copper was nearly 3,000,000 pounds.

An engineering party is reported to be in the field between Red Rock and the Gila River, presumably laying out a line for a railroad, by means of which direct communication can be had between the Sasco smelter and the mines at Christmas lately acquired by the Development Company of America. It is told that one of the principal reasons for the purchase of the Christmas mine was the advisability of securing its sulphide ores for mixing with the silicious ores of the Imperial mines, being smelted at Sasco. From Red Rock to the Gila is only thirty-five miles.

RAY'S OPERATION.

Within a developed area of only ninety-six acres, report has been made to the Ray Consolidated directors of the development of 38,300,000 tons averaging 2.26 per cent. copper in deposits averaging 114 feet in depth. Twelve drills are developing the property. An additional report upon the ground of the Gila Copper Company, an associate corporation with the Ray, shows development of about 5,500,000 tons, averaging 2.05 per cent. copper with an average ore blanket of 123 feet depth. The Ray Central Copper Company has also reported development of millions of tons and has issued a statement that it will soon start work on the building of a 1000-ton concentrating mill.

Added to the many already in existence in the Kelvin country is a new incorporation, the Overland Copper Company, owning a group adjoining the property of the London-Arizona Copper Company. The company has been organized by John F. Campbell. P. F. Walsh is superintendent.

OTHER OPERATIONS.

Ore shipments from the Copper Creek mines, fourteen miles east of Mammoth, average 20 per cent. copper. The Copper Creek Company has nearly completed a 250-ton concentrator. It is probable that this district will be reached by a railroad from Winkleman within a year.

Morrison & Bernstein are building a ten-stamp mill on their gold property near Morenci.

An immense copper ledge lies north of Phoenix, twenty miles east of the Phoenix mines, on the Blue Bird property, owned by W. E. Thomas, clerk of the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors. At 100 feet of depth the ledge is seventy-two feet wide, assaying about $2 to the ton in gold and above 8 per cent. copper, with 40 per cent. iron and 30 per cent. sulphur, constituting an almost self-fluxing ore and giving additional value to the property. A deal is on whereby it is probable that the mine will be purchased for $200,000 by interests connected with the Old Dominion.

Much work is being done on the old Jack Rabbit mine in Casa Grande district, where power pumps have had to be sent down to control a water flow struck on the 400-foot level.

The Helvetia Mining Company abandoned its steam traction engine, is testing a lighter gasoline road engine, with which it is believed economy can be secured in hauling between the camp and Vails station.

A drift has been driven about forty feet into the ore body lately struck on the 500-foot level of the Shattuck mine. The ore is an oxide, carrying about 15 per cent. copper. Col. Powell general manager, states that there is no truth in the report that the Calumet and Arizona has absorbed the Shattuck, though the two interests are very closely joined. A. B. Hodges has been appointed manager of the Shattuck.

The ground of the Boston-Courtland Company at Courtland, is to be explored by means of a large churn drill, capable of sinking an eight-inch hole.

Lead ore of high grade has been struck in the Comanche Chief mine near Paradise.

SONORA DEVELOPMENT.

The Calumet and Sonora property near Cananea is materializing into one of the most extraordinary zinc and lead mines in the world. It is being developed by three shafts, two of them about 300 feet deep. Shipments of 100 tons of the ore were made to Joplin, Mo., before the duty on zinc was put on, and returned rich results. A concentrating mill is being built at the mine and hereafter the concentrates will be sent by way of Cananea and Nogales to Guaymas, thence to be shipped by water to Swansea, Wales and to Antwerp, smelters at both points having made very attractive offers for the concentrates.

The mill of the Creston de Oro in Moctezuma district, Sonora, is again at work after an expenditure of $3000 in repairs.

MOHAVE COUNTY.

A new process is to be tried for the concentration of the ores of the Tennessee Mining Company at Chloride, Mohave county, under the direction of John H. Hurin of Los Angeles, president of the corporation, who has lately been studying processes in the lead and zinc districts of Missouri. The ore runs about sixteen ounces zinc. The tailings aggregating about 20,000 tons, are to be worked over with fresh ore from the mine.

The Keystone mine at Mineral Park, lately bonded by S. R. Porter of Los Angeles, is being unwatered and a contract has been let for sinking.

The Farley claims in Humbug district, together with the ten-stamp mill, have been bonded by a Philadelphia company, and will be extensively developed.

AROUND PRESCOTT.

Bullion is being received in Prescott from the Belle claims on Santa Maria Creek, where J. K. Miller is operating a small single stamp mill that handles about 200 pounds of ore an hour and is propelled by a two-horse-power gasoline engine.

The stockholders of the Montezuma Gold and Silver Mining Company in Prescott, have declared forfeited the option on the mines of the Pacific Gold Company. The property is situated on Groom Creek.

COAL AND ASBESTOS.

Assessment work is being done by a Phoenix company on coal claims east of Winkelman. Samples have been brought to Phoenix and tested in forges and declared of excellent quality.

A number of Prescott business men have filed on four sections of coal-bearing land in southern Navajo county in the Black Mesa forest reserve. The field is supposed to be an extension of the Gallup coal measures.

Asbestos of an excellent quality, asserted to be from a ledge eight feet in width, exposed for half a mile, has been brought into Yuma by B. H. Fish, an old prospector. It comes from the Eureka district, forty miles above Yuma on the Colorado River.

A large deposit of opalized chalcedony has been found by Ross H. Blakely in southern Mohave county, eight miles from the Big Sandy.

Platinum Present.

CALLAHAN, Siskiyou county (Cal.) Oct. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please name and describe the samples of mineral in your "In the Earth" that I inclose herewith and numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. All of the ores are from this section. I believe that No. 1 sample is either chrome iron or tungsten; No. 2, topaz? No. 3, tungsten, and No. 4 is concentrates. What is in these concentrates? Thanking you in advance for information asked for.

Yours truly, H. C. S.

ANSWER: Tungsten (wolframium) does not occur native. From the appearance of No. 1 you probably have wolframite in mind (tungstate of iron and manganese.) Sample No. 1 is iron, black in color; luster somewhat metallic; hardness, 5.5. Sp. gr., 4.5; slightly magnetic; crystals tabular; infusible before the blowpipe. The specimen is titanic iron ore, known also as ilmenite and menaccanite. Sample No. 2 is chalcedony, a variety of quartz. Sample No. 3 is massive magnetite (magnetic iron ore) with hematite present. No. 4—"concentrates." This sample is very rich in platinum values (platinum and the platinum group,) with microscopical crystals present of quartz, garnet, monazite, hematite, ilmenite and magnetite. If you can produce concentrates—in quantity—such as is shown by the sample, both you and your mining locality should grow wealthy, as it were.

Lepidomelane.

PALA, Oct. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The specimen I am sending you comes from a claim of mine several miles southeast of Pala. I cannot name it, but think it must be decayed tourmaline. Will you please describe it for me in "In the Earth" and oblige, Yours truly, J. E. Y.

ANSWER: The sample belongs to the mica group, and is named at the subheading. It contains more iron oxides than biotite (black mica.) It is made up of a mass of black scales. It is soluble in hydrochloric acid with separation of silica.

SCALP-CUTTING ARGUMENT.

H. M. Palmersheim, foreman of the city water department, was struck on the head and his scalp cut during an argument with a man in Elysian Park, yesterday morning. At the Receiving Hospital, where the laceration was sewed up, the foreman said his assailant's name is Kelterer.

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Phosphate Rock and Septaria.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herewith I hand you sample of ore from near Beaumont, which I believe to be apatite (phosphate of lime.) Is there any phosphate rock in Southern California? If there is a locality, please give it with percentages and descriptions. Thanking you in advance for your trouble,

Yours truly, J. C. W.

ANSWER: Mineralogically, there is no phosphate rock of commerce, (phosphate of lime,) in Southern California. Amblygonite occurs there, however, which, further on, will be described, etc.

The sample you submit is septaria (turtle stone,) Roman cement, and carries no phosphoric acid.

Amblygonite is a fluophosphate of alumina and lithia, and averages: Lithia, 10 per cent. with over 40 per cent. phosphoric acid. It occurs in commercial quantity in San Diego county, and will at an early date be sought after for the two elements stated. "An estimate made by the chemist of the American Lithia Company, previous to the recent development, indicates the products and possible profits of the industry. . . . Products derived from 5000 pounds of amblygonite per day, using 7000 pounds of caustic soda in reduction: Lithium carbonate 830. Tri-sodium phosphate, 5,000. Sulphate of aluminum, 3,000. Phosphate salt, 1,000. Caustic soda (recovered at half cost) 3,000." Pounds respectively.

Pyrrhotite.

CORONA, Oct. 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Under separate cover I am sending you a sample of ore that comes from British Columbia. I have not had same assayed and therefore do not know for a certainty what metals of value, if any, that it may carry. Will you kindly define for me. Will add that the ledge from which it comes is very large indeed, and this sample is from the surface. Thanking you in advance, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly, F. M. E.

ANSWER: The iron disulphide (pyrrhotite) is observable throughout the mass in microscopical character, and with a very low per cent. of chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore of the mining boys.)

Besides the copper values noted we find present nickel in very low percentage. Not tested for gold and silver.

Chalcedony.

FARMERSVILLE (Cal.) Oct.14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Your letter of recent date at hand post marked "San Francisco," I will send stones for examination as soon as I can get word from Dead Letter Office at Washington, D. C., in regard to missent letter. This letter was registered so that I might ascertain whether I am truly corresponding with the Los Angeles Times. As you never received the stones sent to you for examination, I have changed my mind about sending stones while writing letter. I herewith inclose samples.

Yours respectfully, J. E. L.

ANSWER: The samples you submit are quartz, and mineralogically named at subheading.

Siliceous Talc and Pyrrhotite.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Being a close reader of your "In the Earth" columns I beg to enclose a couple of samples for your inspection. Please kindly name No. 1 and, also, inform me as to contents or rather composition of No. 2, this sample consists chiefly of iron pyrites, but when these are concentrated and treated with nitric acid or pocket smelter, I get a white metal on which nitric acid has no effect (cold,) which partly dissolves in the boiling acid leaving a bright microscopic lot of flakes. One assayer has pronounced it vanadium, another has suggested platinum, one manganese, etc. Feeling assured that your analysis will prove correst I await your reply. The samples are from northeastern part of Orange county. Respectfully, C. W. B.

ANSWER.—Sample No. 1 is a whitish mechanical mixture of silica, alumina and talc.

Pyrrhotite with pyrite (microscopal) is present in No. 2. We concentrated some of the rock and find that cold nitric acid partly dissolves the concentrates, and then, boiling the acid mixture more of the substance goes into solution with deposition of insoluable quartz. We find, further, that zinc is present, as also trace only, of nickel. Platinum is not present in the sample. Platinum is but slightly affected by nitric acid. The sample was not tested for gold and silver.

Platinum Not Present.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I will appreciate it very highly if you will tell me what the enclosed sample contains. Have been informed it carries cobalt and platium. Thanking you in anticipation, I am, yours truly, J. A. D.

ANSWER.—We find no platinum present in the sample. If its approximate locality (where found) had been stated by you more definite information could be given you.

Pink Fluorite.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Oct. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing in this package some samples from a stringer on my claim twenty-two miles south of Bisbee which I believe to be carbonate of manganese from its rose-red color.

Will you please state in your "In the Earth" what the substance is if not what I call it and oblige, yours very truly, D. L.

ANSWER.—The sample is not rhodochrosite (manganese carbonate.) It is fluorite (calcium fluoride) and of the rare rose-red color. "Fluoride resembles some of the gems, but its softness and its easy octahedral cleavage when crystalized at once distinguish it. Its strong phosphorescene is

EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED

Mt. Washington Famous from Coast to Coast

Mt. Washington is certainly becoming well advertised. It is today well known all over the United States as one of Southern California's greatest points of interest. This rapidly growing prestige has a tendency to strongly stimulate values on the lofty residence district. Prominent real estate authorities who have recently visited Mt. Washington predict that present values will double within a year. According to this prediction, property on the mountain ought to be a strong subject from an investment standpoint.

YES—

Mt. Washington homes are nearly one thousand feet above the sea level.

Sightly villa lots from 75x150 to two and three acres.

Rich, "responsive" soil. Fine opportunities for the amateur or professional florist and gardener.

Pure water developed on the property from the company's own plant is piped to each lot.

Magnificent boulevard and parkway system.

Desirable building restrictions.

Fifty miles of mountain ranges, three great valleys, a half dozen cities and the ocean, are visible from Mt. Washington.

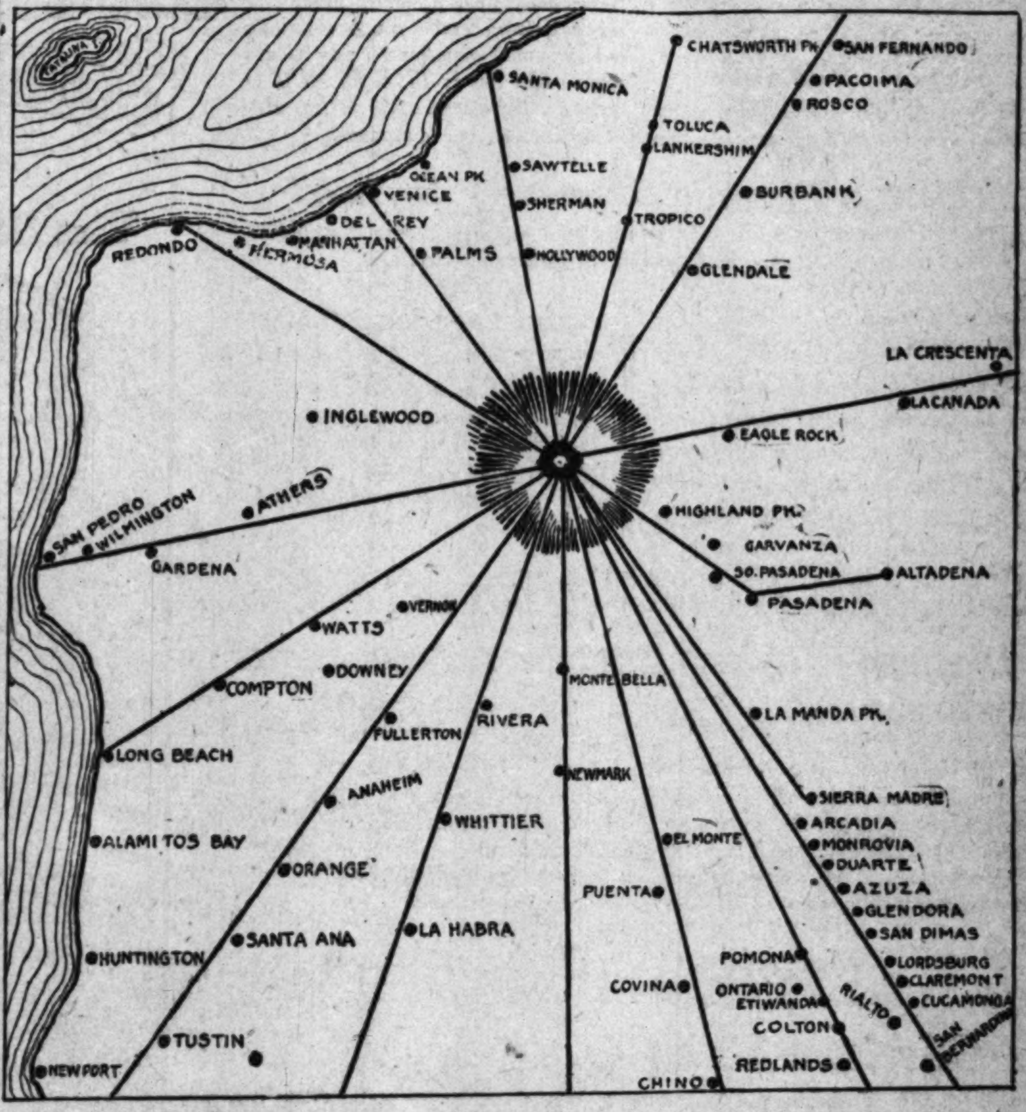
WONDERFUL SCENIC TRIP FOR TEN CENTS

Mt. Washington Resident Claims the Incline Railway Ride Is Worth a Dollar

One of the prominent residents of Mt. Washington, in a talk with an Eagle reporter this week, said: "I wonder if the people of Los Angeles fully realize and appreciate what a wonderful scenic trip the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Railway Company is affording them over their unique incline, for the insignificant sum of 10 cents. The round trip is easily worth a dollar, and any tourist would be glad to pay that amount, if it were required. Think of the wonderful panoramic view that is visible from the cozy cars as they ascend the three thousand feet of incline road—the same length as the Mt. Lowe incline. When I travel over this wonderful little scenic road every day and realize that each trip costs me only 2½ cents, I congratulate myself. No matter how strenuous my day's work has been—when I step onto one of the incline cars in the evening and gracefully ascend from the dust, noise and turmoil of the city, to the quiet grandeur of beautiful old Mt. Washington—I am physically and mentally renewed. I tell you, man, Mt. Washington living is a perpetual tonic. You really can't grow old if you live up here."

This man is right. Of the thousands who visited Mt. Washington via the incline—few fully realize the absurdly low price that residents pay to travel back and forth over this wonderful road. Even the visiting public are charged only 20 cents for the round trip.

Compare this price with the cost of any other incline trip in the world. You'll find it is ridiculously low. This road was not built to be operated for big profits—but to provide quick and practical transportation to the summit of Mt. Washington. It is the railroad that has made Mt. Washington a residential possibility.



Seventy-five cities and villages are visible from Mt. Washington. Bring your field glasses.

Since …assumed the presi… …has been given …The Giroux has developed the ore, both in the porphyry and in the lime, and Mr. Cole's pet formation is the lime. A drill was ordered placed on the Richard claim, south of the Bunker Hill. Porphyry ore is being hoisted. This drill hole is the largest ever sunk in the district, being thirteen inches in diameter, and starting with a ten-inch casing. The drill was sent down through the lime for a depth of 465 feet, when the ore was encountered. At 490 feet the drill went out of the ore and into rhyolite for twenty-five feet, when the ore was again encountered and continued for thirty feet, when rhyolite was again struck. This lasted for about twenty-five feet, when the ore was again located, and this time it continued below the 660-foot mark.

How much further the ore may go is not known at this time, but it is known that the Giroux has more than 100 feet of new ore, and the percentage of copper is very high, some beautiful native specimens having been taken from the hole. The encouraging feature is that it will probably tend to hurry the improvements which have been promised by the Amalgamated, which include a concentrating and smelting plant, and President Cole has said that the reduction plant will equal that of the Guggenheims, which means the expenditure in the district of several millions in the near future and a wonderful increase in production. On the Giroux a five-compartment shaft is being sunk and uprised and will be the main working of the property. The Giroux has five shafts from which the ore is being taken.

Another enterprise, which is going to help the district in no small way is the Ely-Goldfield Railroad, which is an assured fact. Reports and surveys are being gone over in New York, and the only thing on which the road is said to be hanging back is the advisability of carrying the road through Hamilton. The drive from Goldfield to Hamilton shows as fine a road as could be desired, but between Hamilton and Ely are two high mountains. It might be possible to locate a pass over these ranges through which the road could be run, but if a new survey were to be made, three or four months would be required for the work. Whether this would mean that much delay, or whether work could be or would be commenced both from the Goldfield and Ely end right away is not known.

There is also talk of continuing on the survey which has been made, and running a spur to Hamilton. At the latter place more than 1,000,000 tons of ore have been blocked, and, of course, the new railroad would be very desirous of handling that very remunerative commodity. If the road be run by way of Hamilton, which is fifty miles from Ely, not more than seventy-five miles of the present survey would be available.

BUTTE STRIKE.

The New Superintendent Gets Pay Ore Where Several Others Had Failed.

A rich strike, one of the richest in Butte county, has recently been reported in the Huleton district, located about ten miles from Oroville, in the Phoenix, an old mine, operated years ago on the Bobbie's Blue Ledge, and is owned by a Dr. Burke of Santa Rosa, and Arthur Grigsby of San Francisco is superintendent. W. H. Lattimer of Los Angeles is also interested. The total loss to the interested parties has been estimated, after seven years hitherto fruitless effort to put it on a paying basis, at $60,000.

When Mr. Grigsby took charge under the new ownership, he examined the situation carefully and commenced operations from an entirely different point, and at a depth of 150 feet he took out a chunk of nearly solid gold, worth over $1500. In addition to this, he sent fine gold specimens, asserted to be $60,000, to the owner at Santa Rosa.

Arrangements are being closed for active and intensive working, and Mr. Lattimer recently left Los Angeles to make a personal inspection of the property and direct operations after conferring with Mr. Grigsby at San Francisco.

MOJAVE COUNTY.

GOLCONDA HAS GOOD RETURNS.

EIGHT HUNDRED TONS OF ZINC IN OCTOBER.

Amount Actually Went to Smelter and Advices Indicate Net Profit of Ten Thousand Dollars for the Month—Over Hundred Thousand to This Date.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Nov. 5.—In the monthly bulletin issued by the management of the Golconda zinc mine to its stockholders, the production for October is given as 800 tons actually shipped to the smelter and about 1000 tons of milling ore placed upon the dumps. With nearly half the cars reported from the smelter by wire, the value of the ore shipped is estimated at about $18,000. The expenses, including the costs of all development, amounted to approximately $10,000, leaving a net profit of about $8000, with as much more due from milling ore. To date returns have been received from 191 cars, netting $95,546.45; twenty-four cars of ores and residues in transit are estimated at $20,000, making a total of 215 cars netting $115,546.45.

At the Expansion Mine in the Union Pass District, six miles from Gold Road and in the same River Range, the erection of amalgamating mill and cyanide plant is well under way. Foundations for the three forty ton cyanide tanks are nearly completed and three of the six stamps are in place. The air compressors are being moved and will be housed with the mill. Cross-cut No. 2 on the south end of the mine is in 300 feet; and from this point drifting will be started with air drills as soon as the compressors are available, and will be continued for 600 feet, resulting in a back of 900 feet from the apex of the mountain. On the north end of the ledge a raise will be driven from cross-cut tunnel No. 1 to connect with the bottom of a 250 foot shaft, in which large mill samples taken recently prove ore averaging $10 per ton all the way down.

On the adjoining Tragedy Group, bonded several months ago by New Jersey people, a tunnel being driven to cut the ledge is in 260 feet. Occasional stringers of quartz are being found in the breast, and the the ledge proper will probably be encountered within the next fifty feet. The Tragedy is a large quartz ledge running parallel with the Expansion, and like the latter, is known to assay about $10 on the surface.

At the Gold Bug Mine in the Weaver District the shaft has reached a depth of 500 feet and a station is being cut preparatory to drifting the 120 feet necessary to get to the ore shoot. The main ore body as developed on the 300 foot level is about 100 feet in length and from three to six feet wide, carrying an average value of a little over $20 per ton in gold and silver. Part of this ore is rich enough to be shipped, and the remainder will be treated either at a new mill to be erected at the mine or at the present plant on the Colorado River.

A. L. White of Lima, Ohio, who with Dan S. Richards and Walter Fellows, has been examining mines in the Chloride District the past week, bonded the Midnight properties owned by the St. Charles brothers this morning for a consideration said to be $100,000. Active work will be started immediately under the direction of Mr. Fellows. The Midnight is in the copper belt extending over Chloride and Mineral Park, and like its neighbors, the Pinkham and the Keystone, it has a fine record of production. Development in the latter mines has also been resumed recently.

On a claim about eight miles east from Stephens' ranch on the Sandy, Ross Blakely has found a gem stone pronounced by local experts genuine fire opal. The surface rock in which the find was made, is an opalized chalcedony, and when cut and polished makes a very handsome gem itself.

Otto Sussman of the United States Zinc Company is looking over the Golconda and other mines in the Union Basin District.

About twenty mines of the county have sent large samples of their ores to the territorial fair at Phoenix.

MAYFLOWER AHEAD.

Pioneer Property Likely to Be in Dividend Class Before Very Long.

RHYOLITE (Nev.) Nov. 5.—The Mayflower with its increased stamp capacity will be the next bidder for the dividend class. Between the 300 and 400-foot levels a handsome body of ore has been opened that runs from $50 to $75 a ton. Though the officers of the company are saying nothing, it is known that regular shipments of bullion are being made. The main shaft is being sunk below the 500 level primarily to develop more water for use in the mills. Already it has increased the quantity as the water is coming freely into the shaft. The work in the Starlight shaft is progressing very satisfactorily. The rock encountered, though not in the vein proper, assays from $4 to $6. The shaft is down 225 feet and it is expected that through this shaft another ore shoot will be opened. All the mills are doing excellent work and should there be any considerable body of ore struck in the Starlight ground it will be necessary to have additional milling capacity to keep up with developments.

The Pioneer lease management has been forced to call on Rhyolite for more freight teams as the drifts are cleared, the ore blocked ready for stoping and three carloads in the loading bins. Two outfits have been sent to Pioneer to relieve the congestion and aid in an increased output. Everything in and about the lease is in magnificent condition. There is more ore area, greater general average, and increased receipts.

GREEN WORMS BECOMING PEST TO ORANGE TREES.

Growers in San Joaquin Valley Find an Enemy in Familiar Caterpillar. State and Federal Entomologists Investigating and Hope to Find a Remedy.

Another pest of the orange has been brought to light. During the past summer, an entomologist at Lindsay, Tulare county, discovered that larvae of a species of butterfly were defoliating young orange trees, and the indications are that it will have to be reckoned among the ever-increasing list of noxious insects. Dudley Moulton, State quarantine officer at San Francisco, has been informed of this new enemy, and states that he will immediately take active steps investigating as to the amount of damage done.

The larvae are the immature forms of a large swallow-tail butterfly, known to science as Papilio zolicson, common all through California, and particularly so in the San Joaquin Valley. A similar species, P. cresphontes, is very destructive to the orange trees in Florida, where its larvae are known as the "orange dog." Australia, India and South Africa also have orange dogs, and in some sections of these countries they render incalculable damage.

The worms are especially partial to nursery stock, and it is said that the citrus industry in India would be unprofitable were it not for the cheap labor that can be employed to destroy the pests by hand picking.

The discovery of a California orange dog certainly seems to predict another noxious enemy with which growers will have to contend.

Local entomologists express surprise that the larvae should be found feeding on oragne, as their normal food plants include such plants as carrots, parsley and parsnip, and many a good housewife who has her little backyard garden is familiar with "those horrid green worms."

The butterflies emerge from the overwintering chrysalids in early February, and at once the work of depositing the eggs is begun. These are laid promiscuously on the orange trees, and in a week or so small black caterpillars appear, which feed voraciously on the leaves and young shoots. As the larvae grow, the blackish color is lost, and at maturity they are of a bright green.

Their large size and conspicuousness make hand picking an easy remedy, but the fact that the eggs are being continually laid until late fall, and consequently new broods of caterpillars appearing, the drain to citrus growers from the wages of hand pickers would annually amount to a considerable sum.

At present the butterfly larvae are known to feed only on oranges in the San Joaquin citrus belt, but further investigation may find them destructive in Southern California.

Like the orange thrips, the butterflies have apparently but recently adapted themselves to the orange trees as both the thrips and the butterfly larvae fed on various other plants before the introduction of citrus stock into the San Joaquin Valley.

Dudley Moulton, who for the past several years has been in charge of the campaign against the pear thrips in the Santa Clara Valley, has given up this work on account of his new position as State quarantine officer at San Francisco. Paul R. Jones of the Bureau of Entomology at Washington, has succeeded him. Mr. Jones also has charge of the investigations of the orange thrips in the San Joaquin.

An appropriation of $50,000 was recently ordered by the State to further fight the thrips. The orange thrips in the Tulare and Fresno counties is causing considerable anxiety to citrus growers there. It was discovered but a year ago, and while the government was active in taking steps against it, the study of its control is scarcely begun.

A recent bulletin from the Arizona experiment station states that a species of thrips is doing considerable damage to oranges in that State. This species has been discovered to be the common grass thrips found all through North America, and is in various sections considered a serious enemy.

Several bulletins are shortly to be published regarding these two species of thrips by the Division of Entomology at Washington. Another dealing popularly with their control is expected to appear in the series of farmers' bulletins issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

LARGER THAN A CITY LOT.

New Sign of Local Business House Over Nine Thousand Square Feet in Area.

The largest sign ever painted west of Chicago, it is asserted, has been put up on Broadway, between Seventh and Eighth streets. Many persons have stopped to watch the work as it progressed the past week, and the immensity of the sign and its forcefulness have been much commented on. It consists of the familiar Barker Bros. signature, supplemented by a half-dozen other words denoting their line of business.

The mammoth sign occupies a space of 150 feet long, and sixty-two feet high, covering 9300 square feet, and occupying about two-thirds of the entire west side wall of the new building into which the furniture house will move within a few days.

A striking idea of the size of this sign can be gained from the statement that a city lot of the usual size—50x150 feet—contains 1800 square feet less space. The capital letters are four times as high as an ordinary man, being twenty-two feet from top to botton, and the small letters are more than twice as tall as an average man, being twelve feet high.

The sides of 55,800 bricks are included in the surface, and in painting this immense area more than fifty dollars' worth of wall brushes were required and worn entirely out. The materials used weighed nearly half a ton, there being 100 gallons of oil, 500 pounds of white lead, 300 pounds of chrome yellow, 125 pounds of lamp black, and 120 pounds of vermillion. The work occupied the full time of three men an entire week.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, Nov. 6.—S. V. Gates reports these real estate sales this week: H. E. Lidell, thirty-five acres to E. F. Sanders; M. A. Wolcott, thirty acres to E. F. Sanders, in section 34, and Mrs. Morso to J. S. Logan, forty acres in same section. This land is situated near San Jacinto avenue and is known as the old Toby ranch.

Herbert S. Johnson will install a pumping plant on his ranch of twenty acres, which he recently purchased north of town. He will seed the land to alfalfa.

The Nuevo Land Company expects to seed abount 4000 acres this year near Alessandro. The company is now engaged in prospecting for water on land it controls near Lakeview. The test well is down about 400 feet and will probably be sunk considerably further before the drill is stopped. Of the grain being sown this year, 500 acres will be wheat, 600 acres oats and the balance, 2900 acres, will be in barley.

A. J. Bollinger, who recently purchased twenty acres north of town from C. Lossman, will develop water and install a pumping plant.

George Easton, who owns a dairy north of town, reports that during October he sold $218 worth of butter from eighteen cows, or an average of $12.11 per cow. Mr. Easton thinks there is no doubt that dairying will pay in this valley.

The Lapp-Gifford Well Boring Company has been given the contract for putting down 2000 feet of two-inch test holes for the Perris Valley Land and Water Company on the land recently purchased by the company known as the North Newport ranch.

Jean Laborde reports having discovered some very fine pink granite on Dr. Reese's ranch southwest of town.

the most dangerous rascal on the Coast; and he is anything but a "Pinhead."

His election as Mayor of San Francisco means a good deal more than it sounds. It means that the mutinous labor-union crews, of which he is captain, are lying round with cracked heads and Pinhead is airily dangling a belaying pin, waiting for some one else to start another insurrection.

Some years ago, Pinhead conceived the remarkable idea of "cornering" labor in San Francisco, just as Patten cornered wheat in Chicago.

Pinhead decided that, if workmen were scarce enough they would get enormous wages. Very well, he would make them scarce. With San Francisco lying prostrate in its ashes, Pinhead began to work out this interesting but diabolical conspiracy of creating a false shortage of labor.

It is a matter of common knowledge that, when bricklayers and plasterers were so scarce in San Francisco that contractors eagerly paid them $20 a day, hundreds of bricklayers and plasterers were walking the streets hungry and in rags. Pinhead would not let them work.

One of them told me how Pinhead treated workmen when they arrived from the East, attracted by the big wages.

Pinhead didn't harshly tell them they couldn't go to work—not he. He gave them the right hand of fellowship.

"Glad to see you," he cried. "Welcome to our city. We want you with us. Come right in and be one of us. It will only cost you $50 initiation fee to the union——"

"Fifty dollars!" would come a gasp from the workman who had probably arrived with his shirt-tail seeking an outlet through his pantaloons.

"Oh, haven't you $50?" Pinhead would say, surprised. "Well, old man, we want you with us. When you get $50 (airily) come round and be one of us."

The newly arrived couldn't go to work until he got the price of the initiation fee; and he could usually get $50,000,000 just as easily as $50.

The result was that contractors were almost desperate because they couldn't get enough workmen to finish their buildings at any price and hungry workmen were desperate because they couldn't get permission to work.

In order to do this trick, any one can see that Pinhead had to make California virtually an industrial island; that is to say, he had to cut off his unions in the building trades from all connection with the eastern potentates and make himself supreme.

About the time that the graft prosecution was launched and the Calhoun street car strike was called, a revolt took place against Pinhead.

An electrical union struck, on authority from the East, against Pinhead's orders and a split in that union took place. With all the unions lined up against Pinhead's union of the building trades, it looked for a time like a big war; but this election seems to show that Pinhead has quelled the insurrection.

The average union leader is a bluff, reckless, violent person with a go-to-hell manner.

Pinhead is sometimes as soft and silly as a schoolgirl; sometimes he coos like a sucking dove; sometime he is a violent ruffian. He has an uncontrollable temper—when an uncontrollable temper will best serve his purpose. Pinhead is whatever kind of man he thinks is most needed on the premises at the time. He is as cold-blooded as a snake; has always been suspected of being a traitor and is as slick as grease.

There are certain labor leaders who are visionary zealots, sincere in the belief that they are helping the "down-trodden." To Pinhead it is nothing but a profitable game.

I am not sure that Pinhead is the one who invented the game of both-ends-against-the-middle. Prof. Ferrero gives you the idea that Caesar devised it. But certainly Pinhead is a fine player.

HOROSCOPE.

Sunday, November 7, 1909.

Let thy soul guide thy course this day.
All noble impulses obey.

On this, the 311th day of the year, the sun is in benefic aspect with the moon, and Uranus bears bright company. Neptune also ascends to a fortunate position in the zodiac.

The configuration is one of intense power for spiritual things, matters of thought and insight, ethics and affairs of the heart and soul.

Reading and study are likely to prove inspiring and fruitful.

Good deeds are done today under aspects that not only shed blessings on the donors, but make for bright fortune, promising that benevolence and generosity exercised today will be as bread cast upon the waters.

As every aspect is bright for the just, the honorable and the high-minded, so all the signs are sinister and menacing for the treacherous, the cruel and the mean.

The sun rules as the greatly fortunate planet in this period, conferring success on boldness and courage in upholding the side of principle or championing the cause of friends or dependents, even if it seems to be against material interests or worldly advantage.

These twenty-four hours should be good for asking favors, seeking employment, traveling for health or pleasure, and dealing with powerful persons.

The augury is good for doing things out of the common track. Theology, philosophy, astronomy and other studies in the higher fields of mentality are under an excellent sign.

Scientists and writers, especially poets, should find the time full of potent suggestion.

"Turn over a new leaf" today. Neptune's influence promises stability and permanence.

Persons with this birthdate are under a sign that indicates that a successful twelvemonth will follow if they cultivate their power of systematic application and use their reasoning faculties without allowing vanity or pride to cloud problems.

Children are born under aspects that often grant great social favor, high religious emotions and philanthropy.

UP GOES THE GASOLINE.

Two gasoline torches exploded almost simultaneously in different places of business yesterday morning. M. Bloom, a tinner, of No. 461 Custer avenue, was at work at No. 128 Wilmington street, with a blowpipe, when it blew up and burned his hands. He was treated at the Receiving Hospital. The other explosion was at the City Ornamental Wire Works, No. 726 South Main street. Joe Biscor was operating the torch. He escaped injury.

BRUISED IN CAR "POCKET."

D. H. Dunn, a painter, was pocketed between two cars at First and Broadway yesterday morning while riding a motorcycle. His legs were bruised so severely that it was necessary to take him to the Receiving Hospital for treatment. He resides at No. 315½ East Seventh street.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Nevins have returned from Fairbanks, Alaska, and are staying with Mrs. Nevin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilcher of Budlong avenue.

COLONY BACKED BY MILLIONS.

WEALTHY MENNONITE FATHERS' NEW SETTLEMENT.

Has Ambitious Plans for Lerdo, in San Joaquin Valley—Announces That Only Those Who Can Speak German Need Apply for Lots—Dry Porterville Loses Industry.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PORTERVILLE, Nov. 4.—Lerdo has been chosen as the name for the new Mennonite colony, established near the southern border of this county. Ambitious plans have been laid for the development of the 13,000 acres which the members of the faith have bought, as well as for the upbuilding of the town itself. The prime mover is Henry J. Martens, a millionaire Mennonite, who is here from his home in Hillsboro, Kan.

Martens says contracts will be let at once for all the needed wells, and that for this feature of the development $450,000 will be spent, on a basis of 150 wells at an average cost, with pumping plant, of $3000. Lerdo is also to be the site of a Mennonite college, the only school of the kind in the United States. The buildings for which the plans have been drawn, it is stated by Mr. Martens, will cost about $50,000. Lots in the townsite are now being sold in the East for as high a price as $750. No property will be sold to any but German-speaking Mennonites.

Because Porterville is a dry town, and because the red-light district has been closed, this city is to lose a granite and ornamental stone works, located since the discovery here two years ago of fine deposits of black granite. H. J. Reinhardt, manager, states that since these places have been removed from the city he has been unable to keep a crew of stone cutters at work. He says the cutters as a class are single men, and are addicted to the amusements of which Porterville has had none since June 1. Members of the stone cutters' trade, however, resent this allusion to them as a class and state that the real reason for the move is different. At any rate, whatever the cause, a new site has been purchased in Hanford and hereafter the rough stone will be quarried here only and will be shipped to the new works to be polished and cut.

Members of the Board of Education were convinced that Porterville is growing when Superintendent Bigham of the grammar grades reported to them last night that the present buildings are filled to overflowing and that plans must be made at once for taking care of any increase for the coming year.

J. W. Jeffrey, State Commissioner of Horticulture, will be here on Saturday to address the meeting of the fruit growers, which will gather for the purpose of forming a permanent citrus protective association.

Mrs. William Finch, who is visiting here from Los Angeles at the Cornell ranch, a few miles south of this city, tripped upon her dress while walking downstairs in the Cornell home this afternoon and, falling the full length of the staircase, received a compound fracture of the left leg, just below the knee point. She was taken to the hospital, where it was stated that there may be internal injuries.

RAWHIDE WORK.

ondon Engineer Samples Entire District in Behalf of Clients.

RAWHIDE, Nev. 5.—Development on the Grutt-Balloon Hill has been more or less retarded for the past two weeks, owing to the time taken in installing the air compressor and machine drills. On the 125, 185 and 50 levels an immense tonnage is already blocked and ready for hauling to mill, according to General Manager ooney, and with this work carried down to the 500 level, it is easy to see what a vast tonnage will be the result. Large quantities of ore would be milled were the milling conditions such as to make this possible. On the 85-foot level, they have twelve or fourteen inches that will run, it is estimated, $400 or $500 per ton, though so far no assays have been made.

Conditions at the National mill are about the same as far as the glut of ore awaiting treatment is concerned. The operation of the plant is improving to some extent, and it is said that from twenty-five to thirty tons are being treated daily. This is not half its capacity. The lack of a sufficient number of cyanide tanks, together with other discrepancies, at this time makes a larger tonnage impossible.

A clean-up is being made on the Kearn 1 ore, which is said to run about $34 per ton. A lot from the Kearn 2 is also being treated. This will be followed by consignments from the Marigold and Grutt-Mining, the latter having 100 tons ready for hauling to the mill as soon as the new ore bins are ready to receive it.

On the St. Ives lease on the Queen state at a depth of 215 feet, ten inches average $100 per ton, and which samples from $70 to $209. This is undoubtedly the Grutt-Balloon Hill ore body, and the 185-foot level of the latter would conform to the 215-foot level of the St. Ives. The whole drift is in milling ore and everything is saved for treatment at the local mills. The body is close to five feet wide and every indication points to the permanency of the ore body. The company is still sinking and has attained a depth of 330 feet. It is expected that they will start the compressor this week, and with the operation of the machine drills, development will be more rapid than in the past.

C. S. Herzig, a London mining engineer, has been spending some time in Rawhide looking over the camp in the interest of English and continental European capitalists. Mr. Herzig came direct from London here, though he is connected with mines in Africa, Australia, Burmah and various other parts of the world. Mr. Herzig said, when asked whether or not European capitalists were interested in Rawhide: "It is quite evident that the people of foreign countries take an interest in Rawhide from the fact that I am here in their interests to look the situation over. If I found conditions such as to warrant sampling the camp I was to do so. It was left entirely to my judgment. I have concluded to make a most thorough sampling of the entire district. I go from here to ly. London and New York capitalists have an option on large blocks of stock in some of the companies here, and that is the real reason that I am here, as they wish to ascertain the real value of their holdings."

The Coalition company has the int shaft down to 435 feet, entirely retimbered and put in perfect condition for active and permanent development. New slides have been added and the sides lined to run 1000 feet. The Rawhide Coalition Mines Company is doing the work and is practically engaged in sinking the shaft to the 1000-foot level as contemplated. Preparations are under way to put in a large hoisting plant, compressor and air drills.

Talking Idols Surprise Chinks.

Performances of a ventriloquist produce a sure-enough sensation in Chinatown.

As Reynard entered his eyes lighted up at the sight of the rare material at hand, and for ten minutes the little gods bawled out the Chinese worshipers in a way that was a shame, entered into arguments with one another and threatened to spit in the eye of any Chinese present who didn't buy a dozen prayer papers. Needless to say the keeper did a land-office business for the next few minutes, and the fame of that shrine is made forever.

Tiring of this he went to the automobile. He had taken a manikin with him, and he rested this dummy on the edge of the tonneau of the large touring car.

The manikin was a country constable, a haysee with a bunch of chin whiskers. Within a very few moments the automobile was surrounded by scores of Chinese, eager to hear what the constable had to say.

"Hiim Toy Sin," muttered a Celestial.

The Toy Sin is the little idol of good luck which the Chinese fight desperately for, every four years, at the feast of the dead.

The constable took the affair calmly. He opened his wooden mouth, grinned, and began warning the Chinese.

"Git back from this here outomobile er I'll hev the law on ye, gol darn ye," said the constable.

Instantly the Chinese backed away to a respectful distance.

"Hello, Chailie, you smloka plipe," said the constable, fixing his wooden eyes on a near-by yellow man.

The Chinese gasped, but advanced, proud of the distinction of having been selected from the number. He came forward, smiling at the manikin and addressed it.

"Me plitty good Chlina bloy, allee same no smloka blop, smloka cigallette, ha."

He grinned at the manikin and the manikin stared back.

At the same time Reynard squeezed a bulb in the back of the dummy and its mouth opened and a stream of water squirted out, hitting the startled Celestial in the neck.

If he had been prodded with a hot poker, the Chinese would not have jumped higher than he did as he dived back into the crowd.

An hour of this sort of fun followed, and Reynard left Chinatown with the the yellow men chattering over the very latest sensation of the day.

Chances for Young Men.

Let young men turn to the skilled trades and they will find remunerative employment in a field from which the competition of women will never drive them. The handicrafts call for abilities of a far higher order than those employed in many vocations where the competition of women is a factor, and in all the skilled trades there is a demand for high-grade men.

There has been too much disposition on the part of young American men to turn away from the trades on the false assumption that they are less genteel than certain other forms of employment. It is a silly notion of which every vigorous young American should be ashamed.—[Denver Republican.

Where They Have Gone.

The Rev. Hugh Price Hughes of London, who, speaking on a recent Sunday evening of the desertion of certain places of worship in the city and East End, which a few years ago were thronged by devout congregations, said: "What has become of these good people? Some have gone to heaven and others to the suburbs." The contrast has never been more felicitously expressed.—[Exchange.

AROUND THE WORLD.

first-class, and if there is any place in Japan worth seeing that we have not seen, it is our own fault. We arranged for a dozen or more lectures at the various educational institutions, and were quite successful with most of them. I made it a point to ask every Japanese I met if he was going to the United States, or if he would like to go, and without exception, every one of them said that he was coming to the United States just as soon as he could possibly arrange things.

After spending six weeks in Japan we left for China. On the way over we gave a lecture, and received four different kinds of money in the collection—Japanese, Chinese, Mexican and American.

We were quite successful in Northern China with our lecture, and decided to get Pongee silk and other light clothing, as we knew we would soon be in need of it. We had a number of lectures arranged, and figured that we would leave Northern China with considerable more money than we had had when we arrived. But luck was against us. The Emperor and Empress Dowager died, and three of the lectures we had arranged at Chinese educational institutions were called off. The result was that we had hardly money enough to pay our hotel and clothing bills.

We were anxious to try a Chinese hotel. People told us that we would not be able to stand it more than one night, which proved to be a fact. Of all the dirty places I have ever been in, a Chinese hotel heads the list. The Chinese use beds which are somewhat similar to the American style. Instead of springs, however, they have nothing but plain boards to sleep upon. Some of the Chinese prefer springs and mattresses, and so the modern native hotels have a few rooms fitted up with these. It is customary for all guests to furnish their own bed clothing, but the hotel keeps a small supply on hand for the convenience of those who do not carry any.

I ordered bed clothing and a pillow brought to my room. When the things arrived I did not think there was sufficient, and so ordered two more blankets.

We had a regular Chinese dinner that evening. It consisted of rice, chop suey, and several dishes that I had never seen or heard of before. The next morning we decided that we would have a breakfast which was just as near an American breakfast as it was possible to get. The meal consisted of poached eggs, rice and fried pork. When we went to pay our bill we found that it was several dollars more than we expected. I asked the proprietor about it, and he told me that the bill was correct. I asked him what he charged for the room, dinner and breakfast; he said $3 Mexican money for each person. I then asked him why our bill was $6.50. "You havem too muchee bed clothes, you havem tableclothes, you havem light in room, and too muchee things." It seemed useless to complain, and so we paid the bill.

The captain would not allow us to take a collection, after giving our lecture on the boat going from Shanghai to Hongkong. When the boat cast anchor in Hongkong harbor, we counted our money and found that we had $3.50 Mexican coin, or about $1.46 American money. The boat does not dock at a wharf at Hongkong. All passengers have to pay to get ashore, and to have their baggage taken ashore. We arranged with one of the King Edward Hotel porters to take charge of our baggage, and we went ashore in another launch. We went directly to the Y.M.C.A., and asked the secretary if he had a room we might get. He said he did not have, but that we might get one at the American Mission. At the American Mission they told us that they were full at that time, but that they would have a vacant room the following day. We paid $1.40 Mexican money for our lunch, and then wandered around for a few hours trying to find a moderate-priced room where we could spend the night. We knew that we could not afford to stay at the hotel where our baggage had been taken, and we also knew that we had to save money enough to pay for having the baggage brought ashore. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon we started up the Hongkong peak. The peak is about 1000 feet above sea level. We reached the summit just in time to see a remarkably beautiful sunset. For some time we sat charmed by the beauties all about us, forgetting that we had no place to lay our heads. As night came on we began thinking again about a place to rest. We finally decided to go down to the Y.M.C.A., get our overcoats, return to the peak, and spend the night there.

Just as we were about to leave, an English soldier approached with a hand telescope, and began scanning the horizon. We asked him if he was on duty all night. "No," he said, "I go off duty at 8 o'clock. Why do you ask?" "Oh, we were thinking about coming back up here to spend the night and see the sun rise in the morning, and thought we might keep you company if you were on duty." He replied that he would be very glad to have us come and stay with him at the bunkhouse. He told us that he had one steamer chair that we could divide between us, or take turns sleeping upon it. We thanked him, and told him not to be surprised if we returned. We started for Hongkong, but soon decided that if we were going to spend the night under cover it would not be necessary to have our overcoats. We went to the Peak Hotel, bought sandwiches, and about 8:30 returned to the bunkhouse. The evening passed pleasantly, we had good comfortable cots to sleep on, a fine breakfast in the morning, and returned to Hongkong as wealthy as we were the night before. The King Edward Hotel charged us $1 for bringing our baggage ashore; we paid coolies 40 cents for taking it to the American Mission, and had just 10 cents Mexican money left. For four or five days we carried letters around with us that we had written on the steamer, because we did not have money enough to buy postage to mail them to America.

On Thanksgiving evening we gave a lecture at Queen's College in Hongkong, and it was certainly the most thankful Thanksgiving we have ever spent. We gave two more lectures in Hongkong, and then went to Canton, where we gave several lectures. From there we returned to Hongkong, and left for Manila. The second day out we were struck by a typhoon, and strange to say, both of us lost our appetites.

The evening before we arrived in Manila we gave a lecture on board the boat, and a ladder up to the roof of the main building. From the roof we entered the third-story floor of the nine-story tower. When we were descending I told Fritz that I wanted to go out on the roof and walk around so that I could take pictures of the temple. He said that he would go down and wait for me in tre main court. Several times the priests hailed me, but I could not understand what they said, and pretended I did not know what they meant.

After taking photographs I returned to the main court by the way I came. Here I was met by a mob of priests who were all in a perfect fury. I approached them, pretending not to know that there was anything wrong, and asked what the trouble was. The head priest, who spoke perfect English, told me that we had defiled the temple, and that some one would have to suffer for it. Instead of returning the way we had gone to the tower, Fritz went down on the inside of the tower to the bottom of it and by so doing had entered one of their holy of holies. It seemed that I had also trespassed on forbidden ground, and so the temple had been completely defiled.

FOR GUIDE TO SETTLE.

The priest said that no one would be allowed to worship until a cleansing ceremony had been gone through with, and that the numerous pilgrims that were there would be debarred from worship until after midnight that night. He said that the cost of the cleansing would be about $25, and wanted us to bear the expenses. We told him that the guide had obtained permission for us to go into the tower and that he had said nothing against our taking pictures and going to the bottom of the tower and that we were quite blameless. He said he knew the guide was largely to blame and that he had already had him arrested. I told him that we were sorry that we had caused so much trouble, that we did not feel as though we should stand the expense of the cleansing ceremony.

He said, "very well, then the guide will have to pay it all himself." I told him that I thought the guide was quite innocent, and that he had not intentionally done any wrong. He said that it did not make any difference, that every time a dog or any other animal defiled the temple, no one was ever allowed to worship until the temple had been cleansed. I again told him how sorry we were to have caused the trouble and left him to settle the matter with the guide.

Things went quite smoothly during the remainder of the time we were in India.

In Madras we gave five lectures on three different evenings, and by so doing reaped quite a harvest. Native entertainments usually begin as soon as it is dark, except those held for the Brahmins or people of the higher class. This made it possible for us to give two lectures during a single evening.

From India we returned to Colombo and were very fortunate in arranging with the captain of a Norwegian cargo boat for passage to Egype. Third class passage on the cheapest passenger boat is £8, or $40. We secured passage on the tramp steamer for £6, or $30. There were no other passengers on the boat. We occupied the cabin, ate with the captain and had the freedom of the whole ship.

We arrived in Egype after the season was over, and so could not do much with our lectures. We succeeded in giving four in Cairo, but they were not very remunerative.

From Egypt we went to Palestine, where we had a very enjoyable time. We gave three lectures in Jerusalem and did very well with each one of them.

DEATH ON HOLY LAND ROAD.

A peculiar thing happened when we were returning from Jerico to Jerusalem. We came across a Russian pilgrim who had been overcome by a sunstroke. The poor fellow was nearly dead when we found him. We did the best we could to revive him, but not having any stimulants, other than some native liquor, that I got from one of the guards, we could do little to help the unfortunate man. We put him in our carriage, but he died before we reached Jerusalem. The interesting thing about the incident was that we found him within a few hundred yards of the place Christ must have had in mind when He told the parable of the Good Samaritan.

From Palestine we returned to Egypt and decided that we would go directly to England, where we would not have to bother about arranging for interpreters in giving our lectures. We thought that we could probably, by hustling, make enough to take a trip on the continent.

When we returned to Egypt, we had but $40 left. The cheapest third-class fare from Egypt to England is about forty-five dollars and we had less than forty between us. However we were very fortunate in arranging with the captain of another tramp steamer, and secured passage from Port Said to Hull, England, for two and a half pounds, each.

When we arrived in Hull we spent one day trying to arrange for a lecture but were unsuccessful. We decided that the best thing to do was to go directly to London, where there were so many institutions and organizations that might be interested in "Picturesque America and Its Wonders." I spent three days going from one institution to another, everywhere the people seemed interested and a number said that they would be pleased to arrange for a lecture. However, after they found that we wished to arrange for a lecure at once, they all told us that it was out of the question, that they never held lectures in England between the first of June and the middle of September. This seemed to be an unwritten rule in every institution.

FOUR CENTS AND IN LONDON!

Our small amount of money soon leaked away, until we were down to a loaf of bread, two buns and "tuppence," 4 cents. We decided that the time had come when we would have to appeal to some one for assistance. We went first to the general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. He said that it was quite impossible for him to assist us personally, and that the association had no funds available for such purposes. He told us, though that he felt sure that the American consul would come to our rescue. We called next, upon the American consul.

He listened to our tale of woe and then said, "Well, as far as I can see, you are up against it. The American government makes absolutely no provision for stranded citizens in a foreign country." We asked him if he could suggest anybody that we might see or anything that we might do to obtain some money. He said, "Yes, I will give you a card to the secretary of the American Society, here in London and probably he will be able to help you out in some way."

We took the card and went to see the secretary of the American Society. He listened very attentively and then said: "I am sorry, but I am afraid I cannot do anything for you. We have over a dozen cases before us now, all of which are very needy, and all apparently very deserving. I do not think our committee will see fit to do anything toward helping out two young, strong, able-bodied fellows, who are simply out to see the world." He suggested that we cable home for money. We said that would be a death blow to our pride, as we had started out to make our way around the world, and hated to cable home when we had come as far as we had. He asked us if we had any money at all and when we told him just how we were fixed, he gave each of us four shillings. He asked us if we did not have something that we could pawn, on which we could get money to cable home and support us while the money was on the way. We told him that we had a camera that was quite valuable and he suggested that we take that to "your uncle," and see what we could get on it. He then told us to come back and let him know what success we had.

We tried to get money on our camera at several pawn shops, but were unable to do so. At last we found a dealer who paid us $17.50 for a camera worth $67.50. With this money we squared our bills in London and went to Liverpool.

We thought it might be possible to make arrangements with the captain of some cargo boat to work our passage across the Atlantic, and in some way manage to get back to the United States.

We visited every ship in port, but were unable to negotiate passage on any of them.

About ten days after reaching Liverpool, we arranged with the proprietor of a number of entertainment halls to give two 15-minute lectures an evening, for a week. This was sort of a trial engagement, the idea being that if we made a hit, we would be sent around on the circuit. These entertainment halls were sort of a cross between a regular music hall and a motion picture show. We were quite successful during our first engagement, and the proprietor was very much pleased with our lecture. He told us that he would give us employment just as long as we cared to stay in England. In this way, we soon earned enough money to pay our passage across the Atlantic, and before long we were on the last stretch of our long journey. After reaching the United States, we came across the continent and had succeeded in lecturing our way around the world.

Galveston a Great Seaport.

"Galveston continues to surpass every seaport in the United States save New York alone in the total value of the products exported from its docks," said Thomas W. Aiken of the Oleander City, at the City Hotel. "One day last week five big ocean liners cleared from Galveston carrying cotton to European markets. Two of them held 26,000 bales each, and the aggregate value of the cargoes was $4,000,000. This is a remarkable showing for a town of its size, and is clear proof that so far as the South is concerned cotton is still king."—[Baltimore American.

VERSATILE.

NEW COP HAS "WENT" SOME.

West Pointer, Lawyer, and a Soldier of Fortune.

Has Had Adventures Galore on Land and Sea.

Made and Spent Large Sums; Still Has Prospects.

William L. Claiborne, descendant of a colonial secretary of Virginia and of a long line of warriors, a West Pointer, a university graduate, a lieutenant in the volunteer army, a soldier of fortune, a football star and an attorney-at-law, is one of the new appointees of the Los Angeles police department.

William L. Claiborne, descendant of a distinguished colonial family, and a man of unusual attainments, who has become a member of the police force.

Singular as it may seem that a man of such versatility and attainments would choose the life of a patrolman, this fact is only one small incident in a career which is brimming full of adventure and experiences.

Perhaps no man in the whole country can boast of more ventures on the seas of life—sometimes up and sometimes down—then can this man, who now does eight hours' duty each day as a guardian of the peace of this city.

Fate seems to have been conspiring for more than a century to lay open the opportunity to him to be a great man in a line of great men. But he would rather walk a beat and hope for advancement in the police department.

Many men of more than ordinary attainments frequently become patrolmen because they are driven to do something for a living. But such is not the case of Claiborne. His income from investments alone is twice as much as his salary from the city. His only excuse for choosing the vocation he has taken up is: "I like it; I am fitted for it, and it suits me."

SOME GENEALOGY.

William C. Claiborne, one of the first colonial secretaries of Virginia, was a direct ancestor of the man who is chasing thieves by nighttime in this city. The secretary had large grants of land from the crown of England, having been given Kent Island. Because of his possessions he was in almost constant trouble with Lord Baltimore. Another in the line of descent was Gen. Thomas Claiborne, who achieved fame in the Mexican War.

Claiborne's father was Att. Dan W. Claiborne's father was Atty. Dan W. partner of Senator E. H. Carmack, who was killed by Benjamin Cooper. He was also a soldier—a brigadier-general in the Southern army when the Civil War closed.

The patrolman's uncles, Patrick, Walter and Thomas, were each major-generals in the Southern army. Patrick was killed at Franklin and Walter at Shiloh, while fighting under Gen. Johnson. Thomas is now ninety years old and is a resident of Nashville.

Claiborne graduated from the Vanderbilt University at Nashville, in 1893. He decided to follow his forefathers in becoming a soldier. Through strong political influence of his father, he was appointed from Arkansas, there being no vacancy from Tennessee. He was one of eight Southern boys who objected to being hazed and, as a result of their actions, a crisis was brought about in West Point affairs. Among his classmen were Arthur Pickle of Knoxville, Tenn., J. L. Jeffries, of Arkansas, and T. L. White of Memphis.

Every day there was a pitched battle between the Southerners and the upper classmen. Sometimes fists were used, more often clubs and finally guns. In one fracas Sergt. Hugh L. Gerron of the regular army was shot to death. Claiborne bears a scar of this battle, having lost a part of the lobe of his left ear.

A Senatorial investigation resulted and a court martial was held. No blame was fixed on any of the students, but hazing was stopped for several years.

ARMY MULE CONTRACTOR.

With several others who thirsted for a real fight, Claiborne left the institution a short time before they would have graduated. The Boer War was in progress and several went away to get into the thick of battle. Claiborne obtained a contract for furnishing the British army with mules. He made two trips to South Africa with cargoes of the long-eared animals, which he had bought in the Southern market.

After his contract had expired, he remained to see the "fun." Although he was a neutral, he succeeded in getting well to the front and came near paying for it with his life. With nine others who stood on neutral ground, he was caught in the range of the guns of the Boer army, when 2000 British soldiers were cut off at Ladysmith from the [illegible] body.

Before the firing ceased he was wounded in the right wrist, left leg, and hip. After two and a half months in the hospital at Johannesburg, he returned to his native land by way of Cape Town and Gibraltar.

The fever of battle was in his blood and he joined the Astor Batte [illegible] New York to go to the Philippines to fight the Spanish and later the rebellious Filipinos. He had a commission as second lieutenant.

The battery was disbanded and he was transferred to the Thirty-third United States Volunteer Infantry. He was with it during its chase after Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, when the Filipino general's sister, wife and baby were taken prisoner.

At San Quentin, in the bend of the Banget Pass, he was with the scouts when the position of the insurgents was discovered. He was wounded in the right shoulder and left thigh, and was taken to the hospital at Vigan. He was a patient there when the institution was attacked by the insurgents and the sick and crippled joined in the fight and repulsed them. Later he was transferred to the Hospital Ship Relief.

ALSO IN CHINA.

When the Boxer troubles broke out, he went to China and took part in the siege of Tien-tsin, seeing Capt. Riley and Col. John Liscon fall. He was wounded in the right knee, and returned to San Francisco.

In 1900 he went to Manila, taking charge of the American Hotel, amassing a fortune of about $100,000, before he disposed of it. Two years later he went to Hot Springs, Ark., and started two men in the poolroom business, outlaying about $40,000. Meantime he returned to the Vanderbilt University, studying law and graduating.

Love of adventure appealing to him, he readily fell in with the idea of outfitting an expedition to raise a sunken galleon in Mexican waters. The ill-fated ship was supposed to be loaded with treasure. The expedition cost him $20,000; no treasure.

Next he drifted to Goldfield, located and sold claims, made and lost a fortune of $80,000. Just before the earthquake he returned to San Francisco. In the fire he lost a law library of 15,000 volumes, which he had inherited. Again he went back to the Nevada mining camps, to remain until the early part of this year.

While there he acted as bodyguard for Gov. Sparks, and was active in bringing about the settlement of the labor-union troubles. He assisted Superintendent Cox in organizing the State police, and gathered most of the evidence that sent N. J. Preston and John Smith to the penitentiary for life, for murdering John Silva.

Soon after coming to this city he took the civil service examination for patrolman, and was appointed with the last lot. While at Vanderbilt he played end on the 'varsity eleven, and was picked as a member of the All-Southern team.

While still having a few remnants of the fortunes he has made, the officer will come into one-fifth of an estate valued at $120,000, left by his father. It will be divided in eight years, when the youngest child reaches his majority.

"I am a policeman just because I want to be," he said yesterday, when asked about his choice of vocations. But the wife he recently married has hopes that he will take up the practice of law, and possibly she may influence him to discard the brass buttons and the blue clothes.

Cliff Dwellers Attract Tourists.

Archeologists returning from the expedition which has been at work all summer restoring the famous cliff dwellings of the Mesa Verde in Southwestern Colorado, say that in spite of the obstacles of the journey there over a trail, the wonderful place is attracting considerable attention. Not fewer than one hundred persons visited the Spruce Tree House this last summer. The government is now building a carriage road, connecting with the county highways of Mancos, the railroad station twenty-five miles from the Mesa, so as to make it a little more accessible, but is doing this so slowly, with an appropriation of only $2000 a year, that by the time the last miles are completed those first constructed in soft shale will be pretty well worn out. The greatest exhibit of pre-Columbian civilization on this continent is the estimate which the archeologists make of the possessions of this latest national park.—[Boston Transcript.

The Coming Famine

By the wanton waste of our hardwood supply, the country has sown the wind, and is about to reap the whirlwind.

Listen:

President Roosevelt: "We have in this country already crossed the verge of a timber famine."

Gifford Pinchot: "We have apparently about 15 years' supply of hardwood timber now ready to cut. That the shortage will strike at the very foundation of some of the country's most important industries is unquestionable. This much is true beyond doubt, that we are dangerously near a hardwood famine and have made no provision against it."

Guy E. Mitchell, U. S. Geological Survey: "At the present rate of timber consumption the price of every class of lumber ten years hence will be about double the present figure."

A tract of land in West Virginia, covered with hemlock and spruce, purchased five years ago for $12,000, recently sold for $500,000. Those who bought timber land a few years ago are now reaping a harvest of gold.

When Our Supply is Gone--?

It takes 50 years to grow an ordinary telegraph pole. To attain a foot in diameter walnut requires 56 years, ash 72 years, hickory 90 and white oak 110. No human ingenuity, no public clamor, no Congressional appropriations can hurry the process a jot. No foreign country can come to the rescue, as each needs more than it has, and many are now suffering acutely from a shortage. Yet the insatiable demand for these hardwoods increases yearly at a terrific pace, and the supply decreases equally as fast.

One Conclusion Is Inevitable

Whoever has hardwood timber to sell will reap a rich reward. If any tree could be found which springs quickly into maturity, to replenish the ranks of our fallen forests, that tree would be the open sesame to wealth.

One such tree exists.

Standing apart, as though in alienated loneliness on account of its almost supernatural capacity for growth, is the Eucalyptus,

the fastest growing hardwood in the world. In rapidity of growth, which differentiates it so strikingly from all the tribe of hardwoods, it is the amazing miracle of trees. Although possessing the finest grain and fibers that season almost as hard as iron, this tree, under ideal conditions, grows as large in eight years as the white pine in fifty, as the white oak in a century.

It is to this tree that the country must look for partial alleviation in the approaching days of hardwood famine, declares the Government.

This tree is confined below the frost line, and requires for its best development a rich soil, freedom from extremes of temperature, and a plentiful water supply, especially at first, and then within permanent reach of its long roots. Less than one-twentieth of the state furnishes the conditions necessary for its maximum growth. These ideal conditions are found in carefully selected spots in the great San Joaquin Valley.

Its Commercial Uses

The need for proving eucalyptus has passed. It is no longer necessary to demonstrate that eucalyptus can be used for all the purposes for which other hardwoods are employed. It is so used everywhere. The extent of this use is limited only by the present limit of the supply. If a supply could be drawn upon sufficient to meet all possible requirements, not a foot of eastern hardwood would be shipped to the Pacific Coast today for manufacturing purposes. Moreover, when such supply becomes available, eastern manufacturers assert that they must establish themselves on this Coast, as the eastern source of supply will soon have ceased.

SICKNESS, unemployment, financial losses, accident, lurk beyond the horizon to levy their toll on human happiness. The human struggle is chiefly an effort to win security against the future. To get this security the rich put millions into the purchase of annuities, while those less fortunate are left to face life's uncertainties as best they may. Humanity is on tiptoe for the opportunity that will bring the assurance of safety from the hell-hounds of adversity and poverty. What, then, makes a great opportunity—this goal of the heart's desire?

The majority of men who are poor today have worked harder for what little they have than did Carnegie or Weyerhauser, the timber king. The reason is simple: those who have amassed wealth have seen the shadows of coming events, and have placed themselves in the pathway of great moving forces, which operated irresistibly to create high values. Then all nature works for men, pouring her treasures in their laps, and bountifully rewards. To sail in the wrong direction means rocks and shallows. To rise with the tide leads on to fortune.

Carnegie saw the great industrial movement which pointed inevitably to a development of the steel industry, and placed himself in the channel of this movement. We know the result. Scores of the companions of his youth who might have acted on the same indications are still eking out their lives as humbly as they began. Rockefeller merely foresaw the possibilities of controlling one feature of the oil industry—transportation, and out of that concept grew Standard Oil. The timber barons a few years ago foresaw the startling rise that was inevitable in the value of timber, reached out to the utmost extent of their resources, and today the commercial value of their holdings is staggering to contemplate. Weyerhauser is today richer than Rockefeller.

At any period certain forces are operating inexorably to create rising values in well-defined directions. Those who perceive the movement and courageously act are carried to affluence. Others live to relate their lost opportunities, and to deplore the fact that they had less perception than their now financially independent neighbors.

There is no exception to this rule.

Such an opportunity exists today in California, one equal to any that has brought financial independence to hundreds in the past.

That opportunity is disclosed to you on this page. Behind it is an array of authority such as has never before substantiated a commercial project in this country. The truth of its claims rests upon the authority of the United States Government. Its import to you cannot be exaggerated. If you do nothing else today, read every word upon this page. Nowhere in the country will words be heard or read today that can so profitably be your Sunday sermon.

Like a Government Bond

IN short, one risk, and one only, attends the ownership of growing eucalyptus timber—that the sun shall cease to shine, that the laws of nature shall cease to operate, that soil and water shall cease to nourish. In other words, it has the impregnable safety and stability of a government bond.

No industrial enterprise has so stable a foundation as growing timber. The nation's financial integrity rests upon its land; and of all land values, growing timber is today the safest, the most lucrative.

In short, eucalyptus timber is the only investment open to the man of ordinary means today which compares in safety with the government bond, and offers at the same time the alluring rewards promised by hazardous speculation.

The demand for growing trees is widening daily. The owner of such timber land, if he wishes to sell at any time, can realize a lucrative profit on his investment. The difficulty, however, is not to find willing purchasers, but to find owners who are willing to relinquish their holdings.

There is no compulsory wait for profits. An owner may either await the maturity of his product, or sell his appreciating values at any period.

GLENARDEN
Where beauty and fertility conspire.

Never before have such an abundant water supply and soil of such alluvial richness been devoted to eucalyptus.

Never before has any eucalyptus company offered such protection to the investor, or merged itself so completely with his interests.

Never before have all the necessary factors for commercial success been so combined to insure the maximum profits.

Never before has any company attempted to offer such values at so low a price.

Glenarden, by its possession of every natural and commercial advantage, marks a new era in the eucalyptus industry.

GLENARDEN
Water, in inexhaustible abundance, creates the wizardry of California soil.

Millions Have Been Made Deforesting America Millions Will Be Made Reforesting America

They are now laying their plans for this contingency. They have nowhere else to go.

The Profits

To the uninformed the commercial value of these trees is startling, almost incredible, so little has the indifferent public grasped the significance of our rapidly dwindling timber supply. But the facts are unassailable. One would hesitate to use the figures, so extraordinary do they appear, were it not that the Government stands behind them.

The government's ultra-conservative estimate of the present value of a 10-year-old tree on the stump is $5. With 600 trees to the acre, the net profit from the first cutting will be as follows:

From 1 Acre	- -	$ 3,000
From 5 Acres	- -	15,000
From 10 Acres	-	30,000

After the first cutting these profits repeat themselves every seven years indefinitely; for the tree springs anew from the stump and grows much faster than before. From five acres a revenue equal to $1500 a year at the first cutting, and thereafter over $2000 a year.

This is an increase in value of 120 per cent a year on the original investment!

Five acres of growing eucalyptus bought now, without appreciable hardship, will insure an income of $1500 a year—even unto the third and fourth generation.

By the possession of a few acres of this timber now, all fear of the future may be stricken from any man's life. What is the measure of the value of this boon?

Growing eucalyptus timber places the annuities of the rich within the reach of the man or woman of small means.

Remember that the above is an ultra-conservative estimate, that all forces are making irresistibly for higher values, and that it is the United States Government that vouches for its truth.

An Incontrovertible Proof of the commercial value of eucalyptus is seen in the project conceived by Gifford Pinchot, head of the national forestry service, and now under way, to plant 25,000,000 of these trees along the course of the great aqueduct between Los Angeles and the Owens River. Within eight or ten years, these trees can be marketed for timber at a profit of $100,000,000, which will not only wipe out the entire expense of the aqueduct construction, amounting to $25,000,000, but will put $75,000,000 in the city treasury besides.

This surplus would relieve both the city and county of Los Angeles from all needs of taxation for ten years. Before that time another cutting of these trees would yield another $100,000,000, and so on, which means that eucalyptus would lift the burden of taxation from both city and county indefinitely.

This is an event in the history of California more momentous than the discovery of gold. No such situation ever existed before in any country, and would not be possible with any other tree than the eucalyptus. It opens possibilities for city and county development, for the execution of vast public enterprises, that startle the imagination, and will permit the transformation of Los Angeles into the wonder city of the world.

What eucalyptus will do for Los Angeles it will do for you.

Experts declare that the time is rapidly approaching when the value of the eucalyptus industry will leap far ahead of citrus fruit, oil and gold in California, as no conceivable event can stop the continuous rise in the price of hardwood timber at the rate at which the supply is being exhausted. The smallest county in California planted to eucalyptus would produce more wealth annually at present prices than is produced by all the gold mines or all the oil wells of the state, at their maximum production!

Risks?

The eucalyptus has not a single known disease. Its peculiar sap repels all pests, no blights afflict it. Droughts do it no harm, for its roots drink up its copious sustenance from the sub-irrigated soil, making all seasons alike.

Careful culture, during its first few years, with abundant irrigation while its roots are becoming established, supplies the aid needed to its growth. So hardy is this tree, that there is no known instance of its dying a natural death.

Panics, strikes, political changes, bursted "booms"—none of the vicissitudes that snatch the profits from years of toil, can stay for an instant the steady growth of trees into timber, while the universal demand grows more and more acute.

What We Do

The American Forestration Company has studied every need peculiar to the eucalyptus industry, as a commercial enterprise; and its operating methods more completely meet these needs than any system hitherto devised. It has embodied in its operating methods new features which distinguish it from any operating company.

The planting and culture of the tree the first two years is but one part of the eucalyptus industry as a commercial enterprise. After that comes the protection to the growing tree, the payment of taxes and expenses incidental to the upkeep, and providing both the best market for the product and the necessary facilities for marketing the growing timber holdings of any owner who may wish to sell before maturity.

Of Supreme Importance

are the character and location of the land designed for eucalyptus growing.

The presence of ideal conditions may easily mean a difference of a million dollars in timber value at one cutting in a forest the size of Glenarden.

Glenarden Reserve

now being offered, lies in the rich alluvial district of the famous county of Fresno, which produces more wealth from its soil than any county in the world. This county, webbed with irrigating canals, lies midway in the San Joaquin Valley, being the very heart of the fruit belt. Upon this soil are found the most prolific orchards and vineyards in California. In the rich lowlands of this county are immense fruit ranches of pure alluvial deposit. Glenarden lies in the choicest portion of this area.

Without qualification, without exception, the soil of Glenarden is not surpassed by any spot in California.

Water

plays even a more vital part in the growth of the eucalyptus than soil—the two being the twin requisites to perfect results. The early life of the tree is particularly influenced by the factor of water supply. The phenomenal growth of the tree is due very largely to its great capacity of consuming water.

Consider This

Glenarden tract possesses a water frontage of more than five miles on a deep watercourse, 200 feet wide and 20 feet deep, inexhaustible the year 'round.

COUNT 'EM.

ROLL CALL OF MUSICAL ARMY.

Those Who Will Help Make Event a Success.

"Professor Napoleon" Has a Large Crowd Enlisted.

Poses, Dances, Songs, Ready for Performance.

That the incredulous may believe, the names of all the 720 participants in "Professor Napoleon" are given out. The board of managers of the Children's Hospital says "720 in the cast; count them."

To count them would be a greater task than is at first apparent, as there are enough people to make a good-sized village. The initial performance will be staged at the Auditorium Wednesday evening.

The long list of names shows that "Professor Napoleon" is easily the largest affair in point of numbers and interest ever attempted anywhere in the West, and Los Angeles will have a first night of its own to go down into local theatrical history. All the groups and dances have been constantly rehearsed for six weeks, and each group is now so proficient in the many intricate steps and pretty poses that the production could have been staged last week, if necessary. Here are the characters, as they make their appearance on the stage:

Men! Stop Taking Poison

Have you ever noticed the man who goes to the drug store ever so often for his bottle of "nerve tonic," "invigorator," kidney dope or other mixtures? Ever see him cured? No—he always looks all in, down and out, and he's getting worse every day, but the dope deceives his senses and he thinks it helps him. It puts his stomach out of order and ruins his health in every way, but he doesn't seem to realize it. Why? Because the drug dopes away the pain or bad feeling, and the alcohol in the mixture produces a false stimulation. You see him going to the dope shop every week or two for a measure of his dope, and he thinks he is paying for it, but he isn't. The chief paying will come after a while, when the ruin of his system is complete and the drug habit has a firm hold on him—then he will suffer with all kinds of complaints and nothing will give him relief—that's the time the drug superstition gets its full pay—another man doomed to end his days a WRECK. All the foulest products of earth's decomposing disease matter are raked over to make the drugs; all the poisonous plants and nasty insects of disease infested lands are gathered for their POISON, and the poison is fed to a human being simply because he is weak or has some other poison in his system. A fine practice, isn't it, and eminently respectable, no matter where the Man ends? BUT THE MAN WHO THINKS FOR HIMSELF will think well before he swallows some mysterious mixture. He wants to know why he is taking it and what he is taking it for and HOW IT IS GOING TO BENEFIT HIM. We want to talk to that man, to give or send him our free book, which tells HOW to get strong and vigorous and HEALTHY without a drop of medicine.

"The word health now means a normal supply of electricity in the body, and the word disease means an insufficiency of that power."

The basis of energy in the human body is Electricity. All the organs, every function of the body and the health of the individual depend upon the Electricity possessed by the nerves, and pain, weakness, despondency, lost energy and ambition denote a lack of it. If the stomach fails to digest the food that is given it, if the nerves are weak, kidneys inactive or any organ fails to do its work, it can be restored to perfect health by the proper use of it.

The greatest proof of the value of Electricity and how it is replacing drugs for a weak, broken down system is the fact that physicians who a few years ago scoffed at the idea of Electricity as a cure, are today applying it in preference to drugs. The results of experiments conducted by the greatest scientists in the country show that the action of the organs, the basis of life in the body, is Electricity, and where it has been wasted by overwork, indiscretions or disease, it can be replaced by the proper application.

People who have squandered fortunes in search of health and have tried every medium known have in the end been willing to consider what the electric theory of disease could do for them. No sooner do we explain it to them than they are astonished at the simplicity and the directness of our treatment.

They wonder that it has never occurred to them before that disease was but the result of the disturbance and derangement of the vital force; that the only way to restore an organ of the body to healthy action is to bring to that organ the electro-nervous force that shall cause it to discharge its functions without permitting stagnation, decay and consequent death.

Activity is the law of life.

Our Electric Vitaliz dry cell body battery or electric belt restores strength and health in a natural way. Call or write for our free book explaining how and why it cures. It's written for thinking men—men who want to know what they are getting and that it is correct.

VITALIZ is the most powerful and perfect working appliance of this order made and requires no nasty vinegar or acids like old style belts need—Vitaliz produces a high-grade power that cannot be obtained in common belts, so don't think all belts alike and be imposed upon by getting a cheap chain of JUNK, as sold all over town, and everywhere and called "electric belt." You can get them anywhere, but they are useless and weak.

No nasty vinegar or poisonous and dangerous acids need be used on our batteries, they are always ready for use. Our own special belt batteries—no inconvenience, and most perfect, long lived cells ever made. Why use old style belts with cheap chains of junk? Call and let us show you the difference—we have anything you may want and at the bottom price—no pretended reductions, but the BOTTOM PRICE to you first. Call and see our appliances. Consultation absolutely free. F. BRANTVERNE, 1102 Maple avenue, corner East Eleventh street, Los Angeles, Cal.

WE ARE MANUFACTURERS and undersell all—giving you the GENUINE and charging you less than you would have to pay for inferior kinds from dealers, etc. We also have all kinds made at cut rates, but manufacture the best, most powerful and perfect working appliance which GIVES A CONTINUOUS STREAM OF HIGH-GRADE POWER DIRECT TO THE BODY. Our electrical suspensory, which is included with ALL our belts, restores lost strength and makes happy, healthy men of those who feel like wrecks.

A GOOD, STRONG VITALIZ belt $5 complete, with electric suspensory for men—THE RIGHT KIND, TOO—not a cheap wire one, like sold by others, but the BEST.

GET—VITALIZ, THE MOST POWERFUL ELECTRIC BODY BATTERY MADE—made and sold in Los Angeles. Call or write. FREE BOOK in PLAIN SEALED PACKAGE.

WHY DO WE DO THIS?

THE REASON—If we have one hundred walking, talking advertisements of people we have cured, it will do us more good than $10,000 worth of newspaper advertising.

WE HAVE THREE DISTINCT DEPARTMENTS IN THE MODERN MEDICAL INSTITUTE.

I. DEPARTMENT OF ELECTRIC THERAPEUTICS.

Electricity and magnetism take the place of drugs and medicines. We can control any organ in the human body with these two vehicles without injury or shock and always get our patients well.

II. DEPARTMENT OF BLOODLESS SURGERY.

Bloodless surgery is a system peculiarly our own. Without the use of the KNIFE or SHEDDING OF BLOOD we treat and cure CANCER, TUMORS and PILES.

III. DEPARTMENT OF SUGGESTIVE THERAPEUTICS.

This department is conducted by one of the most wonderfully successful practitioners in this mysterious and remarkable domain of HEALING. Some of the cures are MIRACULOUS. We have Orange Groves which net 10, 15 or 20 per cent. on the price asked.

Best and cheapest water system in the state. Prosperity without saloons.

There are six churches: Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Christian, Episcopal and German Lutheran. Seventeen secret societies, among which are Masons, Odd Fellows, Foresters, Fraternal Aid, Woodmen, G. A. R., etc. A fine Public Carnegie Library, $35,000 High School, Banks, Graded Schools, Hotel Palmyra and Hotel Haynes, Building and Loan Association, Postoffice, Telegraph and Telephone, Newspapers and numerous stores, Edison Electric Light System, Gas Plant, Public Plaza, City Water Works, Steam Laundry, two Planing Mills, two Livery Stables, good Fire protection, miles of Cement Walks, best Climate and Soil, four Fruit Packing Houses, no Saloons, 150 houses built during the past year, while buildings valued at several thousand dollars are in course of construction in Orange today. An Electric Road to Los Angeles will be built the coming season.

About six miles northwest from Orange are numerous oil wells; and eight miles southwest are the peat lands, celery fields and artesian wells. Orange is thus surrounded by grand and beautiful scenery, by rich land, and enterprises which are yielding wealth to those who are industrious and progressive in their efforts. Orange is the Gem of the Valley, nestled in the center of the fruit belt, among fragrant blossoms and golden fruits.

Water is King in California. The Santa Ana Valley Water System at Orange is acknowledged to be one of the best, if not the best, and cheapest in the State. Our system furnishes us with an abundance of water for irrigating, while in many sections the fruit has been ruined for the want of water. The total average cost of water per acre in Orange is $1.70 for the best orchards; walnuts, apricots, olives, etc., require much less while in other sections the cost reaches $5.00, $10.00, and even $20.00 per acre.

Orange is twelve miles from the ocean; bathing, fishing and hunting the year round. In the opposite direction, five miles, are the foothills and oil wells, and a little further, the mountains. Here quail are plentiful, and occasionally a deer, bear, coyote or mountain lion is found. In the mountains east of Orange are several coal mines, and numerous gold and silver mines.

Oranges, lemons, walnuts, apricots, olives, barley, alfalfa and berries are the principal products raised. Apples, pears, peaches, guavas, loquats, plums, grapes, figs, peanuts, corn, pumpkins, potatoes, etc., are also grown quite liberally. Chicken raising is also a profitable industry.

You can reach Orange from Los Angeles by Pacific Electric Road via Santa Ana, but the most direct way is to take the Santa Fe R. R.

Orange has electricity, gas, and a fine water supply, and will soon have city sewers.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC BUILDING AERIAL SWITCH YARD.

Within a comparatively short time Angelenos will be treated to the strange sight of two and three-coach trains being switched on tracks high above the ground. The innovation is that of the Pacific Electric Railway, which, finding it impossible to handle the Long Beach trains in the present great depot at Sixth and Main streets without adding to the congestion on Main street by halting in front of the station, is constructing an elevated switching yard on its lots across Los Angeles street.

This elevated will extend practically to the alley in the middle of the block and will be many feet above the ground. The elevated structure will be of the heaviest class of steel. The picture shows the nature of the work and massive girders that are going into it. To accommodate the heavy traffic the depot rails have been released from the Pacific Electric building supports and fastened to huge pillars constructed especially for that purpose. The construction of the aërial yard will be vigorously pushed to conclusion; trains will operate on it within sixty days.

Just what the change in handling the two-coach trains is the forerunner of is hard to say. It has been asserted many times that the Huntington interests plan a great yard extending from the lots mentioned to Ninth street, and an entirely new method of handling cars, particularly those of the southern division, with the object of ridding Main of the enormous traffic that now effectually blocks that thoroughfare. Mr. Huntington has long desired to get as many cars off Main street as is possible, and the elevated is the first step to this end.

SAN FRANCISCO RESULT.

Victory of McCarthy.

The good citizen seems to have had a previous engagement to hibernate on election day in San Francisco.—[Pasadena Star.

There is no use crying over spilled milk. McCarthy is not a credit to San Francisco, though he might possibly surprise the world by giving the city an administration of which it can be proud. The only thing left to do is to support him in his honest endeavors and give him a chance to make good.—[Alameda Times-Star.

With labor unionism again on top it does not look very bright for civic decency in that big city by the bay. At any rate it is not worth while to take a gloomy view of the matter. Other elections will come around in the Lord's good time and it may be that the people of San Francisco, in their good-natured way, have concluded to give the other side an opportunity for a time to see what they will do.—[Ventura Free Press.

"As a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool returneth to his folly."

San Francisco needed to do only one thing more to make its shame complete; it should have elected Abe Ruef District Attorney. It is true that he is in jail at present and that fact would prevent his giving active attention to the duties of the office; but under the McCarthy administration, it is quite likely some means might be found to overcome this handicap.—[Riverside Press.

The result of the election in San Francisco is a severe setback for the friends of honest government. It is possible that P. H. McCarthy, who has been chosen Mayor, will enter upon his office with a firm determination to give the city a clean and efficient administration. It is none the less a fact, however, that his success is hailed with delight by every grafter and crook.—[San Diego Union.

If the hinges don't melt in San Francisco, the wide open policy will make it an ideal incubator for "organization" programme to test the "party loyalty" of even the kind of voters who wear rings in their noses. —[Pasadena News.

The people of San Francisco have rendered their verdict, and the world now knows the value they place upon civic honor. They have elected McCarthy, around whom the Tenderloin and dive elements rallied, and who promised them a Paris.—[Tulare Register.

Heney's Defeat.

As regards the Heney-Fickert fight, the outcome of that was not unexpected, though few thought that Fickert would roll up the majority which he did. The vote shows most conclusively that the people of San Francisco do not approve of the graft prosecutions as they have been conducted by Heney. It is absurd to think that a great majority of the people of San Francisco are opposed to the prosecution of all violators of the law, be they rich or poor. They simply do not think that Heney is the right man for the place, judging by his past record.—[Visalia Times.

The defeat of Heney was a foregone conclusion. The people of the city were tired to death of the apparently endless struggle, accomplishing nothing, and seemingly hopeless. The prosecution under the leadership of Heney had made a mess of things, and a majority of the people were convinced that a continuation of the fight along past lines was not only useless but a positive detriment to the city.—[Visalia Delta.

Mr. Heney decided to submit himself to the voters of San Francisco as a candidate for District Attorney, confident that the money and spite of his backers would pull him through.

Then ensued a campaign by him, the most remarkable and abhorrent that men have seen since the "bloody assize" of Judge Jeffreys. He and his principal, Langdon, and the deputies in the office of the District Attorney, proceeded on the stump to seek his election by the most appalling abuse of citizens under indictment and waiting to be tried by him. Every extreme of boasting and brag, every form of abuse that is possible to the feculence of the English language oozed like fluid garbage from Heney's mouth. He deliberately turned the election into a plebiscite to decide the case between Patrick Calhoun and himself. In this extremity Mr. Calhoun had no resort but silence. He had no agency of publicity, through which to defend himself, and went his way as a gentleman and good citizen, in peril from the hatred of business rivals, the victim of pulpit and press, trusting only in the American spirit of fair play for a final vindication.

That vindication has come. It has come in the form of roaring thousands of votes, that have overwhelmed Mr. Heney as completely as the surf overwhelms a dead and rotten fish on the beach.—[Oakland Tribune.

The election of Fickert is a return to respect for the law and for the dignity of the courts, and an abandonment of the practice of putting spies at the heels of all the decent men in the community as one after another they are summoned for jury duty. The defeat of Heney is not an approval of graft or an expression of willingness to condone graft. It is simply condemnation of the practice of carrying on prosecutions, not for the purpose of convicting the accused, but for the exploitation of the vanity of the prosecutor and gratifying the personal hatred of his Rense backers. —[San Francisco Chronicle.

in commenting on River junket of all of the co-ordinate branches of our Government and most of the States except the courts, gravely informs us that the business interests of the country are all through with Uncle Joe, the Speaker, and that the first thing we know he will announce his retirement on account of this. The joke, on the contrary, is on the business interests, the bankers, the manufacturers and others, rather than on the Speaker or Senator Aldrich, or any other responsible (and therefore very much exposed,) if not peerless leader.

Take one of these interests, a well-known one, the manufacturers who liked the Dingley law well enough, and now feel satisfied with the Payne-Aldrich law. They are depending solely on the benficial business results expect to develop with the tariff out of the way, booming business and causing nearly everybody to forget that there has been a tariff discussion in recent years. These people believe in protection, and in the kind that they now have. But they take pains to explain—as they can well do, with the brains and the money that they have—why they are protectionists and why they like the kind of protection they have.

Mr. Aldrich believes in a central bank, and presumably he has reason to suppose that such a project appeals to the banking interests; but it is not of record that those interests, with all their brains and all their money, are even thinking of a propaganda to explain just what they are after, and why they like it so much—and, presumably, why the public might well afford to like it. There is another case in point. There is no doubt that a serious effort will be made at the approaching session of Congress to pass a bill. The bankers of the country don't want this. They have passed a resolution to that effect in their convention, and there is to be a meeting of leading bankers here within a few days to devise ways and means by which the postal savings proposition may be knocked out—by themselves alone, probably, and by main strength, not by means of any systematic propagation of what they would call the right ideas on the subject.

All this appears rather strange, when you consider that various private interests, all the way from benzoate of soda down—or up—make their so-called publicity campaigns, because they are able, and also make no bones about it. These other interests, ever so much larger and richer, have at least the semblance of public causes, but they are not up-to-date in their advertising methods.

One of the churches is beating them—or one of the sections of the work of one. For several years a former union machinist, who now is a Presbyterian misister, Rev. Charles Stelzle, has been in charge of a movement which he describes as intending to cause the churches to understand "labor" better and "labor" to understand the churches better; and two or three years ago he had developed his organization to such a point that at least 12,000 clergymen were going to preach "labor" sermons on the Sunday before Labor Day. Naturally, that work spread a good deal, and now Mr. Stelzle, operating from his desk in the Presbyterian building, is going to apply still other modern methods of organisiation and agitation, using not only the customary methods of organization and agitation, licity experts and some editors, but probably the advertising columns as well.

And this suggests that another large interest, whom very many would also call legitimate, an interest which is not necessarily to be condemned because it is rich and brainy, the employers of the country, has failed to establish its position as much as it might have done if it had propagated its ideas, not with aid of the publicity expert, who gets paid for working the newspapers a hundred or a thousand times as much as he really works them; but by a campaign of speaking and writing such as they might easily devise. There are some 300 organizations of employers and manufacturers in the country, which first sprang into existence in order to defend their industrial establishments, which they desired to keep going against the attacks or strikers or the wiles of industrial arbitrators; and they were pretty successful in this. Many of this class also doubtless believe in the aconomic or political correctness of what they are doing, but they have their work, especially as it relates to the politics of such a controversy, to do all over again, because they, too, have failed to propagate their ideas widely enough; a fact attested by the circumstance that nearly every public man, and certainly nearly every candidate for office, believes that there is a labor vote; that is, that the community, wherever you find it—take almost any community—does not, or may not, sympathize with what is commonly called the open-shop movement.

The tasks which confront these different interests, which are usually so much despised because they are rich—the manufacturers, the bankers, the employers—are rendered doubly difficult because of their unpopularity with many. When it was said that the trusts and the big corporations and the other so-called rich malefactors had a baleful political influence, George Gunton used to reply that exactly the opposite was true; that a rich corporation, and especially a big monopoly or a big public service corporation, hadn't the ghost of a show to secure anything that it wanted, because when the public knew what that was, it wanted and proposed to have exactly the opposite; so that an interview with Mr. Rockefeller, for instance, indicating what he would like, would simply teach us (the public) just what we wouldn't like at all.

Reading of Mr. Rockefeller's attack on the hook worm, I am thinking only of Walter Page, my friend and yours, who edits The World's Work, and who is one of the small committee of trusties whom Mr. Rockefeller deputizes to spend the million. He was a Raleigh, N. C., boy, and had a tough time of it working his way through college and trying to be a successful reporter in the South and in St. Joe, out in Missouri, and elsewhere. Finally working East, he and Frank Presbrey were editor and publisher of the Forum at one time, and tried to buy it. Presbrey went into the advertising business, and before long was making the income of a millionaire, which is neither here nor there. Walter Page edited the Atlantic Monthly, but Boston was a little off the reservation for magazines, at least for Page, and he and Frank Doubleday started The World's Work and The Country Life, and added several thousand tons to the daily output of books, besides. John D. Rockefeller has written his reminiscences for Mr. Page, and now "Yim" Hill is writing a few "pieces" to please the same man, being also on the staff. Page is on the General Education Board, spending more of the Rockefeller money that way; and now, having a chance to go after the "lazy bug," his fame ought to increase in Raleigh and throughout the South; and who would care if it did?

The Gun Shoe Era.

An epoch-making device borrowed by Los Angeles imitators from San Fran cisco.

ALTHOUGH he sat alone in his secret office, Monsieur Churl, the great editor-detective, glowed with the burning abandon of a zealot in some strange faith.

Everything in the office was made of padded rubber. It was almost bare of furniture. In one corner stood a chair, roped off from the room as though it were some sacred thing. Fastened to it with gold nails was a placard reading: "The master once hid behind this chair."

Near the chair lay a pair of shoes with gum soles and a placard said: "The master once gummed in these shoes."

Churl was muttering rapidly to himself.

"The beautiful art shall not die," he hissed. "The art of the gum-shoe sneak shall not perish, even if Burns, the master, has been kicked out of San Francisco. Poor San Francisco! Never mind! I—I, Tobias, will keep alive the traditions of the spotter and the sneak-detective."

While he mumbled thus to himself, the door of the office softly opened, and a small, blond rebate stole in and stood beside Toby.

Churl looked up with a tremulous smile and held out his arms.

But the rebate slipped swiftly to one side, and Tobias heard a voice saying: "Hist! I'm disguised."

With that, the little blond rebate, as it had appeared to be, stood forth as a detective.

WHO WAS WHO?

"Who are you?" asked Tobe, wonderingly. "If you have come to sell a confession, I don't want it. We are overstocked."

"I'm a Burns gum-shoe man," whispered the detective. "We have all had to beat it out of San Francisco. The people got onto us. But I am told you are going to work the game down here."

Toby looked him over with a critical eye. "Very good," he said, admiringly. "You look like a sneak and a liar. You shall have a prominent place in my detective service."

The man blushed with pleasure at the compliment and bowed.

Churl rapidly scribbled something on a card, and handed it to the detective. "Follow that man," he said.

"Who is he?" asked the detective.

Tobe smiled a dark and mysterious smile. "That," he whispered, "is the detective who spies on the detective who spies on the sneak who spies on Uncle Aleck."

"Oh, I see, you have a regular metropolitan system," said the detective, enthusiastically. "Everybody gives everybody else the double-cross. Splendid! Splendid! It is worthy of the master himself."

It was now Tobe's turn to blush at the compliment. But he wondered if the praise was sincere. "I must have him shadowed to find out," he thought.

ANOTHER SLIP.

With that the Burns detective again slipped on a disguise, and those who passed to and fro in the big office building little suspected the truth when they saw a pale, little rebate skulking out. Only there were those who were amazed that a rebate, once in Toby's office, ever managed to get out again.

Hardly had the detective gone when a messenger boy rapped at the door of Mr. Churl's office. When the editor-detective opened the door, the boy silently handed him a tamale and went away.

Tobe has schooled himself, since becoming a detective, never to show the slightest outward signs of surprise. But as he placed the tamale on the table, his emotions were those of bewilderment.

But presently he heard a whisper of warning: "Hist; I'm disguised." And what had at first seemed to be a tamale stood forth as a detective.

"Ah; you're the one that follows Uncle Aleck," cried Toby, instantly recognizing him.

The detective bowed.

"Tell me the worst, first," said Mr. Churl, licking his lips with glee.

With much mystery, the detective then related a very strange circumstance.

Uncle Aleck, he said, had been observed, many times a day, to leave his office and go down into the safety vaults. By disguising himself as a moth-ball, the detective had several times managed to enter the vaults with him.

He confessed that he was completely bewildered at Uncle Aleck's performances in the safety vault. Each time he visited the place, the Mayor took down a mysterious object, something like a short stove-pipe plugged up at one end. Wasn't made of iron, but was soft to the touch, and very shiny and fuzzy.

"What did he do with it?" asked Churl.

"Tried it on his head and stood before a looking-glass," said the detective.

A REBUKE.

The detective said that, whatever the thing was, Uncle Aleck seemed to cherish it highly. Fingered it; caressed it; turned it to the light.

"Well, why didn't you find out what the thing was?" complained Churl, bitterly.

The detective hung his head, but pleaded for another chance.

Churl finally dismissed him with the understanding that he should make one more attempt to penetrate the mystery. He was ordered to report later.

Churl had little time to debate the mystery himself, however. His other detectives began arriving with their reports.

The first one had been following Mr. Ledgerton, the messenger of the Municipal League. He reported that Mr. L. had stopped by the way to play marbles.

"Did you follow his wife?" asked Mr. Churl, suggestively.

"He hasn't any wife," said the detective.

Churl considered the matter carefully. "Well," he said, at length, "you must send out one of our very worst—that is to say, our best—men and have him find out what she would do if he had a wife. Have him catch her in something bad—very bad."

"Who?" said the detective.

Churl frowned. "How dull," he groaned.

TRAIL THE WOMAN.

"Suppose," he said, "that there had been a woman and Ledgerton had married her. I want you to find out what she would have done; and I want it to be something fierce."

Enter the detective detailed to follow Editor Gammon of the Hurl. "I ketched him thinking in the editorial rooms without your orders," reported the detective gleefully.

Mr. Churl turned black-red, and let out a yell of rage, "Oh, the villain," he screamed; "Oh, the black traitor."

The detective also reported that the editor, Mr. Gammon, was engaged in giving a series of elaborate dinners to some one; also theater parties and teas.

"To a woman?" whispered Churl eagerly.

"No; a man with long hair."

"Anarchist; a plot," muttered Churl. "He's going to assassinate me."

"No," said the detective. "It's the Hurl subscriber. He has been feeling kind of grouchy lately, and threatened to quit the paper. They are giving him a series of dinners to make him feel good.

The spy who had been following Listener, the boss, hesitated and blushed.

"Sure you won't get sore at me when I tell you?" he said

TOBE'S SMILE.

"You can trust me," said Tobe, with an icy smile.

"Well," said the detective, uneasily, "the boss says that your fool editorials gushing over Heney, have queered the whole reform game down here."

Mr. Churl growled down in his throat, like an angry kitty.

"He says you painted up Heney as the idol of a grateful city. He said that you told the people that everybody loved him in San Francisco except Pat Calhoun, and that down here we intended to conquer under the sign of his triumphal banner."

Churl shuddered.

"And now," said the detective, "Heney didn't carry a single precinct in San Francisco, and we are all in bad. They're onto us reformers."

Churl gnashed his teeth. "You go back there," he said, "and you find out something bad about Listener before tomorrow, or you get fired."

EVEN MUSH.

After a number of other detectives had reported on the conduct of such prominent citizens as Slimson, who was shadowed as he went from place to place buying hair brushes, a great conference of the leading gum-shoe men took place.

The council of war was held for the purpose of deciding if possible what could be the stove-pipe, tile-like black object that Uncle Aleck so frequently visited in the safety vaults.

The gum-shoe man who had been following Uncle Aleck made a second report. He was quite discouraged. He had again followed the Mayor into the vaults, this time disguised as a veto.

He had seen Uncle Aleck repeatedly take down the cherished object. He had himself felt of it.

He had seen Uncle Aleck put it on his head. This time, as he placed the mysterious object on his head, Uncle Aleck made a deep bow and said, "Welcome to our fair city, Mister President."

The council of sleuths debated the matter for a long time, but finally gave it up in despair. Nobody could imagine what it was.

HIS FRIEND IN NEED.

Finally, Mr. Churl said, with an air of sudden determination: "Gentlemen, only one man in the world I can really trust. All the others of our set I spy upon. I shall call upon my Fidus Achates."

Presently the door opened and in walked a tall man upon whom Mr. Churl cast a look of perfect trust and affection.

"Gentlemen," he said, "my friend, my true friend, Mr. Nick Boswald."

Nick looked around the circle. "I know most of youse fellers," he said, in gracious recognition. "Some of youse paid me rent down in the Red Light district and some of youse was me scouts when Toby was hiding me out from the law officers.

"Tobe," he said, with a kindly look at Mr. Churl, "is the best hand I ever seen in my life at hiding a man away from the police."

The conference then got down to business. They told Nick about the mysterious object in the safety vaults. He asked a few swift questions—then smiled with easy superiority.

"Sure; I know the answer," he said.

"What is it?" asked Mr. Churl eagerly.

Nick looked at the editor-detective shrewdly.

"Tobe," he said, "I will tell you for $500."

Churl sputtered and choked. At last he pulled out a two-dollar bill.

"Take that on account," he said, "and tell me. I'll pay you the rest afterward.

Nick laughed and shook his head. "Nix," he said; "not on your life. You trimmed me that way once."

With a heavy sigh Tobias dug the other $498.

"Now tell us," he said, "what is this strange object that Uncle goes to see in the safety vaults."

"It's nothing but his lid, you rummies," said Nick, coolly pocketing the money.

Tobias looked after him as he walked out of the office.

"Wonderful man," he muttered, "wonderful reformer. He's the only man I ever trusted."

Better Then Trench Digging.

By the means of a new apparatus designed principally for the plumber's use a great deal of trench digging may be avoided. It is called a pipe-forcing jack, and by digging a ditch long enough to take the jack and start the first length of pipe it is possible to lay almost any length of service pipe. This means that the jack will save the user the expense incurred in digging the trench and refilling it when laying service or pipe lines. The jack is capable of driving pipe up to four-inch diameter, and as great a length as 280 feet of 2½ inch pipe has been forced through the ground by it.—[Baltimore American.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—It was a great victory, no little credit being due Mayor-elect McCarthy for his promises of a millennium to ensue on his taking office next January. In fact so many promises were made that the successful candidate for the Mayoralty will be busy for months keeping up with them. Already the clans are gathering and the quondam favorites of the Ruef régime are emerging from the obscurity of private life to bask in the sunshine of the public treasury.

It is not only the former office-holders who shine in the new political illumination but many of the beneficiaries of a wide open régime are once more in the role of prominent citizens. At midnight on Tuesday, Harry Flannery, in whose saloon the Mayor-elect found many an appetizing enchilada, led the grand march up Market street while the band played Chopin's funeral march, the same tune it played four years ago when Eugene Schmitz buried John S. Partridge.

No city in the world can surpass San Francisco in its love for the sensational and its craving for variety. Nearly thirty thousand voters tired of the humdrum governmental details of good streets, sewers, etc., cheerfully voted to change the government and take a chance on a new crowd. The political seed was sown Tuesday and the harvest will be garnered in two years.

By a majority vote of 10,000 it has been decided that the graft prosecution is to die from inanition. The calendars of the criminal courts are to be cleared promptly and the new District Attorney will have leisure to prosecute vigorously whatever law-breakers present themselves in the year of 1910.

In the hurly burly of nearly 200 candidates scrambling for office distracted voters showed some wise discrimination. Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, who was a sure thing for Coroner before election, turned out to be a dead one after Tuesday and there is no fear of his ever being resurrected.

Author Burgess, known to his friends as Gelett, once lived here and so thinks he has the right to poke fun at us in his latest book. His heroine is a Lady Mechante, who is eccentric to say the least. She forms a league of dreams and persuades a thousand men to march down Montgomery street in their nightskirts. As there is nobody on Montgomery street at the hour when robes de nuit are worn no harm is done, but if the men had marched down Market street it would have been naughty.

That our atmosphere develops eccentricity is the belief of Walter Pulitzer, who is here to gather evidence that his father, Albert Pulitzer, was abnormal because of it. The son hopes to break the will of his father because the old man cabled from the St. Francis Hotel at an expense of $40 asking his doctor as to the digestibility of horseradish and the next day forced his way into the home of Gertrude Atherton on Mt. Tamalpais in order to instruct her in the noble art of novel writing. In an estate worth several million dollars Walter was left a paltry $40,000.

It has grieved us considerably to learn that Queen Vergilia Bogue, who ruled so majestically over the Portola Festival, is going to leave us permanently. We never did anything to Vergilia, except to glorify her and we cannot understand why she has the doubtful taste to reside in New York when she might live here, and queen it over us always.

Not very many years ago a railroad conductor employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad secured an interest in some oil lands for a little less than $200. Shortly after making this investment he left the railroad with the idea of devoting his time to this oil investment. It was an exceedingly small start, but this man was smart enough to see the possibilities in California oil. A few years later this ex-conductor called at the general passenger agent department of the Southern Pacific Railroad and sent in his card to the General Passenger Agent with a request for an interview. His card was brought back with the information that they needed no conductors at that time. The boy was sent back to the Passenger Agent with the information that a position was not looked for, but the party desired to purchase a private car. The Passenger Agent was rather skeptical, but consented to the interview with the result that the man who had invested his $200 a few years before purchased one of the finest private cars now operated in California.

Another story is told of a San Francisco woman of very moderate means who was called upon by a solicitor for a brokerage house who did his utmost to persuade her to purchase some oil stocks. This woman had, during fifteen years of hard work and no vacation or recreation, accumulated a few hundred dollars and had decided to withdraw a small portion of this to take her first health and pleasure trip to Yosemite Valley. When the agent called upon her it happened that she had $200 of this money in the house. She was finally persuaded to curtail her vacation and invest half of this money in the oil stock. Now, while it is seemingly impossible, it is told as a fact that this $100 investment netted th income of $200 pensate her for vacation at th now taking a trip around the

Such interesting cases as those given above, and many others, will be published in the next six special oil editions of "SECURITIES." This publication will devote its next six issues very largely to the study of California oil. It will tell all about the California oil industry, of the scores of successful oil concerns. It will tell what dividends are received by the stockholders in these various companies each month, what the stocks can be bought for, and will also point out select opportunities for securing California oil stocks at low prices. All this information is being put before you for a purpose—the purpose of getting you interested in California oil, for we are among the leaders in the development of this money-making industry in California. We are heavily interested in one of the best properties in this district, and it requires money—and lots of money—to develop such properties. But, understand that we don't ask you to invest a single cent in our enterprise unless you desire to do so after careful investigation. The development of the California oil industry has been so rapid that even Californians are not fully acquainted with the opportunities presented. Many Californians have become millionaires. Working men have, with their small investments, made themselves independent. The development work has only just begun. The surface of the possibilities has only been scratched, and we want to point out to you some of the present day opportunities. Remember the case of the railroad employee given above; remember the case of the poor woman, and then understand that you at least owe it to yourself to become fully acquainted with all of the possibilities, whether you invest or not. You may have all of this information in readable form simply for the asking. Send us the coupon at the right of the column, and the six special oil issues of "SECURITIES," which are to be published for the next six months, will be mailed to you absolutely free of charge. Also our handsomely illustrated booklet giving all particulars of our company and its wonderful property.

"Can't possibly make any other arrangements. It's business, you know. Good-by.'

"Good-by, George. Get home as soon as you can; won't you? Good-by."

The woman's pretty eyes sparkled as she returned to the settee and the arms of the visitor.

"Who telephoned?" he asked.

"It was George," was the answer, "and he's got a date with some of his women friends and won't be home until midnight. He just handed me one of his usual jollies about a business engagement. Isn't that fine? Now you can stay just as long as you want to and we'll have a nice, long evening all to ourselves."

The woman's youthful beauty and fine figure, which had been noted by many young men, had attracted the too-old business man who married her. His money, in her youthful experience, had outweighed his disadvantages, and she consented to wed him. Now the novelty is gone in both cases. He longs to be free; she wants what he cannot give her.

Who is the more to blame?

Late one night last week the Glimpser was watching a well dressed young woman take a cab on the street. The cars were still running and she was alone. Besides the artificial make-up on her face, which was noticeable, there were other marks—marks made by late hours, a fast life, debauchery. She gave the driver an address that could easily have been reached on a street car.

A night prowler standing near was also attracted. He shuffled up by the side of the Glimpser and remarked, between the puffs of a cigarette:

"See that girl? Ain't it a shame? Her dad is a drunkard; her mother is an invalid most of the time; a brother sells papers anr her little sister is out of school for the want of shoes."

Well, now isn't it a shame?

"There's all the difference in the world between being economical and being penurious," remarked the Economical Citizen. "I'm economical but I'm not stingy. I've managed to save a good deal of filthy lucre by keeping tab on my expenses and shaving off an item here and there that was unnecessary. Now I—— Look at that?"

His attention was attracted to an elderly, richly-dressed woman who was trying to pick up a pin. The pin had lodged among a pile of bricks. The woman was decrepit—probably rheumatic. It was with much difficulty that she stooped. She wore expensive merino gloves and she was having great trouble in picking up the pin.

But she seemed determined to get it. She poked about in the brick dust for several minutes, much to the ruination of her gloves. Merino gloves cost money.

"There's a glimmer of the old superstition that it's unlucky not to pick up a pin," said the Economical Citizen. "She'll get that pin if she has to spoil her gloves in the act. I have a notion——"

Just then a newsboy came along. He was attracted by the old woman's groveling in the dust, and, seeing what she was after, he stooped and picked up for her the little piece of cheap, bent, rusted wire. The woman thanked him and stuck the pin in her waist.

"I always pick up pins," she said. "Seems wasteful to pass them by. I have always been economical," and she passed on seemingly much elated.

"As I was saying," resumed the Economical Citizen, "or, as I was about to say, there is such a thing as carrying the idea of economy too far." And I silently agreed with him.

FRANK MOLNAR RECOMMENDS DRS. SHORES & SHORES' CATARRH TREATMENT.

MR. FRANK MOLNAR, WHO LIVES AT 640 SAN JULIAN ST., SAYS: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for the past two (2) years. My nose would stop up first one side and then the other and phlegm would gather in my throat, causing irritation and coughing. My nose stopping up night caused me to sleep with my mouth open, which distressed me greatly. I lost in weight and flesh until I was greatly run down. There was a continual noise and buzzing sound in the ears, and my hearing was very dull. At the end of two (2) months' treatment I can truthfully say that I am greatly improved in every way, and I gladly recommend Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment to any one in need of the same.

Egyptian Cotton on Springer Farm

The growing of cotton along the Colorado River has proven wonderfully successful. The soil and climate of the Colorado desert, which includes BLYTHE RANCHO, are ideal for the cotton plant—in fact, better suited for cotton than are the conditions in any other region except Nile Valley. Egyptian cotton grows here better than in its home.

More than a bale to the acre of Georgia cotton is the proven product, with two more pickings to come. A bale and a half an acre means an average net return to the grower of not less than $50 per acre, which is a most conservative estimate, and that fixes the value of Blythe irrigated lands at a figure considerably above the present market price. Unquestionably there is nothing in all the vast Colorado River territory for cotton raising superior to the locality known as the along the bank of the Colorado River for 17 miles, in Riverside county, comprises 40,000 acres of rich alluvial land. 9000 acres sold. Over forty miles of canals and laterals constructed and supplying water to farmers. Unlimited supply of irrigation water. Abundance of good drinking water. Your choice at and upward, including perpetual water right that cannot be separated from the land. 20 acres or more. Easy terms.

If cotton raising is not attractive to you, the land will grow alfalfa, sugar beets, melons, cereals, deciduous fruits, besides a wide range of ordinary farm crops.

The main thing is to secure the land at the present low price. For full information with illustrated folder call or write

CATHOLIC SCHOOL.

BUILDING SOON TO BE STARTED

CHURCH AUTHORITIES INDORSE FATHER'S PLANS.

Institution to Accommodate Two Hundred Pupils to Be Constructed at Monrovia—Tract of Five Acres Donated as Memorial Gift—Census of City to Be Taken.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MONROVIA, Nov. 6.—The construction of a Catholic school to accommodate 200 pupils will be commenced early in the new year. Its establishment here is due to the initiative of Rev. J. J. Sheehy, who has received official notification that his plans are heartily indorsed by church authorities. "The only question now before us," says Father Sheehy, "is whether to make it a parochial school or an academy. Until a decision is reached completion of building plans will be held in abeyance. This much is certain, the structure will be substantial, in artistic harmony with the environment, and a credit to the community. We shall begin with accommodations for 200 pupils, and the plans will provide for enlargement as necessity requires.

The tract of five acres at Shamrock and Walnut avenues, on which the school will be built, the church of the Immaculate Conception, a handsome Gothic structure of granite, the rectory and adjuncts, are memorial gifts from the children of the late L. and Simona Bradbury. The site is ideal for school purposes, and through the generosity of Lewis Bradbury, its scenic advantages of wide vistas, oaks and sycamores will be accentuated by skilled landscape gardeners. The Pacific Electric Railway traverses the northern boundary of the tract, affording cheap and convenient transportation for pupils from neighboring cities.

Tradition has it that, under the oaks which will cast their shade over the modern school, the brown-robed Franciscans, in days long gone, held services, and a rude school for the Indian neophytes who guarded the San Gabriel Mission flocks among the foothills.

CENSUS TO BE TAKEN.

Before the city can obtain a fifth-class charter, a census must be taken. C. F. Sargent has been appointed for the work, and will complete the enumeration before the charter election is held.

Business men will meet at La Vista Grande Hotel Tuesday evening to organize a protective association. Presidents of similar organizations in Pasadena, Pomona, Riverside and Redlands are expected to atend and give local merchants the benefit of their experience.

HOUSEBREAKERS' PREY.

Local Railroad Men, Special Deputy Sheriffs, Lose to Burglars, Who Enter Their Homes.

Housebreakers have an idea that "special deputy sheriffs" are easy prey. Friday night they entered the residence of Frank C. Lathrop, the recently-appointed traveling passenger agent of the Southern Pacific at Pasadena, and made away with a number of valuables, including, it appears, Mr. Lathrop's badge and revolver. Mr. Lathrop is rather reticent about his losses.

Lathrop is the second local railroad man to be so honored. Tom Fitzgerald, the district passenger agent of the Gould lines, was the first victim a few years ago. Fitzgerald was shortly thereafter made a deputy, and the thieves, presumably the same, immediately made him a second call.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The arguments in the tide-lands suits were concluded yesterday and submitted.

AT THE CITY HALL.

BOOMING FOR NEW TUNNEL.

FIRST-STREET BORE PETITION FILED WITH COUNCIL.

Hundreds of Signers Present Reasons Why Passage Through Hills on Broadway Level Should Be Made at Once—Unification of All Interested in Improvement.

To start the project for a tunnel through the First-street hill, on the Broadway level, the Tunnel Improvement Association presented its petition, signed by several hundred owners of real estate in the district affected, with the Board of Public Works and the Council yesterday. This action was authorized at a meeting of the association at No. 108 South Beaudry street Friday night, and means that an active effort will be made to bring the scheme to tangible end.

Accompanying the petition is an explanatory letter signed by M. J. Wheeler, president of the Tunnel Improvement Association, which presents the whole project for the big bore in its multiform phases. The letter is as follows:

"In presenting a petition for a tunnel under First street from Broadway to Fremont avenue, it seems fitting that we should also state the grounds of our request.

"We call your attention to the fact that appended to our petition are the names of many active business men, the representatives of large estates, heads of large corporations and citizens of divers avocations and stations.

"It is sometimes said that it is easy enough to get signatures to a petition. That depends. If the petition carries with it the expenditure of a large sum of money which the petitioner must himself, in one form or another, pay, he is not so free with his signature. Such is the case with the signers of this petition, who did it in full view of its importance to themselves and their fellow-citizens.

"A glance at the names appended to the petition should also put to rest the suggestion that this is a real-estate move in the interest of property of the northwestern section of the city. On the contrary, a large number of the petitioners have business interests only east of the hills. The president of the tunnel association which began the recent agitation is himself interested in the business section east of the hills. The members of the North, Northeast and Northwest Improvement Association, which indorsed the movement, are mainly interested in the section of the city east of the hills. The fact is the growth of the southwest has drawn upon the older business section till empty store and offices warn property owners that they must bestir themselves. To the east or south it would be vain at present for them to look. Then turn therefore to the northwest and seek the advantage of a closer connection with that growing district. The soul of the tunnel movement is the original pueblo, Los Angeles, seeking to save herself in a business way from threatened neglect and decay. The section west of the hills is one of residences, and it should have good transportation and quick access to the business section.

"The necessity for a tunnel conceded, the reasons for locating it at First street are many.

"(1.) Of the western barrier of hills, stretching from Third street to Temple, First street is the center, being 800 feet north of Third and the same distance south of Temple. The First-street tunnel would connect the east and west on a level grade and in quick time.

"(2.) First street alone permits of a tunnel from Broadway to Fremont on a business grade, without troublesome ascent or descent at either end. The difference in grade between Broadway and Fremont is just sufficient for excellent drainage.

"(3.) A tunnel under First street avoids the danger of crossing the tracks of the Hollywood line just where the swiftly-moving cars emerge from the Hill-street tunnel, and passes under the same tracks at a sufficient depth to raise no expensive engineering problems.

"(4.) First street offers the only chance for an unbroken thoroughfare from the eastern to the western limits of the city. A glance at a map shows the importance of First street, but fails to show that in the midst is a commercially impossible barrier of hills cutting the street into two sections. A tunnel makes it one street from Boyle Heights to Western avenue and beyond.

"(5.) Practical argument as to the superior advantages of First street is indicated by the indorsement of numerous public bodies, the favorable comment of the press, and the confessed change in view of many who formerly advocated another site.

"In adopting a policy to finance the enterprise, in case of its adoption, we ask the Council to have in mind that the Third-street and Broadway tunnels were paid for out of city funds, in which those names are appended to the present petition had their full share, and that the cost of the nine bridges which span the Los Angeles River either has been or will be, and rightly too, met in the same way. A tunnel under First street is as purely a public enterprise as any one of the excellent projects named.

"We call attention to the fact that the boring of the Third-street tunnel led to a greatly increased valuation of property on both sides of the hill. Its completion was followed by the springing of Hill street into prominence, and was one of the measures leading up to it. The city treasury receives substantial benefit from the Third-street tunnel, and will receive more as the years go by. The Third-street tunnel was the very best financial investment the city of Los Angeles ever made, and the proposed tunnel under First street promises as well.

"We also ask the City Council not to be unduly influenced by the fact that the city is financing large public enterprises, and that its bonded indebtedness is near the legal limit. Older cities are in the same condition, and in a city of such rapid growth as Los Angeles it would argue lack of public spirit if it were not so. In common with other citizens, we have taken just pride in the Owens River project, the Good Roads movement, the enlargement of the high schools, and stood ready with our ballots to back up the bonds at San Pedro. Those great enterprises, instead of constituting a reason why minor projects looking to the betterment of the city should be held in abeyance are themselves a reason why all that will aid taxpayers to meet the burden of taxation which the greater enterprises impose should be treated with consideration. To be liberal with schemes that create heavy burdens and penurious with those which help to carry them is surely not a policy of wisdom. It is said that times here have changed; the city is in debt and cannot do as it once did. We should remember that it is not a city which is burdened, but the individual citizens, called for convenience the city, and that a considerable body of these citizens ask for a tunnel to aid them to open up new avenues of trade and to make possible the restoration of a long-neglected section to a place which its merits demand, so that they may be able to respond to present and future calls of their beloved city. A tunnel under First street is an imperative necessity of vast benefit to the whole of the city of Los Angeles.

"We think it just to remind your honorable body that your petitioners in large measure are of the oldest section of the city, the section that has borne a worthy part, and often the chief part, in every public improvement since the city had a being—that has, in truth, been a mother to the newer sections. The mother now in turn asks of her children what is but a trifle as compared to what they have bestowed on other enterprises."

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

OLD RULES TO BE HEADLINERS.

DIVORCE DEFAULTS GOVERNED NOW AS FORMERLY.

Protests of Attorneys and Dragging of Cases Have Caused Judge Houser to Give Up His Proposed Reform Restrictions After a Week's Trial. Few Decrees Issued.

Superior Court Judge Houser has modified his proposed rules relating to the conduct of divorce actions in his court.

It is now announced that he will not insist that depositions be secured from defendants in all cases, or that they must appear personally and testify. In regard to Judge Houser's proposed new rules, some attorneys complained that they were an innovation not authorized by the laws of the State, while others, who imagined they saw much evil in hurrying divorces, backed Judge Houser in his position.

The judicial colleagues of Judge Houser took no action in the matter, but they were all much interested in the gossip of the week. A letter received by Judge Wilbur yesterday, from one of the best-known attorneys in Los Angeles, protesting against the new rules, and intimating that they were not in harmony with the State laws, precipitated matters.

It is believed that with the change of front on the part of Judge Houser, who, no doubt, was sincere in his views, and had only in mind something in the nature of reform that would put an end to scandals which often creep into divorce matters, there will be harmony hereafter on the subject.

With the change in the manner of handling divorce propositions, the congestion in Department Three is likely to soon disappear. Not to exceed half a dozen decrees were granted last week, and there were more than thirty cases filed.

THAT CRAP GAME.
RESULTS DISASTROUS.

"Jedge, I's as innercent as you is in dis mattah, and you were not in de game."

The speaker was Ed Moseley, a colored man, trying to side step a penitentiary sentence in Judge Willis's court yesterday. The complaint against Mosely alleged that on July 25, last, he robbed George Nunelly of $1.25 in a crap game, conducted in a rooming-house in this city.

Moseley had not only taken the money but he tried a bit of gun play on Nunelly so that he might make his getaway, a plan in which he was quite successful. Mosely had been in the County Jail for one hundred and four days, and he argued that he had been punished enough.

"Foh Gawd, Jedge, I won de money faih; I pulled de gun, but it was because I feared foh my life; that man Nunelly is a bad man; indeed he is, Jedge."

"Did you ever work in Sacramento?" asked the court.

"Yes, I hab, Jedge; and dat am a fine place; it suttinly am, Jedge."

"Well, I will give you two years in Folsom and after you have served your sentence you can move down to Sacramento and get one of your old jobs," remarked the court.

Moseley was stupefied by the sentence, and before he could recover his lost palate so as to be able to speak, he was half way across the "Bridge of Sighs."

DR. PRICE REDIVIVUS.
ANOTHER FRAUD COMPLAINT.

Dr. W. R. Price of Long Beach, who has figured in the local courts as defendant in the promotion of the National Gold Dredging Company, a concern that appears to have been successful only in separating a number of people from their hard-earned money, was in Justice Ling's court yesterday in a similar role.

In this action, as in the other, the National Gold Dredging Company stock was the loadstone that attracted $1000 from the pockets of Mary J. Helm. Some time ago the same plaintiff brought an action for the recovery of a similar amount in the Superior Court, the petition alleging that Dr. Price had secured the money by fraud and misrepresentation.

In the present case the woman says she purchased 1000 shares of stock for $1000, and she asserts that Dr. Price, by his winning ways, induced her to borrow $250 of a friend for the purpose of investing in his get-rich-quick scheme. She alleges that the voluble doctor told her the company owned eleven miles of mining land along the banks of the American River, that the gold lay as thick in the river bed as grain in the bin; that from $2000 to $5000 a day was being taken out. These claims were false, she declares, and she asks for judgment for $1000.

In a case tried in Judge Hervey's court several months since, that resulted in Dr. Price and his associates being mulcted in $6000 damages on account of misrepresentations made in selling the same stock, it was in evidence that not a single dollar had been taken out of the claim; that the company had a lease on one acre, and did not own eleven; that the dredger used in the operations was destroyed by a freshet in the river, and had never been rebuilt or recovered.

The hearing was set for December 7. Bond in $3000 was furnished, and the defendant released from custody. Dr. Price is the head of the New Thought cult in Long Beach, and according to reports, some of whom have blossomed into actions at law, has been pulling off some good things in the investment line among the confiding.

APPEAL CASE ARGUED.
IN THE CRIMINAL COURTS.

In Judge Willis's court yesterday the appeal cases involving the liberty of R. W. Mattoon was argued and submitted. Some time last spring, Mattoon, who was riding in an automobile on Pico street, struck R. Penrod, as he was alighting from a car, knocking him down and injuring him severely. It was alleged at the time that Mattoon was traveling at the rate of about thirty miles an hour. His arrest followed, and Police Justice Chambers sentenced him to thirty days in the County Jail on the charge of battery. Judge Willis will decide the legality of the proceeding next Saturday.

J. L. Murphy of South Pasadena was convicted of operating a pool [illegible] in violation of the city ordinances, and Justice Klamroth fined him $150 for the act. He appealed the case and Judge Willis will decide whether the conviction and sentence were proper.

Alhambra offered an appeal case, in the person of Nelson C. Means, who has been fined $300 for delivering beer in violation of the city ordinance. The defendant claimed that he was merely the agent of Hepner & Company, distributors for the Los Angeles Brewery, and was engaged in delivering the frothy beverage for private use only. This matter was argued before Judge Davis, and decision reserved.

LAWNDALE RUCTION.
INVOLVES RIVAL GROCERS.

The troubles of William Yates and O. G. Howe, rival grocers in the bustling village of Lawndale, were brought to the attention of the District Attorney's office yesterday, and a deputy listened to the complaint and issued a warrant for the arrest of Howe.

Howe is postmaster at Lawndale, in addition to dealing in soap and things. He tips the beam at 200 pounds. His rival in the codfish trade weighs but 100. Howe refused to swear to the complaint charging Yates with threatening to do him great bodily injury, and that duty was performed by Mrs. D. G. Karns, who averred that she had heard Yates say that he "would knock Howe down and poke his face until he could not whistle."

"Why didn't you knock him down yourself?" asked Deputy Hammon, surveying the hulk of Howe, that towered beside him like a battleship. "You are twice as big as Yates," he followed.

Howe at once assumed a dignified position, and said: "I could not do it, sir, because I am a Christian gentleman, and a representative of the Federal government."

It is intimated that when the trial is held half the population of Lawndale will be in evidence as witnesses.

DEFECT IN LAW.
ALLEGED BY ATTORNEY.

Whether it is proper under the laws of California to make the public treasury responsible for costs necessary in the defense of an indigent prisoner was asked Judge Davis yesterday.

The question arose when the trial of Albert Ryan, labor-union organizer, for the cold-blooded killing of Otto Miller at the United States Hotel, July 16, was set for hearing, December 6.

The attorney who had been appointed by the court to defend Ryan asked for leave to secure depositions in Arizona, the former home of Ryan, and this was allowed. Then it was suggested that it would be necessary to ask for an allowance of some kind to pay the expense of securing the depositions. The court held that in its opinion there is no warrant for honoring such a demand at the public expense.

It was suggested that the court had appointed an attorney to defend Ryan, and deprived his legal adviser of the means to conduct his defense. This appealed to the judge and the matter was taken under advisement.

TIDE-LAND CASES.
SUBMITTED TO COURT.

The various cases involving title to about 12,000 acres of what is known as tide lands at San Pedro and Wilmington, were closed yesterday in Judge Bordwell's court, with the argument of U. S. Webb, Attorney-General of California. The matter was taken under advisement, and it is quite uncertain when a decision will be ready. The court has a number of other important matters demanding attention, and the consideration of the tide-lands litigation may be postponed until later on.

The Attorney-General argued that the statute under which the tide land patents were granted to certain private interests were admittedly of doubtful construction. He declared that a settled policy in the matter of State tide lands is to be determined by the outcome of these cases, and that if the policy advocated by the defendants was to prevail every acre of tide lands along the one thousand miles of California coast would soon pass into the ownership of private individuals. He denied that twenty years of undisputed possession, and the expenditure of large amounts of money for the improvement of these lands, should, under the law, operate as a title to the property in dispute. The statute of limitation did not run if the patents are void. The mutations of time have not ripened into title.

KEATING PROTEST.
CHILDREN AGAINST SALE.

Alfred Keating, Edward Keating and Elvira Keating Frothman filed a protest in the probate court yesterday against the proposed sale of the real property of the estate, said to be valued at $600,000. They also allege that the property is worth $900,000, and that within two years it will be worth $1,500,000.

It is charged that H. G. Schader of Santa Monica, who is the ostensible purchaser of the property, is in no shape financially to pay such a price for it, and that he is the head of a syndicate which includes Elmer McDowell and A. W. McPherson, two trustees of the estate.

It is also alleged that the sale has not been advertised, that higher bidders can be secured, and that the proposed sale is contrary to the mind of the decedent, when he placed the property in trust for his children.

Under the terms of the will, it is represented, the property is to be distributed December 21, of the present year, when Edward Keating attains his majority. It is declared there is no occasion for making a forced sale before that time. Protest is also entered against the payment of a commission for making the sale to Carl F. Schader, brother of the proposed purchaser, on the ground that he has performed no service that would entitle him to such a commission. The matter is booked for Judge Rives's court tomorrow morning. A lively contest is certain.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

INCORPORATION. Articles of incorporation of the Bubbles Baking Powder Company, capital stock, $25,000, were filed yesterday; incorporators, J. C. Bieger, E. M. Boteler and E. J. Loewen; amount subscribed, $15,000.

CHURCH PETITIONS. The first African Methodist Episcopal Church of Pasadena, filed a petition in the Superior Court yesterday, asking for permission to sell the Fair Oaks property, for $3800. Rev. G. M. Tillman, pastor, subscribed to the document. The Southern California German Methodist Episcopal Camp Meeting Association asked that it be allowed to mortgage the premisese for $1400 to pay an indebtedness. The request is backed by the board of directors, consisting of A. W. Stork, J. Furrer, William Knickrehm, William Thiele, Nix Priester, P. Ruenitz, H. Aufdenkamp, J. Kast and A. Ruldy.

WILL FILED. The will of Harry Wingate Cottle, who died in South Pasadena, October 31, was filed for probate yesterday. It disposes of an estate amounting to $30,186. The widow of the deceased is given a life interest in the bulk of the property, consisting mostly of real estate in Redondo and South Pasadena. Subject to the life interest, Harvey N. Cottle, a son, is given a one-third interest, Isabelle K. Cottle one-third, Fred B. Cottle, a grandson, one-sixth and Harry B. Cottle, a grandson, one-sixth.

ADOPTION MATTERS. Fred A. Dinsmore filed a petition for the adoption of Alle Almand, a daughter of his wife by another marriage. Oliver and Amanda Sadler asked that they be allowed to adopt Catherine R. Gates. The consent of Pliny H. Gates of Will county, Ill., the surviving parent, accompanies the petition.

HEAVY VERDICT. The injury in Judge Bledsoe's court brought in a verdict of $12,500 for C. C. Patton, in his suit for damages against the Los Angeles Pacific Company. Patton was a motorman on one of the cars destroyed in the collision at Rosemary, April 2, 1908. His prayer was for $25,000, it being alleged that Patton is a physical wreck on account of the injuries sustained in the accident.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

TIP WAS FROM MOTHER-IN-LAW.

WOMAN HELPS POLICE ROUND UP POKER GAME.

She Said Her Daughter's Husband Was Being Fleeced Each Pay Day. Five Arrested—One Man Caught in His First Game, Pays Fine and Swears Off.

The tip which led the police to raid a quiet game of draw poker in room No. 137 of the Hellman building, No. 142 South Broadway, early yesterday morning, came to the authorities in an anonymous letter from a woman. She complained that her son-in-law was being fleeced of most of his salary each week while taking a hand in the great American pastime in this office. The result was that five men were gathered in and fined $25 each by Justice Williams yesterday.

In the letter the woman said that her daughter's husband for several weeks had come home on pay day with only a small part of his salary. For a time he made various evasive answers and at last confessed that he had toyed with red and blue and white chips and had each time come off loser. She asked the police to protect her relative against his own weakness.

Chief of Police Dishman thought he could best aid her by striking at the root of the evil and ordered two men in citizen's clothes to raid the place.

The location of the game was ideal from a police standpoint. The officers were able to look directly at the players through an air shaft, without themselves being seen. When they had gathered sufficient evidence, one broke through a door and another entered by a window.

The men taken in custody gave their names as S. T. Lewis, H. H. Mitchell, F. Teales, J. R. Carillo and E. C. McFadden. They were arraigned on a charge of having violated a city ordinance and each entered a plea of guilty and was fined $25.

SPURNED BEGGAR FIGHTS.
NOW IN THE WORKHOUSE.

Detective Frank Beaumont is bearing the scars of battle as a result of a tussle in arresting John Doyle on a charge of begging. Doyle will serve 100 days in the workhouse for seeking a dime to get a drink.

The officer met Doyle on Main street and was accosted for some change. He told the beggar to mind his own business and quit seeking alms, or he would arrest him. In a flash a clenched fist struck Beaumont in the face. After a lively fracas, Doyle was subdued.

When the smoke cleared away, Beaumont bore scratches and bruises on his countenance. Doyle pleaded guilty before Justice Williams yesterday.

SHOWS MOTHER'S CARE.
BABY LOOKS LOTS BETTER.

Mrs. Mae Elder, who was charged with having deserted her baby and was released on her promise to care for the child, yesterday appeared before Justice Frederickson to show she had kept faith.

The youngster, who had been sickly, is now bright and healthy and showed she had benefited by the care bestowed on her by her mother, in the last month.

Mrs. Elder's case was continued until the 20th inst. If she does her motherly duties meantime, the charge will be dismissed.

BURGLARY NOW CHARGED.
VALUABLES ON A HOBO.

E. J. Hart, a hobo, was taken before Justice Williams yesterday on a charge of burglary. He is accused of having entered the home of F. M. Coulter, of the Coulter Dry Goods Company. The magistrate will hold the preliminary examination of the prisoner on the 13th inst.

Hart was arrested on a charge of vagrancy. When he was searched valuable jewelry was found in his pockets. A description of the jewels was published in The Times and the Coulters recognized their property.

Perhaps the only need is a new rug—or, maybe, new lace curtains—or a new dining table—or a serving table—or a buffet—or possibly the complete furnishing of the room. Whatever can supply it, more distinctively, more economically, and more at the "California" than any place else in Los Angeles.

We show the most comprehensive collection of honestly built, distinctive furniture in this city. Our showing includes oak pieces in the Elizabethan English and early English finishes; Arts and Crafts pieces and the new fumed oak; and Colonial and Sheraton pieces in genuine mahogany; these, we show all dining-room pieces in unfinished oak, which may be in our own shops, to match the woodwork of your dining-room.

And our display of rugs and lace curtains and draperies is as unusual as our display of dining-room furniture, and the values are equally attractive.

SUGGESTION.

JEROME'S A UNIQUE PLAY.

"PASSING OF THIRD FLOOR BACK," HIT IN METROPOLIS.

Mysterious Stranger—Played by Forbes Robertson—Amalgamating and Humanizing Element in Cheap London Boarding-house, Where He Works Transformation.

Forbes Robertson, in Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," is the most recent Shubert importation, and he seems to be doing much better in the metropolis than certain other Shubert presentations.

Miss M. Louise Grant, a Times correspondent, who saw the production in England, writes:

"It is unique. As a play, it hardly deserves the unkind criticism it has received from some hands, even though the working out of the theme is manifestly exaggerated and altogether improbable from the standpoint of actual life. The author does not even call it a drama, but merely 'an idle fancy.' And why not stage an idle fancy, especially when it rests upon a psychological principle? It makes no pretense at plot; there is no action more exciting than walikng about the stage, no tense moments, or inspired speeches; it progresses on a quiet level, yet it is not monotonous, because of its clever and varied character-delineation, and the charm of the unusual. Neither is it unconvincing in its idealism; on the contrary, it leaves a haunting impression. It is mysterious, but the mystery is in the symbolism. It strongly suggests the morality plays of a few centuries ago, and it may, in fact, not be inapt to designate it a morality play modernized.

"The story is quickly told. In a Bloomsbury lodging-house, managed by a vixen, whose object is to get the most by giving the least, are gathered together a motley assemblage of rascals and decayed gentility, whose primary occupation consists collectively, in cheating the landlady, and individually in backbiting, slandering bullying, or defrauding other people, according to their individual propensities. A stranger comes among them, the Passer-by, who takes the room on the third floor back. He is magnanimous, large-souled, charitable; his presence in their midst works a magic change; one by one they come under his influence; he knows them all, he understands them, he perceives the good which lies beneath the coating of evil, and by this instinct arouses and inspires the latent divinity in each, until they become a self-respecting, mutually assisting, ideal household. The stranger—the Third Floor Back—symbolizes the better self in each.

"The first to feel his potent influence is the eagle-eyed landlady, who suspects everybody, and considers all her boarders her legitimate prey. She first becomes smitten with remorse at having maid drudge take a few breaths of his board, and then with heretofore unheard-of liberality and thoughtfulness, suggests that the poor little serving maid druge take a few breaths of fresh air before dinner. His mere presence inspires the latter with self-respect and the desire to look a little more presentable. Then the decayed beauty of 40, who employs cosmetics and false hair to give herself the youthful appearance she no longer possesses, and who vents her spleon on the rest of the world with the caustic tongue of an old cat, comes to feel that plainess is preferable to deception, and a gind heart to a biting wiit. (For various evident reasons this character is a poor bit of work on Mr. Jerome's part.) The retired army officer and his Zantippe, who taint the atmosphere with their unseemly quarrels, and who bank on the loveless marriage of their unhappy daughter as a means of paying their boardbills, suddenly recall the forgotten joys of their younger days and become lovers again. The daughter renounces the wealth of the polluted beast, whose very touch had made her shudder, and accepts possible poverty with love. The young artist, her lover, who had attempted to smother his high ideals of art for commercialism, has a bonfire and returns to the principles instilled by his early master. The rich but besotted bookmaker of the courses renounces his intention of marrying the young girl, and becomes the friend of the lovers. The snob, who has deserted her needy family to pass as a connection of royalty, decides that helpfulness is better than a useless existence of hollow pretense. The Jew swindler comes to feel that he is selling the honor of his race, and his henchman, one of the low, vulgar sort, turns the musical knack which he possesses to philanthropic purposes.

"Naturally, such a play would be a miserable failure if unskillfully delineated by the author as to character, or unsympathetically represented by the actors—but it wholly escapes the latter of these catastrophes, and the former, at least, in part. Mr. Jerome has chosen his characters in a manner reminiscent of Dickens, and every member of the company is excellent.

"In the prologue, the foibles of the various individuals, labeled according to their respective vices, are clearly delinerated; in the second act or play proper, the individual transformation takes place, and in the epilogue, the result of the transformation, or each as he should be, if his better self predominated.

Although the part of the Passer-by is one, perhaps, unworthy of the ability of such a consummate artist as Mr. Forbes Robertson, it is, nevertheless, one which few actors could sustain with interest or depict with conviction. But his quiet dignity of bearing, his finely chiseled features, gracious manner, and beautiful voice do both."

NOT "ANTI-JAP."

"Invasion" Will Try to Show That Asia Is Merely Convenient Back Door of Warring Europe.

"Invasion," the play of possible future war and international politics, by the dramatic editor of The Times, which Oliver Morosco will produce at the Burbank a week from today, is not an "anti-Jap" drama.

The author makes this statement in his own defense, as people who have done him the kindness to discuss the play at all have almost invariably taken it for granted that the Nipponese are the invaders.

It has apparently never occurred to many people that there are dormant powers in Asia which, unleashed, would make Japan a toy upon the international chessboard. The Pacific, as our historical forecasters sagaciously observe, will be the naval battleground of the future, and not only that, but it will be the great liquid field of commerce as well, and nations nowadays fight for commerce—not for one-man glory or mere profitless victory.

The Asiatic shore of the Pacific, too, feels the impetus of constant European coalition and alliance.

That Asia is merely the back door of Europe, and that through this back door, upon defenseless shores rather than upon a bristling Atlantic front, will the future avalanche of conflict be launched, is the idea set forth in "Invasion."

The warring power is a fictitious coalition which the author has termed "The Muscovite Alliance." It uses an Oriental fleet, and has, for its land forces, trained and tamed what might be an appalling power—the modern Chinese army.

In view of recent events, the author hastens to affirm that the seal of managerial acceptance had been set upon his final script many days before Marquis Ito was assassinated by a Korean fanatic. But it does happen that the only feud of death in "Invasion" is between a Korean and a Japanese—between Kaneko, the Alliance's scout and military advance agent, and Suski, the faithful house servant.

And the Korean kills the Jap—just as the newspapers recorded the other day.

This Korean—whom the writer is indeed glad to say well be created by Mr. Mestayer—embodies in his intensity and fanaticism much of the Ishmaelitism of his race. The endeavor has been to portray an Oriental of complete American education—working as an elevator boy in Los Angeles to get money for schooling, afterward attending an eastern university, and finally, polished and perfected and knowing ing back as the eye and brain of the Asiatic military descent.

The Japanese servant, Suski, is a member of a noble household, and is also in America for study, but proposes to defend his adopted country—and gives his life therefor

The traditional government slowness is shown as finally leaving San Pedro in a pitiful state of unpreparedness, while a false alarm, purposely made upon the other seaboard, has drawn all the American war vessels into the Atlantic.

The enemy strikes across the Pacific, seizes Hawaii as a base of supplies, and then, avoiding San Francisco because of its superior fortifications and general guarding, touches the south coast near Los Angeles, with the intention of using the three railway trunk lines here to establish an inaccessible base far up in the Rocky Mountains.

All the insidious paraphernalia of modern war comes into play in the thwarting of the attempt.

"Coming Through," a four-act play recently written by Mrs. George A. Dobinson and Miss Amanda Matthews, will be read before the Ebell Club tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Dobinson.

The play is upon a modern topic and is said by those who have heard excerpts to be an excellent piece of dramatic writing.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

"The Little Grey Lady," Channing Pollock's play of Washington departmental life, will be given by Lewis Stone and the Belasco company this week, with Mr. Stoe and Miss Magrane in the principal roles.

The story of the play deals with a

been sent to the redemption bureau to be redeemed. The hero of the play (although Mr. Pollock denies that there is any real hero in the play,) is suspected, and is about to be arrested when the "Little Grey Lady," otherwise known as Miss Anna Grey of the Treasury Department, sets up the claim that it is she who is the guilty person. Of course, Miss Grey is in love with the hero, and it is to save him from the wiles of a secret service employe who is also in love with the Little Grey Lady, that she attempts to sacrifice herself. The claim does not avail, however, but the hero comes out with flying colors, and with an enviable reputation for honesty at the end of the play, and of course, he wins the Little Grey Lady.

Mr. Pollock is himself a Washingtonian, and knows whereof he writes when he sketches the characters that are only to be found in the Capitol City.

Frank Camp, reveling in his usual stage villainy, is this time in the guise of a secret service man. Howard Scott, Richard Vivian, Charles Ruggles, James K. Applebee, Ida Lewis, Adele Farrington, Beth Taylor and the other Belasco players will be found in important roles.

Following this piece the Belasco company will offer "The Road to Yesterday."

The offering at the Majestic Theater this week, beginning tonight, is Samuel E. Rork's production of "The Land of Nod," a musical extravaganza of the amusing kind. It was the opening attraction of this theater last season, and made a distinct hit.

The production is built substantially of popular melodies, and a large comedy element. Supplementing these features are the adjuncts which justify the designation "extravaganza," as distinguished from musical comedy. They embrace sets of fantastic scenery, beautifully conceived and well executed transformations, unique electrical effects, massive "properties," and mythical characterizations such as are encountered only in fairyland tales. Nearly all of the people of last season's company who made distinctive hits here are retained in the cast. Three new members of note are Neil McNeil, Anna McNabb and George Fox. While they did not appear in the cast last season, they are by no means strangers in "The Land of Nod," as they were with the original eastern production, and will be seen in the same parts they created there. Mr. McNeil and Miss McNabb will be favorably remembered here for their excellent work in "The Red Mill" last season. The prima donna this year is Bessilee Merrill, late prima donna of "The Motor Girl," and Eddie Foy's company.

Valerie Bergere will return as an Orpheum headiner this week, presenting a new sketch, "The Sultan's Favorite." This piece deals with the escape of the personage of the title from Abdul Hamid's harem at the time of the recent dethronement, and her appearance in a New York mansion's Turkish room, which seems to her quite like home. Her innocence of the ways of an American household easily afford ample opportunities for much fun, full a week ago, that it might be properly adjusted to the local stage.

Second on the bill are the Tuscany Troubadors, a set of grand opera vocalists.

The six Glinserratis, well-known acrobats, return to the Orpheum direct after several years' absence.

Carlin and Clark, German comedians, are programmed as very funny men.

James Young and his company, in "Wanted, a Sister;" Mary Norman, in new characterizations; Pilu and his master, and Ed F. Reynard's large ventriloqual act, remain.

The perennially popular "Charley's Aunt" will be the attraction at the Burbank Theater during this week. The piece, by Branden Thomas, an Englishman, holds the record for the longest uninterrupted run ever scored on the English-speaking stage. It was written about twenty years ago, but seems as popular today as ever, and as frequently used by stock companies.

A. Byron Beasley will be seen in the role of Jack Chesney, one of the three chums. Harry Mestayer will play Charley, and Henry Stockbridge will be "Babs." The parts of the three girls will be played by Blanche Hall, Lovell Alice Taylor and Margo Duffet, while Louise Royce will be seen as the real Donna Lucia. Others prominent in the cast will include John W. Burton, Willis Marks, Frederick Gilbert and William Yerance.

Richard Carle's "The Mayor of Tokio" will be given this week by Ferris Hartman and his company at the Grand.

In the role of Marcus Orlando Kidder, impressario of a stranded opera company in Japan, Ferris Hartman has a role that gives him opportunities for his brand of tomfoolery, while it also affords excellent parts for Miss Ialleb, Mr. Walch, Miss Hart, Walter de Leon and the other members of the company.

"The Mayor of Tokio" concerns an American theatrical manager who has taken his company on a tour of Japan in the hope of reaping a harvest of yen in the oriental empire. In Tokio the theatrical people are mistaken for princes and princesses, and are received by the Mayor of the city with proverbial eastern courtesy. The Mayor is continually hounded by a Japanesce conspirator, and his boon companion, a Russian spy, who never appears upon the scene without a huge india-rubber bomb.

Following "The Mayor of Tokio," Ferris Hartman and his company will give for the first time here "The Toreador," in which Ferris Hartman will be seen as the funny, little cockney, Sammy Gigg.

For the headline feature of the new Los Angeles Theater bill, opening with usual matinée tomorrow, the management will offer a novelty in the appearance of Butler and Bassett, ice skaters who will perform their exhibition of fancy skating on real ice. For this purpose a large tank has been constructed to set in the stage, and at every performance the ice will be manufactured in front of the audience.

Much of the fun on this week's bill will be furnished by the Four Stagpooles, and an Australian act imported exclusively for the Sullivan and Considine circuit, who will appear in their skit, "The Crazy Caddie," and George Lauder, Australian ventriloquist, with life-sized mechanical figures.

Marion and Rial will be seen in a new psychic playlet, "The Witches' Power," and Selbini and Grovini will present some surprises in the comedy acrobatic line. Completing the bill will be the Australian character singer, Ernest Brinkman.

"The Man of the Hour" will be the next presentation upon the Mason Operahouse stage.

Eddie Foy, in "Mr. Hamlet of Broadway," will occupy the Auditorium stage during the week of Nov. 15. Edgar Smith, Edward Madden and Ben Jerome are responsible for Mr. Foy's present vehicle.

In the Spotlight.

Holbrook Blinn, whose grim and great performance of the Bowery thug in "Salvation Nell" is vividly remembered, will be starred by Harrison Grey Fiske next season.

Joseph E. Howard and his wife, Mabel Barrison, will appear in London in vaudeville next winter. After a month in the British capital they will spend three months traveling through the continent.

Mr. Forbes-Robertson has taken in hand the project to place a bust of Sir Henry Irving in the foyer of the New Theater in New York by subscription of English players who have acted in America or who are acting here. He has chosen a bust by Frampton, the English sculptor, and he hopes within a few months to collect the necessary funds to purchase it.

Charles Frohman has obtained the English and American rights of "La Papillon" (The Butterfly,) recently produced at the Antoine Theater, Paris. Mr. Frohman has decided that the piece will first be acted in London, with Cyril Maude in the principal role, and later in America.

Gerhard Hauptmann's drama, "Elga," is to be turned into an opera. Baroness Martha von Zobeltitz and a young Hungarian composer, Lentvai, is to write the score. Haptmann's fairy drama, "The Sunken Bell," has been used twice by composers as an opera text.

Is is told of Elvira de Hidalgo, the Spanish coloratura soprano engaged by the Metropolitan, that she ran away from home to become an operatic singer. She is only 18 years old, and is the daughter of the Marques de Hidalgo, head of an old family in Spain. Her father first saw her in the costume of Rosina, and her success so pleased him that he permitted her to continue on the opera stage.

The pet aversion of Dr. Hans Richter, the famous conductor, is said to be the interviewer. The conductor shuns the man with the pencil like the plague, and it is told of him that once when an interviewer tried to waylay him at Queen's Hall, London, the doctor escaped by putting on his overcoat, turning the collar up to its highest point, pressing his broad-brimmed hat well down over his face, and rushing off in a four-wheeled cab.

Albert Spalding, the youthful violinist, is an ardent bibliophile, and has acquired a fine collection of rare books during his long residence abroad. He is an accomplished linguist and familiar with the literature of many countries. As with composers of music, his taste is shown in his preference for the classics. He has in his collection many a volume which is a triumph of the bookmaker's art of centuries ago.

Finding herself left with a little spare mental energy on her hands unclaimed by the strenuous duties of prima donna life, Emmy Destinn has now taken up the drama as the latest athletic field for her restless intellect. Her play, which is entitled "Rachel," and presents a picture of life in the ghetto in Prague, was recently produced in the Czech Theater in Prague, but without making the least success.

Constance Crawley has been engaged by Paul H. Liebler to appear in the stellar role of "The Daventrys." She has had a varied career on the dramatic stage, and her work has been of a very unique type. Miss Crawley is the only English actress, except Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who has played Melisande in "Pelleas and Melisande," and Bjornsen's "Beyond Human Power."

Clara Lipman will resume acting between now and January 1 in a comedy called "The Hills of Troy," an adaptation of a French play by Alexandre Bisson and Georges Thurner. The original had a long run in Paris, with Jeanne Granier in the role, to be acted here by Miss Lipman. The latter has not played since her London engagement, in 1907, in her own comedy called "Julie Bonbon."

Charles Frohman expects that J. M. Barrie will come to America to see Miss Ethel Barrymore act in the new one-act play that he presented to Miss Barrymore awhile ago. During the visit the author will naturally also avail himself of what will be his first chance to see Miss Maude Adams in his play, "What Every Woman Knows." In fact, it will be the first time that Mr. Barrie has ever seen Miss Adams act in any play since "Rosemary."

Munich's largest museum has just had built, according to the Sheffield Independent, a fine copy of the piano used by Johann Sebastian Bach, the original of which is now in the collection of ancient instruments at the Royal High School of Music in Charlottenburg, Berlin. The Bach piano, which has been built according to the master's directions for his present use, is referred to as "a veritable masterpiece of keyboard mechanism." The copy for the Munich Museum reproduces faithfully the tonal effects of the original.

American girls bluff too much. That, in the opinion of Vera Courtenal, who hails from "show me" Missouri, is why a good many of them don't get along better when they try to win recognition in grand opera. "One hears so much," said the Metropolitan's new soprano to Ethel Lloyd Patterson of the New York Evening World shortly after her arrival from Paris, "of the difficulties the American girl experiences in obtaining recognition. Nonsense! Shall I tell you the truth? The American girl who goes to Paris to work and study is a 'bluff.' I mean

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

By Julian Johnson.

I believe that the new Municipal Band is to make its début this afternoon at Central Park. A programme was sent me indicating that its borning would be last Thursday—hence I so announced. But it wasn't.

The new organization should fill a long-empty educational niche here. If it is rightly controlled, the band should do work which will win comment all over the country. Already musical papers clear across the United States are talking about Los Angeles' prospective municipal band.

Personally, the writer had hoped that Henry Ohlmeyer would be chosen director—not from any feeling that Mr. Hamilton is not capable, nor for any mere personal friendship for Mr. Ohlmeyer, but simply because Mr. Ohlmeyer, who was available, has done band work in the past few years that is positively brilliant, and has shown himself not only a leader of unwonted energy and initiative, but one of the very foremost bandmakers and conductors who has ever appeared before audiences in the western part of the United States. Mr. Ohlmeyer is a band man, and it takes a band man to make and direct a band—an idea very forcefully expressed by both Mr. Innes and Mr. Sousa, during recent conversations here apropos of the municipal music situation.

We refrained from boosting in print any particular name before the appointments were made, though verbally expressing a free opinion for Mr. Ohlmeyer.

However, now that Mr. Hamilton has been selected, we can only refer to his unparalleled years of servige to the local music cause in the Symphony Orchestra, where he has gained splendid results, and sincerely hope that the public will grant him the uttermost consideration in his new field, and that his results will be as worthy and as lasting.

Ellen Beach Yaw will be heard in concert at the Auditorium tomorrow night, assisted by Mrs. T. Newman, pianist, and Jay Plowe, flutist.

This concert will preface an extended tour for Miss Yaw.

The numbers will include the mad scene from "Lucia," Schubert's "Who Is Sylvia?" and "Hark, Hark, the Lark," Brahm's "Vergebliches Staendschen," "Ah, Fors e Lui," Saint-Saen's "Le Bonheur est Chose Legere," Del Acqua's "Villanelle," Tourneaux's "Melodie," and Eckert's "Swiss Echo Song."

Mr. Plowe will accompany in several numbers, and will play as a solo Ganne's Andante and Scherzo.

Jules Koopman, violinist, and Maurice Koopman, 'cellist, both from London, and members of the Richter Philharmonic Orchestra, will be introduced by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clifford Lott at a recital at the Gamut Club on Thursday evening.

The programme will include the Beethoven No. 4 Trio in B flat, the Mozart Minuet, Leclair's "Tambourin," Moffat's "Hebriden Tanz," Max Bruch's "Kol Nidrei," Popper's "Serenade," and "Arlequin" and the Schumann Op. 88 Trio.

Mr. Lott will sing Handel and Schumann numbers.

On Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock Bruce Gordon Kingsley, assisted by Harry Girard, will give the first of his series of educational organ recitals at the Auditorium.

Mr. Kingsley's programme will include rendition and description, and the list of numbers includes the Mozart Fantasie in F Minor, Nicolai's "Merry Wives" overture, a Rachmaninoff prelude, the Alpine fairy music from Schumann's "Manfred," the introduction to the third act of "Die Meistersinger," and the Wagnerian "Huldigungsmarch."

Mr. Girard will sing the prologue to "I Pagliacci," and the "Invocation to the Evening Star," from "Tannhauser."

The talents of both Mr. Kingsley and Mr. Girard are well known, and a very enjoyable and edifying afternoon should be spent by those who attend.

The first Ellis Club concert of this season will be given at Simpson Auditorium on Tuesday evening of this week. The characteristic diplomatic secretiveness of this organization concerning the subject matter of its programmes prevents The Times musical department from having at hand the list of numbers, though they would be gladly enumerated were the programmes sent in.

Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, who will appear at Simpson Auditorium November 18, has had a most auspicious tour booked for this, her Pacific Coast début.

She will open the Music and Art Society series at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco

Whiting, No. 1315 Fair Oaks avenue, South Pasadena, on the evening of October 30, in honor of his twenty-first anniversary as an American citizen. The decorations were suggestive of the spirit of the occasion, the residence being adorned in red, white and blue, and "Old Glory" was intertwined with smilax, ferns and flowers. Before the serving of refreshments by prettily gowned P.C.O. students, a programme of literary merit was rendered. Dr. Ferrand sang a solo; Dr. Grace Shilling spoke on the "Value of Friendship;" Miss Gaylord gave a solo on the violin;

ELABORATE CARD PARTY.

Ladies Respond to Plan to Raise Funds for Scholarship Fund—Has Many Benefits.

One of the most helpful movements in which the women of Los Angeles have interested themselves is in the Scholarship Plan—an organized effort to provide means for the education of children, who, otherwise, would be compelled to work for needy parents.

When a child under 14 years of age is found working bravely to assist a widowed mother and perhaps a number of smaller children, the situation appeals to sympathy. Often the family is too proud to accept charity, or is ignorant or indifferent to the injustice of depriving the child of school advantages. In many instances the parents were difficult to reach until the Scholarship Plan was evolved.

Under the child labor law no child under 14 years of age is permitted to work without a permit from the Juvenile Court, and the knowledge that the Scholarship Plan stands ready, with definite and substantial help, has been of great assistance to the court.

The scholarship amounts to $156 a year for each child, and is paid in weekly installments, provided that the recipient has been faithful in attendance at school, and has made good use of opportunities. Most of the clubs of the city, and several church organizations, have pledged themselves to one or more scholarships, and several women of wealth have each subscribed an entire scholarship for next year.

The plan of giving a mammoth card party for the purpose of raising funds for the many-needed scholarships was the idea of Mrs. Charles B. Nichols, and through her indefatigable efforts is sure to be a success, when held in the assembly rooms next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Ladies of the city have responded generously to the request to participate in this function. Many have reserved rooms or a number of tables, and are giving private parties. Among these are Mrs. Frank O. Vickery and Mrs. George Kress, who will occupy two parlors; Mrs. E. J. Brent, party of sixteen; Mrs. Dillingham O'Daniel, party of twelve; Mrs. R. W. Bresee, party of twenty; Mrs. E. T. Sherer, party of sixteen; Mrs. H. C. MacGinnis, party of sixteen; Mrs. George W. Walker, party of eight; Mrs. H. C. Breeden, party of eight; Mrs. H. B. Cass, party of forty guests, and other parties will be given by Mrs. W. T. Calderwood, the Misses Dent, the Magnolia Club, Mrs. W. T. Covington, Mrs. Magauran and others.

The following ladies have been appointed as the Executive Committee for the card party: Mrs. Randall Hutchinson, Mrs. C. B. Nichols, Mrs. Leon F. Moss, Mrs. O. P. Clark, Mrs. George W. Jordan, Mrs. M. E. Strohm, Mrs. Egelhoff Rundell, Mrs. B. H. Cass, Mrs. Frank Phelps, the Misses Dent, Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum, Mrs Morris Albee, Mrs. Frank O. Vickery, Mrs. Phillip D. Wilson, Mrs. Oliver Bryant, Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Cora Lewis, Mrs. Frank B. Long, Mrs. H. Morris, Mrs. G. F. Conant and Mrs. George W. Kress.

Light refreshmentse will be served, and a number of handsome prizes have been offered by interested parties.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

NOTABLE among social functions of the week was the gathering of 300 of the Valley Hunt Club members and friends at the clubhouse Wednesday evening, when "Founder's Day" was appropriately celebrated. Golden brown chrysanthemums were used in profusion in decorating. Charles Frederick Holder, Charles D. Daggett, Dr. F. F. Rowland and Mrs. Charles D. Daggett described a series of lantern slide pictures depicting scenes of early club days and after this programme refreshments were served in the dining-room. The table

High grade undermuslins near half

Make use of our Mail Order Dept.

Style changes in the finer grades of undermuslins come as frequently as in outer apparel. The makers who supply our regular stocks recently closed out to us the sample lines from which they sold their Fall and Winter goods—they have to make an early clean-up so as to have their Spring lines marketed by January first. We own these sample garments at little above half the prices their duplicates brought. The saving is yours.

Many False Teeth Made.

Some idea of the general use of false teeth may be gathered from the statement that twenty millions of them are exported from America to England every year. When we consider that probably more than half the inhabitants of Great Britain indulge in the luxury of false teeth, no matter how many grinders they may have lost, these figures would seem to indicate that nearly every one in England suffers from defective or missing teeth. As far as observation goes the United States is no better off than England in this respect.—[London Tit-Bits.

Could Have His Place.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale was a foe to long sermons. He used to tell a story of a long-winded preacher and the minor prophets.

"This preacher," so Dr. Hale would begin, "once preached over an hour on the four greater prophets, and then, when his exhausted congregation thought he was through, he took a long breath, turned a fresh page and, leaning over the pulpit, said:

"'We now come to the more complex question of the minor prophets. First let us assign to them their proper order. Where, brethren, shall we place Hosea?'

An irascible old gentleman in a back pew rose, took his hat and stick and said as he departed:

"'Place him here, if you want to. I'm going.'"—[Cleveland Leader.

MR. FRANK B. LONG. Dear Sir—I take pleasure in saying that the Frank B. Long Grand Piano that I've used in my studio work for the past season, has given eminent satisfaction. The tone is beautiful, deep and full, and has sufficient brilliancy to make it carry well without pounding. The action responds in a most satisfactory manner. I've found its singing quality particularly helpful to pupils in voice work. Sincerely yours, Heber Coleman.

English China—the Master Produ of the Potter's Art.

For hundreds of years the English Potters have led the world in the produ of fine china. Even the French, with their marvelous conceptions and interp tions of modern art, must take second place to the English when it comes to china craft.

The superiority of the English china is due to the peculiar bone clay from wh it is made—and which is found only in the pottery districts of England— the persistency of the English people in following this interesting work centuries.

Because of the remarkable tenacity of this clay—English china does not ch nor will it break as easily as other china. And the decorations have a lifeli and artistic freedom that is altogether unusual in china. One pattern in par ular shown in the Brock & Feagans stock is a tulip border in which the gracefully bend their heads and seem to almost sway to and fro as though by the wind. Another unusual design is the Indian tree, which is partic appropriate for breakfast sets.

Our showing includes the best "Copeland" and "Minton" productions— are classed as the highest types of English china.

The patterns we show are all confined entirely to our house—and are carri open stock—so that you may secure a single piece—a short service set— plete course set—or any number of pieces you may desire.

For gift occasions, you will find here many happy suggestions in this Eng china—sugar and cream sets, $1.50, $2.00, $3.50, $5.00. Cake or roll plates, to $4.50. Dessert plates, $10.00, $22.50, and $25.00 dozen. Service plates, to $150.00 dozen, and numerous other useful pieces at any price you may pay.

We invite you to come and see this new and most interesting display.

In Genuine Pouyat French China—we show a great many exclusive patterns in complete sets and open stock.

MISS KOBBE, TO WED VANDERBILT NAMESAKE.

Mrs. Virginia Kobbe.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—One of the autumn brides will be Miss Virginia Kobbe, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Kobbe, whose marriage to Gourd Vanderbilt Hollins will be celebrated on November 18 in Christ Church, Babylon, L. I., at noon. Miss Kobbe is to have half a dozen bridesmaids, but the list and that of Mr. Hollins's attendants has not been completed. Mr. Hollins is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hollins, and a namesake of William K. Vanderbilt.

Jowett's Impressions.

GREAT ENGLISH PREACHER TELLS OF HIS TEN WEEKS IN AMERICA.

[Correspondence Christian World.]

Rev. J. H. Jowett, M.A., and Mrs. Jowett reached England in the Adriatic on Thursday. They had spent ten weeks in America, their first visit to the States. I found Mr. Jowett on Monday in his home settling down to the accumulation of work that awaited him, but he kindly gave me an hour, and submitted graciously to the hail of questions with which I peppered him. He comes back greatly impressed by what he has seen and heard, and refreshed spiritually, mentally and spiritually. I suggested that the impressions of one to whom everything American was new would be received with keen interest by the tens of thousands who look to Mr. Jowett for religious leadership.

INTENSITY OF AMERICAN LIFE.

"Comparing American life with English life as you know it in Birmingham and London," I asked, "do you think the Americans are really more strenuous than we are?"

"Yes," he answered, "life is altogether more intense there. One reason is that the climate is so exceedingly exhilarating. There is a pretty general impression that the intensity of the life is exhausted and wears men out sooner than they are worn out here. Even the trains and trams go at a much greater rate than ours, and that seems to reflect itself in the general conduct and manner of living. Their literature and journalism are characterized by the same high pressure. I don't know that it is good for them. I remember comparing the press of the two countries with a man. An ordinary American taking up an English paper, he said, regards it as exceedingly slow. It takes the English paper a long time to get to the point. To my mind the Americans condense everything to the point of lifelessness. It may be that the summary way in which matters are treated in the American press may tell against the development of intellectual interest and the taste for solid reading in private life."

MULTIPLICITY OF PEOPLES.

"What should you say is the outstanding problem that confronts the American people?"

"I should say it is the problem presented by the multiplicity of peoples that make up the American nation. That is a very serious problem, but I was assured by men competent to judge that it is being successfully grappled with, and that these numerous elements, in spite of differences of language, are being welded into a patriotic people. Personally I had many evidences of that. I came across Americans of different nationalities who were intensely patriotic, and regarded their new country as their own. Their children are taught to salute and honor the American flag in the schools and to be proud of their country."

CRUSADE AGAINST CORRUPTION.

"I think, too, that in the matter of pure and stable government the best elements of the American nation are getting a tighter grip. There is a strong and determined feeling growing up against municipal corruption. For instance, a Commissioner of Police at Chicago is just now on his trial for allowing himself to be bribed. The ex-Commissioner of Police of Greater New York, Gen. Dingham, has recently been unfolding details of the darker side of New York city government. He tells how magistrates gave their decisions at the dictation of political bosses, and that the police force of the State is by no means guiltless of corruption. In the future it is more than likely that the force of public opinion will assert itself and put a stop to the scandals that have been common in the past."

THE COLOR PROBLEM.

"Did you come into contact with the problem of the colored people and reach any conclusions upon that matter?"

"That is another of the great problems that America has to solve, but I am of the opinion that the problem will largely solve itself. For instance, in the matter of education, there are now 57 per cent. of the negroes who can read, as compared with only 3 per cent., at the time they were emancipated. But even so, there is a wide and deep gulf between the blacks and the whites. The feeling is invincible against intermarriage of the races, and the question to a white champion of the negroes, 'Would you marry a negress?' at once reveals the impassable gulf. But without intermarriage the gulf must remain. It seems to me that the blacks will solve the question of their future place as citizens of the republic by forming themselves into an almost separate community, and yet being an integral portion, with equal rights, of the citizenship of the United States. They will have their own barristers, their own magistrates, their own doctors, and so on, and will be almost a separate people. That will not prevent them from being loyal Americans, proud of their country."

FEELINGS TOWARD ENGLAND.

"What impression did you get of the feelings of the Americans toward England?"

"I think that the feeling of America toward England is friendly, and is becoming increasingly so. A man of great public standing in America told me that he and his people regarded England as the natural ally of America, and he thought the relationship was never on a more friendly basis than today. On every hand I found that this better understanding was directly attributed to our Ambassador, Mr. Bryce. By everybody he is spoken of in superlative terms. In the first place, he went to them as a man who knew their history, and who has written what is by far the best history of the American Commonwealth. But more than that, he has an instinctive insight into the American character which enables him to interpret the thought and feeling of the Americans to themselves. His consummate tact, wedded to his literary distinction, has made him an Ambassador such as America has never had. I was told that even the Irish of America, who are the bitterest of England's opponents, are much more amicably disposed toward England since Mr. Bryce occupied his present position."

MULTI-MILLIONAIRE AND THE SLUMS.

"America is the land of the multi-millionaire. Did you find that the enormous wealth of the country is tending to diffuse itself and to make less serious the problems of poverty which are so difficult to deal with in our country?"

"I cannot say that I did. I was struck with the extremes of great wealth and sordid poverty, and by the comparative absence of the middle class which helps to mediate between the two in England. You cannot help being struck by the vulgar obtrusiveness of wealth in New York, and yet I was told there are no cities in the world which show such areas of the most appalling and unredeemed poverty. Americans are conscious and ashamed of the fact, and there is a growing determination to grapple resminisolutely with the problem."

MR. MOODY'S COOL SANITY.

"And now about Northfield. Did it come up to your expection?"

"Yes, I was greatly impressed by the Northfield Convention. The outstanding thing at Northfield is the cool sanity of the man at the head, Mr. Will Moody. He seems to have inherited all his father's quiet, strong skill in government and his admirable common-sense. There is nothing of the sentimental about Northfield, nothing sloppy and weak. I imagine it is one of the strongest conventions that was ever held. Everything sensational is tabooed, and everything that will even tend to get off the line of what is reasonable and healthy is rejected. The platform is by no means narrow. The one message is presented by very different men, and no crippling conditions are attached to one's visit. Northfield may become a great and most valuable center for ministerial conference, and I think it is Mr. Moody's intention to give more space in the programme to questions affecting ministerial thought and life and service. Northfield is a wonderful comment on the throughly sane evangelism of Mr. Moody's father. The schools there are extraordinary. They constitute practically a university, and when one considers that they were attached to the Moody and Sankey movement it is impossible not to feel how broad was the great evangelist's outlook."

DR. GUNSAULUS AND DR. LEN BROUGHTON.

"What American personalities struck you most, other than Mr. Moody, on the Northfield platform?"

"Well, I had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Gunsaulus, who is an exceedingly powerful American, and Dr. Len Broughton, whose forcefulness also much impressed me. These two men represented the opposite extremes of American religious thought in more ways than one, and their appearance together shows how comprehensive the Northfield platform is."

WINONA AND THE MIDDLE WEST.

"You went to the Winona Convention. How did that strike you, as compared with Northfield?"

"Winona is very different in character to Northfield. It probably appeals to a different class, not quite so liberal in its outlook. The attendances are even larger than at Northfield, the audience sometimes reaching 7000. There would be something like 2000 ministers. I should say that the programme at Winona is addressed on the whole to an audience more conservative in its thought. The convention is organized by Dr. Dickie, whom I learnt to esteem very highly as a man of strongly spiritual character. Winona seemed to me to be exercising a wide influence over the Middle West. Dr. Dickie also is going to give special care and attention to the ministeral side of the Convention. Dr. Gunsaulus will probably arrange a programme for the ministerial sessions next year, and that fact rather contradicts what I have said about Winona being more conservative than Northfield. It is another illustration of the way in which an amalgamation is being effected of the two schools of thought."

CONVENTIONS UNIFY THOUGHT.

"Should you say that these conventions lead to any precipitation of thought from the atmospheric cross-currents to more definitely realized concrete convictions?"

"That is rather difficult to answer. The religious public of America are evidently goers to conventions far more than the religious public of England. There are Northfields and Winonas all over the country. As to the final results of these conventions I cannot quite make up my mind. One of the last words I spoke to Mr. Will Moody was that I was a little uncertain as to the value of the general result. Still, I think if they were all superintended in the same calm and sane way as at Northfield they would only be sources of good. As to the "precipitation" you inquire about, there were five or six men from England and Scotland at Northfield, and our teaching pretty well corresponded. At any rate, the same notes were emphasized. I should think the general effect must be to give a new turn to many a man's preaching, to make him surer of the fondations of his faith, and in that way the conventions must have a very considerable influence upon the thought and feeling of the American churches."

THEOLOGICAL UNREST IN AMERICA.

"As far as you could discover, is there in America anything like the theological unrest that we have in England, due to the impact of criticism, science and modern ideas generally on the old theology and views of the Bible?"

"I should say that the ministry in America is more troubled and disturbed than the ministry of our own country. Many ministers in America seem to be just entering into a period from which most of our men are emerging. I dare say I met the more conservative ministers, and it is to them that my remark most applies."

How I Made

My Hair Grow

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy; so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious, and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures I finally found a simple prescription which I used with most remarkable results, and I can unhesitatingly state that it is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair, and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in first-class condition; it also makes the hair much easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months, and during that time it not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all his gray hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay rum, 6 ozs.; Menthol crystals, one-half drachm; Levona de Composee, 2 ozs.; To-Kalon perfume, 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls.

Apply night and morning; rub thoroughly into the scalp.

Go to your druggist and ask for an eight-ounce bottle containing six ounces of bay rum; also one-half drachm of Menthol crystals, and for a two-ounce bottle of Lavona de Composee. Mix the ingredients yourself in your own home. Add the Menthol crystals to the bay rum and then pour Lavona de Composee, and add the To-Kalon perfume. Let it stand for one-half hour and it is ready for use.

The demand for the above prescription has become so great, and there has been so much difficulty in getting the pure, unadulterated juice of the Ecuador plant, which it contains, that a reliable chemical house has now undertaken its manufacture complete, and the best druggists, as well as the discoverer herself, advise all purchasers to use the complete product known as Harriett Meta's Gold Medal Hair Tonic, which is put up by the To-Kalon Manufacturing Company, 7 Rue Auber, Paris, France. All druggists keep it or can easily obtain it for you. A representative of the Dean Drug Company stated yesterday that they had just secured a supply of the complete product.

Would Sales Records Twice as Great

Stocks have been planned on such a magnificent scale.

Purchases have been so broadly and resultfully made.

VULNERABILITY OF PACIFIC COAST TO INVASION.

BY GEN. HOMER LEA, IN HARPER'S WEEKLY.

[Copyright, 1909, by Harper & Bros.]

THE defense of the State of Washington is relegated to three forts on the upper reaches of Puget Sound. These fortifications are in a more impoverished condition and are even more unprepared than those on the Columbia. While 129 officers, 3180 men are necessary to man the guns already emplaced, there are, according to the Secretary of War, only 27 officers, 903 men available, which means that four-fifths of these guns could not be served.

As a defense against invasion the fortifications on Puget Sound are as valueless as those on the Columbia, and for the same reason, that they are remote from any possible base for invasion that could be selected by Japan in the debarkation of her first expedition. This landing will occur (Chart III) in Gray's and Willapa harbors. Should these harbor entrances be mined, then debarkation will be on the open beaches between the bays, or north of the entrance to Gray's Harbor.

The first objective of the Japanese armies will not be the cities on Puget Sound, nor Portland, nor the cities on the Columbia, but will be directed toward Chehalis and Centralia, two small towns fifty-seven miles eastward. These places, four miles apart, constitute the strategic center of both States, whether in relation to a defending force or invading armies. By schedule time Gray's Harbor and Willapa Harbor are but three hours westward; Seattle three hours to the north; Portland three hours and forty-five minutes to the south; the fortifications at the mouth of the Columbia seven hours and a quarter; the fortifications commanding the entrance to Puget Sound five hours and a half; Tacoma two hours; Olympia, the capital of the State, one hour and twenty-five minutes; the United States naval yard at Bremerton, four hours. Should it be necessary to march to any of these places they could be made in as many days as hours are given in the railroad schedule.

Within seven hours by rail of this center is to be found 58 per cent. of the entire population of Oregon, while 61 per cent. of the entire population of Washington is within six hours. This strategic center, midway between the centers of population in Oregon and Washington, is on and commands the only line of railroad that traverses these States north and south. Within three hours of this center are eight landlocked and deep-water harbors—two on the south, two to the west, and four on the north—together with shipyards and naval stations.

Portland, forming the right center of the Japanese position, is connected with Eastern Oregon and Washington by the Columbia River and two parallel lines of railway. Seattle and Everett, forming the Japanese left center, are connected with Eastern Washington and Oregon by three parallel lines of railway.

The full significance inherent in the seizure of this strategic center is only realized when the results are viewed in the concrete. No opposition against the landing of Japanese armies is possible unless the American forces are equal in numbers and efficiency, and are, moreover, in occupation of this position in less than four weeks subsequent to the declaration of war. The forts at the mouth of the Columbia and on Puget Sound possess no defensive value whatever when concerned with the invasion of these States. The cities which they are supposed to protect will be occupied by the Japanese without the invading forces coming within 50 or 100 miles of either fortifications. As Portland and the cities on Puget Sound are possessed by the Japanese these ports will pass into their control without the firing of a shot.

By this single movement, Japan not alone possesses these States in a military sense, but economically and politically as well. She commands all lines of communication, all harbors, and practically the entire personal wealth of a territory that is larger and richer than the Japanese empire. By the occupation of this position she segregates and dominates the inhabitants, controls them and their activities, their productions and industries to a degree of unity and absolutism now unknown in this republic. With the seizure and fortification of the Bitter Root Mountains east of Spokane, together with the Blue Mountains in Eastern Oregon, the dominion of Japan over these two American States becomes complete.

As the defenselessness of Washington and Oregon is due primarily to the failure on the part of this republic to recognize the changes that modern science and invention have brought about in increasing the possibilities of invasion, and in altering to a corresponding degree the manner and means of defending seaboard States, so is the undefended condition of Southern California due to the same general reasons.

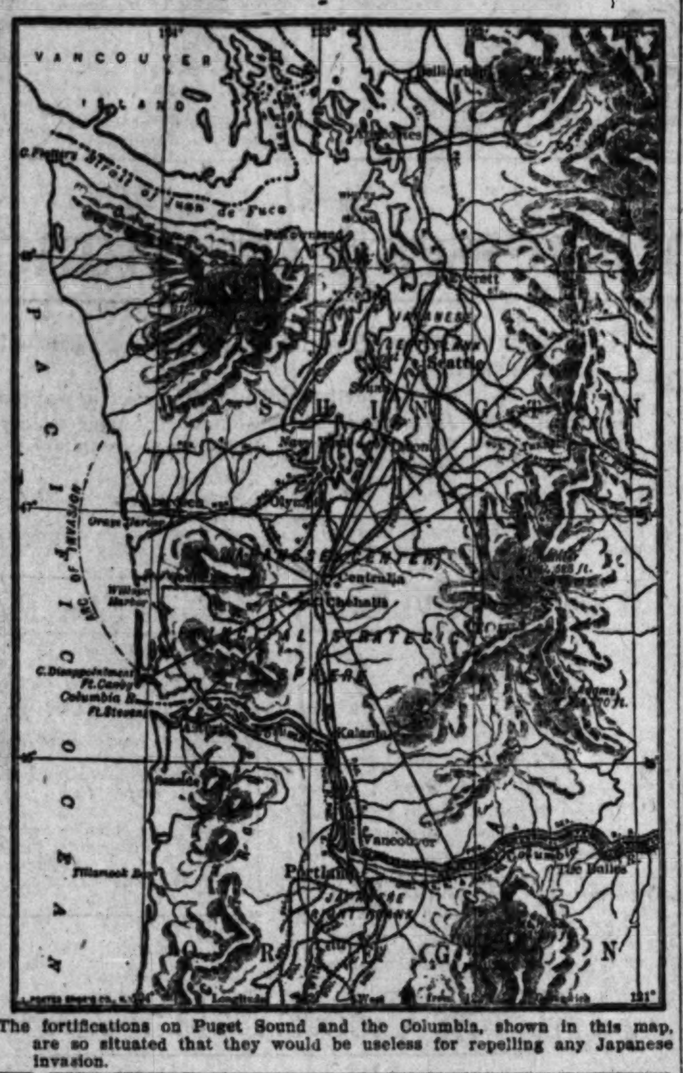
These two localities, forming the extreme flanks of the Pacific Coast, are equally remote from the main centers of the republic, separated therefrom by deserts and mountain chains. And while the forts of the north are without value, not only on account of their worthlessness, but because of their remoteness from any avenue of invasion, Southern California is without even the delusive dependence of such fortifications.

We have shown how simple, and yet how decisive, the conquest of Washington and Oregon will be, how quickly it can be accomplished by Japan without even the probability of a battle; yet the seizure of Southern California presents less difficulties than are to be found in the northern States.

Southern California is less in area than one-half of the State of Oregon, but of this area three-fourths belong to deserts and mountains, while only a portion of the remaining one-fourth is inhabited. The cities and cultivated areas are all adjacent to the sea, so that over 90 per cent. of the entire population dwells within thirty miles of the ocean, while 94.25 per cent. of the total wealth lies within this same distance of the sea.

The seizure of Southern California is simplified by an increased concentration of wealth and population in a single seaboard county, where is to be found two-thirds of the entire population of this territory and more than two-thirds of its wealth. This delimitation of the strategic area is finally reduced to the environs of a single city, so that the conquest of the southern flank of the Pacific Coast is relegated to and depends upon the seizure of the city of Los Angeles. Within this city alone is to be found more than half of the entire population and wealth of Southern California. It constitutes the political, economic and railroad center of this entire territory. All other cities, communities and industries are dependent upon it. If every city in this region except Los Angeles were seized by the enemy, Southern California would still remain, militarily, politically and economically, a part of the republic; but if Los Angeles passed into possession of an invading force, the whole of Southern California would fall though not another blow were struck. There is not a city nor community in this region that can exist for any portion of time after Los Angeles is in the possession of the enemy, though no hostile demonstration were made against it. There is not a town, nor a rural community, that is self-dependent nor interdependent. All are, as a whole, suburban to Los Angeles.

San Diego, in a military sense, politically and economically, is without relative importance, this city, as all other towns in Southern California, is but a distant suburb of Los Angeles, connected to it by a single strand of railway. With the severance of this artery of trade—whether it occurs a mile north of San Diego or at Los Angeles, 127 miles distant, is immaterial—the fate of that city is the same. With the enemy in control of the ocean, the isolation of San Diego is complete. Like ancient Carthage, it is built where the sea and desert meet. Westward is the ocean; eastward, southward and northward, just beyond its environs, reclaimed from the deserts, rise hillsides as barren as those that are beyond the Valley of the Tombs.



The fortifications on Puget Sound and the Columbia, shown in this map, are so situated that they would be useless for repelling any Japanese invasion.

The single line of railroad, which is this city's means of communication, runs northward along the coast for a distance of seventy-four miles, within 400 to 900 yards of tide-water. Thus a single vessel can blockade this city by land and by sea. So complete is the geographical and strategic isolation of San Diego, that a rampart of Gibraltars would not increase its military significance, nor add a single element to the defense of Southern California. Its capitulation will be brought about by ignoring its existence. This, under similar conditions, has happened many times before in the wars of man.

Though Los Angeles constitutes, as will be seen, the single strategic point upon which depends the security of Southern California, no effort, up to the present time, has been made to render it secure from attack. One regiment can now occupy the city with impunity. The only effort made toward its defense has been the advocacy of fortifying Point Fermin at the entrance of San Pedro Harbor. This proposal but demonstrates that to which we have already called attention, the prevailing ignorance concerning modern warfare.

Fortifications for the entrance of San Pedro Harbor possess no intrinsic or relative importance as regards the defense of Los Angeles. They belong, not to the land defenses of this region, but to the naval, and their erection presupposes the presence of an active fleet in these waters. San Pedro may be made a naval base, but beyond that it possesses no defensive value whatsoever. The purposes of such fortifications are specific; the defense of the harbor itself, or a fleet based upon it. The sphere of actual defense belonging to such fortifications is determined by a semi-circle, the radii of which are the effective range of their guns. Modern harbor fortifications are not self-defensive. Their protection depends upon either a fleet of sufficient strength to prevent the transportation and landing of the enemy's forces, or mobile armies able to prevent the enemy from gaining a foothold on any portion of the coast, whether adjacent to or distant from the fortifications to be attacked.

We have already shown the impossibility of naval defense for the Pacific Coast whenever the American navy is in the Atlantic prior to the beginning of hostilities, or whenever the American fleets in the Pacific are inferior to the entire Japanese navy. The fortification of San Pedro presupposes a navy many times larger than at present, the size of the fleets in the Pacific and their efficiency for war service being determined by the extent of the Japanese naval development.

Fortifications at San Pedro, without a fleet relatively as strong as that of the enemy, are useless. As Los Angeles is the objective point, landings will be made upon the closest available seaboard. And in a military sense San Pedro is twice as far from Los Angeles as Santa Monica Bay. This harbor, moreover, is so contracted that the danger of submarine mines and torpedoes would, under all circumstances, prohibit its utilization by the Japanese until the harbor itself and the surrounding country passed into their control. Santa Monica Bay, on the other hand, gives a free seaboard of over twenty miles in extent—adjacent to the environs of Los Angeles.

So long as this city forms the objective of invading armies their forces will not, under any circumstances, land within twenty miles of San Pedro Harbor, and the forts at that point must, regardless of their strength, capitulate whenever Los Angeles is seized. To hold these proposed fortifications against a land attack would require as great an army as might, in the beginning, delay the invasion of Southern California. Once an enemy gains the shores of Santa Monica Bay, San Pedro must, owing to the peculiar topographical features of the peninsula, either fall to an inferior force or be defended on a continuous front of a number of miles.

Extending across the San Pedro Peninsula almost east and west is a range of barren hills, similar to those north of Port Arthur, with an irregular crest exceeding 1000 feet in height, and nearly twelve miles in length. Sixteen hundred yards north of the proposed fortifications the hills rise to 280 feet; at 3000 yards the elevation is 500 feet; at 5000 yards the elevation increases to 900 feet; at 6500 yards is the crest of the ridge, 1400 feet above the proposed batteries.

This ridge continues westward to Santa Monica Bay, so that any attack upon the forts defending San Pedro would be by that bay, the enemy moving eastward and occupying this range of hills. Once these heights are seized the harbor and forts would be rendered untenable. The base of an attack on San Pedro is identical with that of an advance on Los Angeles—the bay of Santa Monica.

As the whole of Southern California will pass into the hands of an invading force once Los Angeles is occupied, all means employed for the defense of this region must be directed toward the security of this city, its environs and communications.

So extensive is the seaboard by which Los Angeles can be attacked and so close is the city to the sea that the only means—once command of the sea is lost—which can insure it from capture is to prepare before war systematically and thoroughly such means for the defense of the entire seaboard by mobile armies as modern warfare demands. Isolated fortifications, small and inefficient forces, will not only not hinder nor even delay the conquest of this region a single day, but will, on the other hand, result in useless destruction of life and devastation of the country.

We have called attention to the brevity of modern wars in general and naval movements in particular; how, within a few weeks after war is declared, concurrent with the seizure of the Philippines, Hawaii and Alaska, will the conquest of Washington and Oregon be consummated. In the same manner and within three months after hostilities have been begun other armies will land upon the seaboard of Southern California.

The question that now rises naturally in the thoughts of the reader is, What will the United States be doing during these three months? Instantly the mind is crowded, not alone with the speculations of victory, but with the vague grandeur of a nation's hope. The Old Lamp is rubbed and vast armies are suddenly mobilized; armaments are brought out of hidden recesses; great generals are made in the twinkling of an eye; then, winged, these legions take their flight across the mountains and deserts of the West.

To conduct a war on the Pacific Coast against the forces of Japan, this republic is at present less prepared and less capable than it has ever been prior to any war undertaken by it in the past. Due to the scorn of consequence, to the vanity of ignorance and indifference toward military preparation, no force can be placed on the seaboard of Southern California either within three months or nine months that would delay the advance of the Japanese armies a single day.

Irrespective of armament and antebellum preparation, however, we find other conditions that would prevent the mobilization of an army in Southern California capable of defending it against invasion and conquest.

The maximum force that can be mobilized in the republic immediately following a declaration of war is less than 100,000 men, of whom two-thirds are militia. This force, made up of more than forty miniature armies, is scattered, each under separate military and civil jurisdiction, over the entire nation. By the time these heterogeneous elements are gathered together, organized into proper military units and made ready for transportation to the front, the States of Washington and Oregon will have been invaded and their conquest made complete by a vastly superior force.

The probabilities of the American armies being directed against the Japanese forces in Washington and Oregon through the force of popular agitation presents this apparently anomalous condition: that the larger the American armies are at the time of invasion—regardless of what portion of the Coast it may be—the more certain are these forces to be directed against that point. Two factors determine this:

(1) The numerical equality or superiority of the first Japanese expedition over the entire American land forces, preventing an American army of corresponding strength from being sent against it simultaneously with the dispatch of similar forces against other probable points of invasion.

(2) The power of popular opinion to direct the available military establishment against the invading forces, regardless of the general military situation or strategic considerations.

Japan, to make this condition constant, needs but to have the strength of her first column proportionate to that of the entire American forces, which would be relatively small as regards her military establishment, even if the American standing army were five times its present size. So long as the existent military system continues in the republic there can be no adequate defense of any single portion of the Pacific Coast within a year after a declaration of war, nor the three spheres within an army year.

Three or four months after war is declared will find all insular possessions, Washington and Oregon, with an American army of less than 100,000 men either assembling in the East, moving against the Japanese in the North, or concentrating at San Francisco.

Japan, landing an army on the shores of Southern California, at this time, would occupy, without opposition, the strategic center of this region on the following day, and the conquest of Southern California would be, in a practical sense, complete.

We now come to the consideration of the most important phase of the military occupancy of Southern California by Japan. It has nothing to do with the intrinsic worth of this region, neither its economic nor political significance, but appertains alone to its strategic value, its necessity for and capacity of defense against subsequent efforts on the part of this republic to reconquer the Pacific States.

There are only three avenues by which armies can gain entrance to the Pacific Coast from the eastern portion of the United States, and Southern California constitutes one of these avenues, hence the possession of this region early is essential to Japanese control.

The conformation of this section is peculiarly adapted to effective defense from the Pacific side. The seacoast from Mexico to Point Concepcion is an elongated, irregular crescent, and with but isolated exceptions—as the valley holding the towns and orange orchards of San Bernardino, Riverside and Redlands—the inhabitable area follows the sea-line and extends back but a comparatively few miles. North and eastward of this oasis region are four principal mountain ranges—the San Jacinto, San Bernardino, San Gabriel and Tehachepi, with the crest line ranging from 5000 to 11,000 feet. Beyond these mountains are deserts, lava beds and valleys of death.

Entrance into Southern California is gained by three passes—the San Jacinto, Cajon and Saugus, while access to the San Joaquin Valley and Central California is by the Tehachepi. It is the control of these passes that determines Japanese supremacy on the southern flank of the Pacific Coast, and it is their adaptability to defense that determines the true strategic value of Southern California to the Japanese.

Los Angeles forms the main center of these three passes, and lies within three hours by rail of each of them, while San Bernardino, forming the immediate base of forces defending Cajon and San Jacinto passes, is within one hour by rail of both passes.

The mountain chains encompassing the inhabited regions of Southern California might be compared to a great wall thousands of feet in height, within whose enclosure reposes these fertile regions which have made the name of this State synonymous with all that is abundant in nature. These mountains, rugged and inaccessible to armies from the desert side, form a barrier impregnable except by the three gateways mentioned.

A Sale of Women's

Knit Underwear

One of our biggest underwear purchases was to have come in several installments. Instead, through mistake, the entire lot, amounting to several thousand dollars has come at once. The result is we're simply swamped with women's underwear. It's all splendid quality, bought before the recent rise in cotton and wool. Don't think we could duplicate the purchase price today—but we've too much on hand. We're sharing the profits with you, for a quick reduction of the stock. When you see the qualities you'll appreciate the offerings. There are light, medium and heavy weights in wool and fleeced garments. Variety enough to fill every underwear want.

In another café of 600 cubic meters the number of bacteria rose from 12,000 to 29,000 after the fan was working for one hour. In every instance, in fact, the number of bacteria per cubic meter was doubled, or even quadrupled. As the authors point out, with these facts such appliances cannot but be regarded as dangerous and detrimental to the public health."

To Obtain Real Rest.

For a long time the pedagogue believed that muscular effort was the best recreation after the intellectual work of the school child. Nowadays we know that the opposite is true. Physical exercise demands the energies of the same brain which learns the school lesson and the fatigued brain becomes still more strained if its energies are tapped for a new activity. There is only one source of restitution of used-up brain energy, and that is rest and sleep, together with fresh air and good nourishment.

No less doubtful in their final effectiveness are the other popular remedies for the nerve troubles of our time. It is certainly no gain that the headache powders and the sleeping drugs belong to the equipment of every fashionable woman, and that they are sold over the counter of the soda fountain. A passing discomfort is too often removed at the expense of really healthy nerves. Still worse is the psychotherapy of dilettanti. Most of that which the faith healers and mind curists and Christian Scientists and their kin are performing is very well meant and faithfully carried out, but splendidly arranged to create at least mild hysteria in weak nervous systems.—[Metropolitan Magazine.

Animals Predict Earthquakes.

Animals predict earthquakes. Domestic animals seem to be especially susceptible to the approach of the quake. In 1825, in Chile, every dog fled from the city before the inhabitants perceived the faintest hint of the impending catastrophe. In 1867, in Java, immediately before the earthquake, every rooster crowded shrilly and left the doomed town. In 1868, in the city of Iquique, the terrific disaster was announced many hours beforehand by great swarms of screaming gulls and other sea birds which flew inland. On the Orinoco crocodiles invariably leave the river on the imminence of earthquake.

Five days before the earthquake that destroyed Elike, in 373 B. C., it is said to have driven to the surface of the earth mice, moles, weasels, and serpents that nest underground. Before the Sicilian earthquake of 1783 animals came to the surface as well as various creatures of the sea, especially fish, in stupendous numbers, among them also such as are found only in the greatest depths of the water. The unrest of the animals also heralded the coming of the recent Sicily and Calabria seismic disasters.

The basis of this remarkable instinct of animals, reptiles, birds, and fish is held by many observers to be responsible for their early perception. Others attribute to these creatures an unknown sixth sense, in its way as enigmatic as the sense of locality in many animals. Others say it is the sense of hearing or their sensibility to agitation that enables animals to notice the effect of the occurrences in the interior of the earth long before mankind with coarser senses can perceive it.—[Chicago Tribune.

An Exceptional Gentleman.

"I concede to you," said a man in a discussion on American politeness, "that the Southern man is a gentleman, but that is all."

"But I know the Western man is," replied his friend. "Take President Taft; he is from the West, and I say he is an exceptional gentleman."

"Exceptional," snorted the man. "How can he be an exceptional gentleman?"

"Well," sauvely replied the friend, "I saw President Taft recently get up and give his seat to three ladies."

Meeting at Night.

The gray sea, and the long black land,
And the yellow half-moon large and low,
And the startled little waves, that leap
In fiery ringlets from their sleep
As I gain the cove with pushing prow,
And quench its speed in the slushy sand.

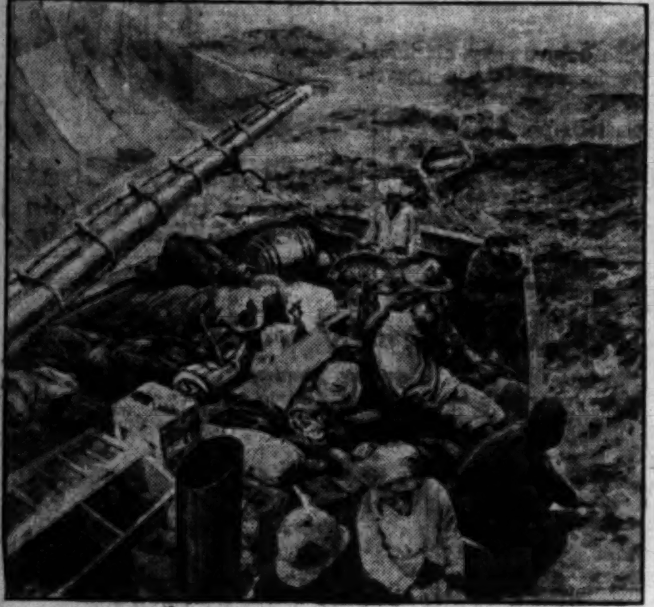
Then a mile of warm, sea-scented beach,
Three fields to cross, till a farm appears;
A tap at the pane, the quick, sharp scratch,
And blue spurt, of a lighted match;
And a voice less loud, though its joys and fears,
Than the two hearts beating each to each.

—[Robert Browning.

Pictures by the Painters' Club.

The second annual exhibition of the Los Angeles Painters' Club (a misnomer, by the way, as there are many good painters in Los Angeles who do not belong to it, and some painters who do belong live out of town,) opened last Monday in the Blanchard gallery, to continue for two weeks. There are almost a hundred pictures in oils and water colors, the work of twenty painters.

Assuredly, the Painters' Club is demonstrating the wisdom of its founders and its reason for being. It was begun as an association of men painters, its objects being fellowship and united criticism of the work of the members as it was brought in to the monthly meetings. These friendly confabs over the sketches have produced excellent results, for the present exhibition is far above that of last year in general merit.



Campers Returning from San Clemente.
From a water color by Arthur B. Dodge.

The wisdom of having no jury, however, may be questioned when the club grows in strength and usefulness. The various members, it appears, are permitted to exhibit any pictures they please—but (and this is important) other members may reason with them as to the advisability of showing any canvas submitted. The members thus approached may then go ahead at their own discretion. If this rule of friendliness was acted upon before the second annual exhibition opened, some of the exhibitors must have seized the bit between their own teeth and rushed madly to their own destruction. For a few of the pictures shown could not possibly have passed any jury outside a lunatic asylum.

I shall briefly touch upon only half of the pictures this week. The rest must remain over till next Sunday. As the catalogue is printed with the names of the exhibitors in alphabetical array, I, too, will begin with the A, B, C's.

Charles Percy Austin is represented by three small canvases. By far the best of these is his quaintly named study of a boy's head, "The Stray Lock," cool in color and quiet in treatment, its brush-work and flesh tints reminding one of portraits by Velasquez. "Avalon" strikes me as being a trifle heavy, notwithstanding its the suggestion of twilight dusk and Mr. Austin's idea of "Pebbly Beach, Catalina," is a bar of very pink paint, between two other bars of very blue paint—though, to be sure, there is lovely color in all three bars.

Franz A. Bischoff's ambition to become known as a painter of landscapes and marines, rather than of a painter of beautiful keramics, is amply justified in the present exhibition. His "Tide Coming In" is exquisite in color and feeling, and is also handled with remarkable dexterity. "Evening Glow," also a charming sea picture, shows more of the evening light on the water than on the shore, the latter suggesting red rather than sunlit soil. Mr. Bischoff's two landscapes are also good, especially "On the Bank of the Arroyo," and he exhibits a large and brilliantly painted study of roses.

Four of Carl Oscar Borg's Guatemala sketches are shown. Two of them were reproduced in these columns last Sunday, when I gave an appreciation of Mr. Borg's work. The other three, "La Puerta de Santa Clara, "La Plaza de Antigua," "On the Chapel Steps," are equally brilliant examples of this artist's work, and when compared with his paintings of last year, show his phenomenal progress.

The six studies of horses and dogs, in oils and water colors, by Harry Lewis Bailey offer a refreshing change from the usual pictures seen in Los Angeles galleries, where landscapes are sometimes entirely in evidence. Mr. Bailey has a sympathetic understanding of animal life; its picturesque possibilities make a strong appeal to him. The best of the present pictures, to my mind, are "Noon Hour" and "Stableward," though the study of a white dog, "A Little Beggar," has the charm of humorous suggestion.

A night effect of unusual beauty and interest is Frank Coburn's "Lights of Hope," showing the Y.M.C.A. building in the distance, all its cheerful windows illuminated. The title of the picture is perhaps a trifle fantastic, for the Y.M.C.A. is an association, not a refuge. Mr. Coburn shows four other smaller canvases, "Fishermen's Huts, San Pedro," "Summer Clouds," etc., none of which is as good as the first mentioned.

Val Costello has three careful, well studied scenes from nature: David Dunn, four; the best being "In Santa Anita Cañon;" Frank Elwyn Evans, three, one of which, "A Glimpse Through the Trees," is rather incomprehensible to me, I must confess. B. Hartley shows some interesting studies of Africa, where he once lived as a missionary, "A Quiet Morning at Cavalla," "Sunset During the Harmattan Winds," "Moonlight on the Cavalla River," etc.

Arthur B. Dodge's "Cabin in Arroyo Seco" is well painted and beautifully drawn. This artist also shows a number of water colors, one, large one, "Campers Returning from San Clemente," being especially interesting. Mr. Dodge was himself one of the campers, and the sketches for the picture were made on the boat last summer.

Only two small canvases from the brush of Albert Clinton Conner are exhibited, but both are among his best. "The Mesa Meadow," has exquisite silvery grays. "Along the Beach," shows a genuine feeling for the sea, and the placid ocean with its long curving wave is fine and true in drawing.

Other exhibitors (they will be noticed at greater length next week) are: Martin J. Jackson, Aaron E. Kilpatrick, Frank R. Liddell, Hanson Puthuff, Arion Putnam, Charles A. Rogers, W. A. Sharp, J. W. Theiss and William Wendt.

By the Wachhtels.

None among our landscape painters have a more firmly established reputation for excellent work, always to be depended on, than Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, and the announcement of another exhibition of canvases from their brushes is always made with pleasure by the art reviewer and received with equal pleasure by the public. For we know that we shall not be disappointed—that their work of this year will reach, and probably pass, the high standard of that shown last year.

During the past summer they did not go far afield for their subjects, finding plenty of material to their taste within a short distance of Los Angeles. That this material brought rich results goes almost without question, so accustomed are we to the thought that these two painters always know exactly what they are about.

The output for the summer's work is eight new pictures to the credit of each new artist—not counting, of course, the numerous sketches made for purposes of study. Mr. Wachtel's are in oils, as heretofore. Mrs. Wachtel's are in water colors a medium which she handles with a dexterity and sureness of touch, and also with a solidity, that place her in a class almost by herself.

Two large and important canvases by Elmer Wachtel, "The Majesty of the Hills," and "The Land of Golden Light," painted last year, are also shown in the studio on West Avenue 43. These canvases are among the best he has done—truly noble examples of landscape painting.

Among the newer canvases, "October Afternoon," takes an important place. It gives us the russets of autumn, leading up to the tender lavender of distant mountains. The sky is a deep blue, and there are strongly painted sycamores in the foreground. "The Arroyo Seco" gives us a magnificent view from a hill covered with autumnal bushes. The sky is a greenish gray, with pink clouds floating over blue mountain ranges. Below we see the long, graceful lines of the dry arroyo.

"Above the Valley" is a scene overlooking the long reaches of the San Bernardino Valley. The time is afternoon, with a deep shadow creeping over the foreground. To the right is a scrubby live oak. "Among the Foothills," also painted from sketches made in the San Bernardino Valley, has a fine decorative quality. It has a greenish sky with clouds, and its scrubby trees are arranged most effectively. "Early Evening, Midsummer," has a wonderfully beautiful metallic luster. It shimmers with the coolness of evening. Its spirit is that of great traquillity.

"Sunset Clouds" is without doubt one of the loveliest pictures that Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel has yet painted. There are trees to the right, over a valley in tones of melting claret color. In the sky are glowing sunset clouds. The foreground is of broken browns and greens. Another charming picture is "San Bernardino Valley," sparkling with light, color and vitality. It shows us a dreaming, sunlit valley, with a range of mountains in the distance. The sycamore saplings in the foreground are very crisply handled.

"Oaks, Matilija Cañon," shows us gnarled and twisted oaks, hoary with age. Below them the sunlight lies warm and golden, creeping over white rocks and withered weeds. The mountains shine blue far away. "Sunset in the Cañon" looks into the flaming depths of a yellow sunset sky. To the left a phalanx of hills fades away into the gold. The foreground shows boulders and a loitering summer stream. In tone the picture is very beautiful. Another picture, charming in tone and color, is "Tranquil Evening," giving us the "daffodil sky" of sunset. Pearly gray mists float at the base of mountains quiet in their conscious majesty.

These notable pictures will be shown every Sunday afternoon at thestudio of their painters.

ART NOTES.

The Painters' Club gave a perchment certificate and a blue ribbon to the painter of the "best" picture exhibited at its second annual exhibition; a red ribbon to the painter of the "best" landscape; a white ribbon to the painter of the "best" figure painting. These presentations are contrary to the spirit and genius of the club, and should not have been made—more especially as the diploma of honor was given by Martin J. Jackson, who is himself a member of the club. Has the Painters' Club become a mutual admiration society? The diploma went to Carl Oscar Borg for his "La Puerta de Santa Clara;" the red ribbon to Hanson Puthuff for his "Oaks and Poppies;" the white ribbon to Arion Putnam for his "Pima Indian Basket Maker." William Wendt was out of the running, because, forsooth! he had already won honors elsewhere.

An exhibition of water-color flower studies from the brush of Susie May Berry Bando will be held at the Kanst gallery, beginning tomorrow and continuing to the 20th of the month. There will be a reception tomorrow afternoon and evening. On Tuesday the gallery will be open to the public. Thirty-seven pictures will be shown. Mrs. Bando has painted some excellent studies of roses, violets, chrysanthemums, dahlias, etc., and her exhibition promises to be a very interesting one. All the paintings are of large size. They will be given more extended notice in next Sunday's Art and Artists.

Rob Wagner, the portrait painter, who has been living in Santa Barbara for the last two years, has just come to Los Angeles and will remain here permanently. Mr. Wagner's excellent work as a painter is well remembered by us, for the exhibition he held at the Steckel gallery two years ago excited much favorable notice. The artist has taken the studio on Figueroa street, near Orange, formerly occupied by Alexander Stirling Calder, the sculptor. Here he will open tomorrow a school of drawing and painting from life, giving special attention to painting. We are to be congratulated in having Mr. Wagner permanently among us, for he is one of the "strong" men among painters.

KREISLER STILL KING.

Great Violinist Hailed as Peerless by New York Critics on Return to America.

Fritz Kreisler took New Yorkers to the summits of the region of art in his recital at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, October 23. One depends upon the art of Kreisler as upon the rising and setting of the sun. He is as certain to reveal ideal grace and beauty and passion through the medium of his violin as the light is to appear in the East at dawn. Such breadth and power as his, few artists ever attain, says Musical America. One rests against his art with the same sense of happy security that one feels in resting in the waters of the sea or against the sustaining pressure of the wind. It is a rare and happy combination of classic tradition and temperament which Kreisler possesses.

His programme was archaic, but infused throughout, as Kreisler presented it, with a warmth and a charm which made it seem modern enough to the artist's hearers. It is interesting to note the peculiar manner in which Kreisler plays in different degrees of energization. He is quietness itself in slow movements, but in striking into a more energetic movement he can be perceived to go through a sudden process akin to that by which an automobilist throws in a higher gear. On such planes of higher energization, Kreisler plays with all his muscles from his heels to his head—there is none of him that does not participate in the music. This is probably equally true of his playing in quieter moods also, although manifested in a less visible manner.

He began the programme with a sonata in D major by Handel and made one feel his perfect mastery of the Handel tradition. A prelude and allegro by Pugnani (1731-1798,) with which he followed the sonata, proved to be a most wonderful and highly imaginative work. Among the early Italian works commonly heard, all of which are apt to have a certain general character, one from time to time hears a work that gives a higher revelation of poetic imagination, and this work proved to be of such a sort. The prelude particularly struck one as a work of remarkable genius. This work made an extraordinary technical demand upon the player, which was met with his customary ease. Next came a concerto by Viotti, the man who had much to do with the establishing of the concerto form—which would be regarded by concert-haters as a doubtful honor. This work is not greatly poetic, but fresh and vigorous, and having real musical quality. It is quite conventional in imaginative quality, but holds together well as a composition. Viotti was a highly-gifted man, although scarcely a genius, except, perhaps, in his capacity as a pioneer of form. There are no words with which to follow Kreisler's performance of the work. It was a perfect revelation of perfect art. There was some heavenly double-stopping in the cadenzo of the adagio.

MUSIC.

ist, is, by some, held next to Maud Powell—which is, indeed, a compliment.

The first monthly recital of Pietro Buzzi's studio season for this year will be given at his school, No. 668 South Alvarado street, on Tuesday evening.

Participants in the programme will include Mr. Pedegrift, Mrs. Keeler and the Misses Eble, Capron, Kelso, Gonsales, Lynn, Godsey and Talamantes.

The Lyric Club will give the first concert of its season December 3 at Simpson Auditorium. Among the numbers to be presented is Henry Hadley's "Legend of Japan," in which principal parts will be taken by Miss Helen Axe Brown and Miss Maude H. Miller. Harry Girard will be the soloist of the evening.

Miss Marie Elliott, assisted by Mrs. Beatrice Hubbell Plummer and Mrs. Harry Little, gave an interesting interpretative lecture on music at the Alexandria Hotel October 31.

There will be six of these talks, the second being given at the Alexandria Saturday morning, November 13. At this talk, Miss Elliott will take up the percussion instruments of the orchestra, and one number of the first Symphony programme. Mrs. Elsa Russell Duncan and Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson will assist.

Moore's Band, at Eastlake today, will present a programme, including Barton's "The Plutocrat March," Strauss's "Southern Roses" waltz, Scharwenka's Polish Dance No. 1, a selection from Donizetti's "Lucretia Borgia," Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," and Boccalari's "The Coquette."

The Woman or the Tide.

"It was a mistake," said a beach city Mayor, discussing a recent governmental difficulty. "These people failed to understand the difficulty, just as a man from Okoboji, in Iowa, failed last week to understand the tides.

"This man sat on the beach, close to the water, munching a bag of peanuts. A fat lady, one of the end of the season bathers, gamboled in the waves near him. She shrieked, hopped up and down, and flapped about with arms and legs, and meanwhile the waves crept nearer and nearer the Okoboji peanut-eater.

"He regarded the advancing water sternly. All of a sudden a stronger wave than usual swept up the beach, and—splash—the man was dashed with spray.

"'Hi!' he shouted, scowling blackly at the happy bather, "hi, fatty! Stop that there bobbin' about before ye drown a feller, will ye?'"—[Minneapolis Journal.

The Quickest and Simplest Cough Cure.

Better than all the cough medicines you could buy, and far less expensive, is a simple remedy that you can make at home in five minutes. A whole pint of it—enough to last a family a long time—costs only 54c. It is pleasant to take—children like it.

It will usually conquer a deep-seated cough in 24 hours. Two or three doses overcome an ordinary cough: It is also splendid for colds, bronchitis, incipient lung trouble, whooping cough, etc.

Granulated Sugar Syrup......13½ oz.
Pinex .... 2½ oz.

Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add ½ pint of warm water and stir about 2 minutes. Put the 2½ ozs. Pinex in a pint bottle and fill up with the syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Granulated Sugar Syrup is a simple but excellent sedative. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract, and is rich in all the medicinal elements of the pine. None of the weaker pine preparations compare with the real Pinex itself. All druggists have it, or will get it if requested.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.

ent on the occasion, and when the company rose remonstrated with her on her rashness in making public the details of a piece for which as yet no contract had been signed. When, later in the day, Mrs. Campbell, acting upon Bancroft's advice, telegraphed to the author saying that she considered the matter settled she learned to her surprise that a message had been received by him half an hour previously from Dion Boucicault, on behalf of Frohman, saying that he would take the piece on the writer's own terms. That is Mrs. Campbell's story, to the correctness of which she is prepared to make an affidavit. From what she tells me of the play, I am not surprised that she is rather sore at losing it, for, according to her, it gives the principal character the fullest scope for the display of every kind of emotion, from the deepest despair to the most extravagant joy. All which will be duly proved when we see the work at the Globe, with Lena Ashwell in the title role.

I am afraid it would be rash to predict for "Little Damozel," the piece in which Charles Hawtrey made his reappearance at Wyndham's, two days ago, any great measure of prosperity. There is a lot of promising stuff in the work which is by a new writer, Monckton Hoffe. Much of the dialogue is quite witty, and reveals a man of observation and a keen sense of character. But the story has no great pretensions to novelty, and, still worse, it passes so rapidly from farce to emotional drama as to produce a really disconcerting effect upon the mind of the listener. Even more to the point is the fact that the character played by Hawtrey is very far from being a Hawtrey part, or if the truth must be told, he failed to be effective just at the moment when most was demanded of him. After all, his warmest admirer could hardly expect he would score in a scene requiring the feeling and the earnestness of a George Alexander or a Lewis Waller. May Blayney, too, although to be praised highly for her sincerity and her girlish buoyancy, was, only too manifestly overweighted in the role of the heroine. The piece was received in a kindly spirit, but the general impression seemed to be that it contrived just to miss the mark.

DOOM OF THE BRIDESMAID AT ENGLISH SOCIETY WEDDINGS

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Prospective bridegrooms in England are determined to dispense with the services of bridesmaids at their weddings. This is because the bevy of gaily-attired maidens, so long a feature of smart marriages, has become too expensive a luxury.

American brides married here have insisted that their twelve attendants shall each be presented by the bridegroom with a diamond brooch costing anything from $250 upwards or a jeweled bangle of the same value. In several instances American brides have set up a precedent themselves by bestowing gifts on their "maids." The weddings of Mrs. John Ward, daughter of the American Ambassador, and of Mrs. John Ford and her sister, Mrs. Walter Burns, are cases where this was done.

The result is that smart society bridesmaids have become most exacting and fastidious in regard to the gifts tendered for their services. On all sides it is regretted that in future many smart weddings will be shorn of their picturesqueness through the absence of the train of quaintly-garbed damsels and the modern girl done out of a role she never tired of playing. But she has to thank only herself for this state of affairs. The bridegroom of today, even when he is a rich man, resents signing checks to the tune of $2500 or $5000 for gifts to a troop of young women of whom he frequently knows little. He is putting his foot down in good solid English fashion and says he will stand no nonsense and won't be wheedled into throwing away his money.

Not long ago a prospective bride demanded a check from her Scotch fiancé for a large sum for gifts she had chosen that morning for a dozen bridesmaids

"You must think I get my money very easily," he told her, "to throw it away on trash of that kind. I saw very nice hatpins at 36 cents apiece this morning up in Regent street. Give them each one of those from me if you like and here's a check for $5."

"You are taking leave of your senses," she replied. "Do you want all Mayfair to laugh at us."

"I care nothing about Mayfair," he responded, "but I care a deuce of a lot for my money."

After the wedding of a well-known baronet a few months ago, the bridegroom's presents were returned by the bridesmaids. The gifts tendered were silver gilt bags of very beautiful workmanship. When sending them back the principal bridesmaid replied for the lot, "that it was impossible they could think of wearing silver gilt articles."

The girls were under the impression that the man would have these bags exchanged for eighteen-carat gold ones. But they made a mistake. He took the twelve bags to the shop where they had been purchased and exchanged them for a set of silver entree dishes for his wife, chuckling to himself all the time he was ordering.

In the immediate past bridesmaids have also acquired the habit of sending a round robin to prospective bridegrooms explaining what they would like given them. Invariably they have wanted presents which only a millionaire could afford to offer. When he has not risen to the occasion and tendered what was literally demanded he has been pronounced "mean," "shabby" and a "skin-flint." In cases where this round robin fell into the hands of an American bridegroom the demands were always forthcoming. English women know that American men rarely refuse a woman anything. But there is no such chivalry as this among men on this side. Generous as they may be to their own immediate womenkind, they will not spend money lavishly on mere acquaintances. One of these days the maid of honor will be the only attendant at smart weddings.

OLD STOCKINGS FOR SHODDY.

The American Article in Good Demand Because Less Worn Than Those of Europe.

[Consular Reports:] While there are no statistics relating to the importations of American old black stockings into Europe, Consul-General Robert P. Skinner of Hamburg says that it is supposed that 4000 to 5000 tons are received annually. He writes concerning this trade:

The chief consuming market is Germany, and, next in order, Austria and Russia. Old black stockings are free of duty in Germany and Austria, but are taxed at 3.5 rubles per pood (equivalent to about 5⅛ cents per pound) in Russia. American black stockings are much preferred to European stockings, as they are of softer and finer make and are very little darned or mended. European importers have discovered that the American people do not wear their stockings as long or as savingly as Europeans, and that when a hole is discovered they are inclined to throw them away. Thus when stockings of this character reach the shoddy manufacturer they furnish a better and longer staple than can be obtained from European stockings. Moreover, European stockings, usually harder, are also very often mercerized and made harder still, so that they must be pulled several times, a process which reduces the length of the staple.

American goods command from 25 to 30 per cent. more than others, are shipped to Europe in pressed bales, and are re-sorted upon arrival in Hamburg for the exclusion of colored stockings and black stockings with white heels. When the latter are found the heels and tips are cut off so that only the black portions remain. The chief reason for the extensive use of black stockings is that the resulting shoddy is black and does not need to be redyed.

OUR EACH-AND-ALL GROUP—Sunshine Society—With The Young

FROM THE PRESIDENT.

An Appeal for Systematic and Energetic Work by Members of Each and All Society.

Dear girls of the Each and All Society and other girls, who wish to become members: Your general officers and chairmen need your help to place this organization in the front rank in its work for the good of humanity. Any one may become a member who will accept our motto and take our pledge. Send your name to the president of the Each and All Society, care of the secretary, Mrs. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles, Cal., and a pledge and membership card will be sent to you.

Each old member and each new one are invited to send a message to the president at the above address. You are also at liberty to send articles for this department, signing your letter with pen name, but remembering to give your name and address, also, for the president's information. Send this message by the 10th of each month. Our membership has increased 300 per cent. since our annual meeting. Remember that this organization has been working under many difficulties. We have many calls for assistance that, from their nature, we cannot turn over to a cold world. A few extra dollars in our treasury would help many over difficulties. Those who are willing to help by donations may send these in care of Mrs. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles.

Our girls will be glad to know that Mrs. Marshall has taken charge of our art and crafts exhibit at No. 819 South Spring street. Members of this society may place articles in her care to sell or exchange. This is a fine opportunity to dispose of the handicraft and art work which our girls are adepts at making.

As our organization is for mutual help and encouragement, members are requested to send their business cards to the above address, with a note to Mrs. Marshall. Their cards will be placed in a business directory.

Girls, I want to whisper a little secret to you, and in your postal card messages, which you will send me by the 10th of the month, I wonder if you will not write me that you coincide with my views on the subject. The secret is this: I am very weary of "presidenting" this society without two most essential Ms. If each of you and your friends will patronize the Arts and Crafts Chapter, and the musical and dramatic entertainments given under the auspices of the Each and All Society, there will be one way to supply one "M," and that is money. If you are willing that your husbands and your son and your brothers should become honorary members of our society, with yearly dues that each may determine for himself, paid in United States currency, as well as the added deed of kindness each day, that will of itself give us both "Ms"—men and money. Remember, that all money should be made payable to the financial secretary, Mrs. W. E. Wells, and sent in care of the recording secretary, Mrs. Lucy Mitchell. Let me know your views on this subject, so that it may become a settled fact by the December meeting. I know this is a weighty question, but as honorary members, they will have only the right of paying dues, receiving invitations to social entertainments, the benefits of such literary chapter work as the chairmen can accord to them, and thus prove blessings to themselves and the organization. What say you, girls? Let me know.

I wish to ask the regular contributors to this department to continue to send their articles directly to the editor of the Each and All department. Members and others who have not been regular contributors should sign their articles with their pen name, and send their correct address by mail to the president of the Each and All Society, care of Mrs. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles. Please write plainly on one side of the paper only, clearly, leaving a two-inch margin, so that the article may be easily edited.

Those who wish to join this society are instructed to apply to the president for membership. A card will be sent, which will entitle the holder to give and receive the benefits of the society. Be sure to always sign your name and address, as well as your pen name with contributions for this department.

These suggestions are given with the expectation that they will be complied with, in order that the general officers' duties may be made less difficult, and they will have more time for chapter work. For information regarding any chapter work, write to the president. Chairmen of chapters are requested to send such information of members enrolled and work accomplished by the 10th of each month as will enable the president to be advised and in touch with the work. If we work according to a plan, we will accomplish something.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

Notice of Meeting.

The general meeting of the Each and All will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. in Mammoth Hall, No. 517 South Broadway. After a short business session there will be an intermission for sociability and getting acquainted. A very interesting programme is to follow, consisting of music, vocal and instrumental, by Mrs. Long, Mrs. Payne and others. Mrs. Wells will give a reading, and Mrs. Fitzgerald an original parody. It is hoped that every resident member will come and bring a friend.

Stray Thoughts.

E. B., an Each and All girl, contributes the following to this department:

As the sunshine is to the earth, so are kind words to the soul.

When the gods open the gates of opportunity, why not enter in?

The one who starts first in the race is not always the winner.

Determination is realization.

Trials are but blessings clothed in garments of somber hue.

Faith is the talisman of eternal happiness.

Regrets enslave us, action releases us.

To find the purest gold we must dig deep.

D. S. Chapter Meeting.

The Domestic Science Chapter will meet with Mrs. William Cort, No. 607 West Forty-fifth street, Friday, November 12, 2 p.m. Members are requested to bring practical recipes, and practical hints on economical short cuts in housekeeping.

SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

Change of Meeting Place—New Branch at Alhambra—Donations Asked for Indians.

State headquarters with the State organizer and president of the Los Angeles Branch, Mrs. William Wallace McLeod, No. 403 South Garfield avenue, Alhambra.

Los Angeles headquarters for donations, with Mrs. McKinney, No. 2303 Budlong avenue. Meetings on the first Thursday of each month, at 2:30 p.m., at the residence of Mrs. Grace Geldreich, No. 438 Westlake avenue.

MOTTO.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on!
'Twas not given for you alone,
Pass it on!
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe a mother's tears,
'Till in Heaven the deed appears,
Pass it on!"

Still another Sunshine branch has been organized in California. In Alhambra ten bright young girls, members of Mrs. John A. Wilferth's class in the Presbyterian Sunday-school, met at the home of their teacher on Tuesday evening last, and with the assistance of the State organizer, formed what they voted to call, "The Alhambra Happiness Branch." The name just suits its membership, which is made up of youth, enthusiasm and a strong desire to spread happiness. The branch will hold its meetings on the second Saturday afternoon of each month. Frieda Martens of Hidalgo avenue will be the hostess at the meeting on the 13th inst., at which time committees for the year will be appointed, and Christmas preparations will take the form of dressing dolls. The girls expect to take orders in Alhambra for the Sunshine Year Book, published by the Los Angeles branch. They are all proud to wear the Sunshine pin, and older Sunshiners expect great things of them in the future. The list of officers and members is as follows: Bertha McKay, president; Marjoy Young, vice-president; Rena McPherson, secretary; Frieda Martens, treasurer; Verna Lamb, Agnes Anderson, Gladys Graffn, Marion Canfield, Helen Clapp and Esther Eckholm. Mrs. Wilferth will act as director.

Corona, Cal., will soon have a branch. Some day the dream of Los Angeles Sunshiners, will be realized, and Sunshine branches will be scattered all over our beautiful State, from north to south.

WHERE TO SEND THANKSGIVING POSTALS.

Mrs. C. H. James, No. 105 Essex avenue, Gloucester, Mass., is an invalid who cannot move. Postals mean "Sunshine" to her.

Mrs. E. Alley of Crescent, Okla., is a sickly woman with more than her share of trouble. Mrs. Alden, president-general, says: "Please don't forget to send a greeting to brighten her sad life."

Leona Adams, Paris, Mo., R.F.D. No. 4, is an afflicted child, who has not been in school for several years. Any kind of "Sunshine" will be welcomed for her.

Mrs. Edward Hitchcock, East Bradford, McKean county, Pa., is an invalid. She is devotedly cared for by her 12-year-old daughter. This little girl's heart longs for some of the pretty hair-ribbons and fixings she sees other children wear. Won't you give her a pleasant surprise? Also put her on your Christmas list.

The Four-Score branch has members all over the country, and is the branch for which our president-general has the tenderest interests. The name shows what it is. Its members are all "young"—80 years and over. Appended is a list of some members who will have birthdays, perhaps their last on earth, this month. Send them a word of cheery greeting, as they turn another milestone on life's journey.

November 12—Mrs. W. Edgar, Rahway, N. J., 85 years; Mrs. Martha Downs, Home for the Friendless, No. 1500 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., 83 years.

LOS ANGELES BRANCH MEETING.

The November meeting of the Los Angeles Branch of the International Sunshine Society was held in the committee room of the Chamber of Commerce, and was largely attended. For six months the members have enjoyed and appreciated the courtesy of the Chamber of Commerce in giving them the use of this room. But in the future the monthly meetings will be held with Mrs. Grace Geldreich, at her spacious home, No. 438 South Westlake avenue, on the first Thursday of the month, it being thought best to hold the meetings at a private home.

In response to a request from several gentlemen interested in "Sunshine," for membership, it was moved and seconded that the Los Angeles branch have an honorary membership list of their gentlemen friends. After a lively discussion the motion was unanimously passed with great enthusiasm. Honorary members will be expected to pay their dues in deeds of sunshine, the same as regular members. They will not be expected to attend meetings, though if it should ever be their pleasure to do so they will be sure of a welcome.

The Flower Committee chairman reported the giving of fifty-eight bouquets the past month, to "shut-ins" and strangers.

The year-book chairman gave a splendid report, showing the sales to be brisk, with a prospect of the record being broken as the holidays approach. She handed in over $35 from year-book sales.

The donation of a baby buggy was reported. This will be loaned the same as the wheel chairs, and any mother desiring the use of it, can secure it by communicating with headquarters.

The hospitality chairman is making arrangements for a November Sunshine party.

With deep regrets the members of the branch learned of the sudden death in Hillside, Ariz., of Mrs. G. H. Spencer, a former Sunshine member. Mrs. Spencer had never lost her interest in the Sunshine work, and only a week before her death sent a generous denotion towards the Christmas work.

Miss Lulu A. Crawford, chairman of the Indian Box Committee, is to have as her assistants, Mrs. H. B. McKinney, Mrs. Grace Geldreich and Miss May Flint. The box planned is to go to the Navajo Indians near Needles, for Christmas, and must be sent this month. There are about one hundred old and needy Indians, who will be remembered. Readers of The Times who wish to take part in the work are requested to send donations to Miss Crawford, No. 1645 Orange street, as soon as possible. Bright calicoes, large shirtwaists, blankets, handkerchiefs and beads, are especially asked for, but anything will be gratefully received. Please look through your treasure store and see what you can spare for these needy ones. Your own Thanksgiving will be the happier.

"For the heart grows rich in giving,
All its wealth is living grain.
Seeds which mildew in the garner,
Scattered, fill with gold the plain."

Up and Be Doing.

Up and be doing!
Nor wait for tomorrow;
Never tomorrow
May come to your hand;
Who waits for its advent
May find to his sorrow
That God shall tonight
His one talent demand.

Be doing! there's never
A lack of employment;
The harvest is white,
But the toilers are few;
Life's sweetest and purest
And noblest enjoyment
Is doing what heaven
Has given to do.

Oh, up and be doing!
The duties lie near you;
Though humble the labor,
Work, WORK with a will;
God's voice in the heart
Will be music to cheer you,
God's smile will be sunshine,
Your bosom to fill.

No toil is too lowly,
If rendered to heaven;
It may not be noted
By angels above;
No service so simple,
If faithfully given,
That God will not stoop
To reward it with love.

Though humble the service,
The wild bird, while singing,
Is pleasing his God
In the song that he trills;
The violet, when from
The greensward upspringing,
In smiles and in perfume,
Its duty fulfills.

So, a smile from your lips
For the poor who may need it,
A word of sweet hope
For the heart in despair,
A word of wise counsel
For him who may heed it,
Are fragrant to heaven
As the incense of prayer.

Then, up and be doing!
Nor wait for the morrow,
Nor long for great deeds;
Some little deeds do!
An angel to lighten
A babe's little sorrow,
Might well spread his wings
And come down from the blue.

Be doing! for brief
Is the hour here given
To mortals to toil
In a sin-clouded earth;
And many choice germs
Have been planted by heaven,
That wait for your sunlight
To bring them to birth.

A Kindly Offer.

"A Canadian Girl writes to ask the address of some "Shut-in" to whom she may send magazines.

"Although I am not a member of your society, yet I am very much interested in your good work, and I am trying to live up to your beautiful pledge by doing some little kindness every day in some little way. The reason I am writing to you today is to ask you to publish the address of some "Shut-in" to whom I could send the Woman's Home Companion every month. Would it not be a good plan for all readers of the Ladies' Home Journal and other magazines to get the name of some "Shut-in," and every month send it to her by mail, instead of throwing them away, as a great many do? It would give the shut-in something to look forward to, and would cost only a few cents, and the time. Some time ago I saw the address of an old lady in your page whose limbs were ossifying, and kept the paper, which mother, unfortunately, lost, so if it is not too late, I should like her address published again. Wishing you and all the members of the Each and All much success."

If you will send your name and address on stamped envelope to the president of the society, whose address is given elsewhere today, you will receive a membership card, and the address of a shut-in member.

The Business Woman.

If you asked the average business man, he would tell you the characteristics he most admired in a woman, socially speaking, are the ones he least desires in the business woman.

Now, for instances, the praises of the high-stepping, high-strung, sensitive woman have been sung from time immemorable. The traits possessed by the thoroughbred filly are just as charming in the young girl, when she is surrounded by all the conventions of an established social position.

The most "famous traits" have been of the Di Vernon mold. But would man care for a like disposition in a business woman?

As well expect a race horse to settle down to a steady job of "drawing the water wagon."

A sensitive nature is the last thing wanted in an office. The more quickly a business woman schools herself to the idea, she is a piece of machinery, as it were, the better are her chances of success.

A thin skinned, sensitive nature is certainly at a discount in the business world.

There are many men who are courteous, charming gentlemen when met in the social world, but who think nothing of the feelings of those who work for them.

Oftentimes it is not intentional discourteous treatment.

A man wrapped up in his business looks upon his various employés as so many cog wheels in the mechanism. He forgets that they are living pulsing beings and especially that they are women.

The less a woman calls up her womanly characteristics, that is the less she stands on "just being a woman," the better will she succeed in the business world.—[Unidentified.

A Plea for a Shower.

A little mother living away back in Canada, and who is making a brave fight trying to support her family of little ones, sends the following letter to the Each and All girls:

"Will you make room for a stranger, all the way from Canada? I was a member of our beloved club and now I want very much to be a member of the Los Angeles society. I would like to have some of you help me a little. I already have a few good friends in the society. I am a widow with four little girls. One has been very sick with heart disease for nearly a year. She is 7 years old. I wonder if some of you girls who have bright, healthy little children, and those who have none, but who love children, will give my little one a shower of mail? That is her chief pleasure, watching for the mail, and hoping that it will bring her something.

"She likes pieces for dolls' dresses, also scraps of ribbon or lace; and picture cards are always welcome, too. We live in the country some miles from the train, and do not have much to look forward to but our mail, so I hope the members will write to us.

"I try to sell Canadian views, and will be much pleased if the members will buy some from me. I also have a small library, and lend books. If you have a good story book that you have read and do not want, will you send it to me? I prefer second-hand books because of the duty. I hope you will not tire of me, but I wish so much to get a few friends that will be willing to help me over what looks like a pretty hard place. It takes ten or often twelve days for a letter to reach me, so please, do not wonder at any delay in answering letters.

WORKING BOYS' HOME.

A Jolly Halloween Party—How "Mother" Vance Governs the Boys by Love.

Probably the jolliest Halloween party of the season was the one given by the boys of the "Working Boys' Home," situated at Eleventh and Main streets.

The Home was fantastically decorated with numberless Japanese and Jack-o'-lanterns, and there was a "chamber of horrors," presided over by a gypsy sorceress, and guarded by a great black cat, with staring green eyes. The feature of the party was the burial of this same black cat, which was the emblem of the Black Cat Club, composed of boys of the Home, which has now been dissolved.

Young girls who are friends of the boys attended the party, and the affair was chaperoned by Mrs. L. M. Vance, who has established this home, for working boys who have no home of their own; Mrs. Vance herself puts it, "for boys who are up against it," who just need a little lift and help to start them going properly.

This home is a unique place, and wonderfully popular with the boys. Maybe its popularity is because it is ruled in such mother-like fashion by Mrs. Vance, who says she has always loved boys, and it maybe partly due to the fact that there aren't many rules to follow, established simply to pester a boy's head to remember. There are only three rules, but these three are strictly enforced, and the boys, it is reported, gladly remember them. Here are the rules: "No smoking. Respect must be shown to the ladies of the house. A bath once a week."

No boy has even been turned away from the doors of the Working Boys' Home. There are twenty-five now living there; ranging from 15 to 18 years of age. The boys who come to Mrs. Vance are those whom the State will no longer look after, being over the age limit, when they are charges of the State.

Every boy who comes to the home is given one week's board and lodging free, so that he may have a chance to look about for work. Mrs. Vance and her assistants also try to find him employment. If he has secured nothing at the end of the week, he must take one of the positions that has been secured for him through the home, even if it is not quite to his liking. This, however, is only temporary, merely to instill into his heart the desire to be self-sustaining and independent. In the meantime efforts are made to secure him more congenial work, this is generally accomplished within two or three weeks, and then he is happy.

Only $3.50 a week is charged the boys for room and board. This amount simply buys the food that is placed on the table, without taking the cook's salary, fuel, house rent or any of the other expenses of the house into account. These other expenses are met by voluntary donations made by those who are interested in the work.

All the boys call Mrs. Vance "Mother." The inspiration for this work, Mrs. Vance says, came to her through her own young son, who has passed away. He was the honor pupil of the Thirtieth-street school and head of the Self-government League there. Mrs. Vance could not bear to have the boys call her "Mother" for a long time after her own lad was laid away, but his loss has made her adopted boys even dearer to her, and she is now "Mother" to all of them.

Junior Hadley,

little son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Hadley of No. 2323 West Ninth street, who entertained with a Halloween party.

Mrs. Vance has adopted some methods in dealing with her boys that would be well for mothers of families to put into practice. One of her rules is never to scold; scolding, she says, only hardens a boy and makes him rebellious. Mrs. Vance knows that boys are full of pranks and mischief. She also knows that ill-natured and troublesome boys do exist, but she says that scolding never did a boy any good. She says she never orders or commands a boy to do this or that; she asks him to do what she would like—requests it as though it would be conferring a favor upon her, and this pleases them, and they are always ready and willing to serve her. She never criticises faults or belittles a boy for them, but she lets him know that she is pained if he has done a wrong act. She stands by her boys when they are in trouble, even if it is through some fault, but lets them understand they must manfully stand the consequences of it, while she sympathizes with them for the misfortune. Mrs. Vance takes all her meals with her boys, she at the head of the table with the boys gathered about her as a great family. She has their entire confidence, and so they are never shy or bashful with her. She takes all her boys on trust, and she says she has never had cause to regret it. No matter what their past or their trouble has been, it is all sponged away when they enter the Working Boys' Home. If the boy who applies wishes to tell this good mother all about himself at once, she attentively and sympathetically listens, but if he just asks her to take him in and trust him he is just as welcome as if he had the indorsement of the President of the United States. Mrs. Vance does not wish to have this home for her boys classed as an institution; she says she wishes to get it as far away as possible from the institution idea. It is a home, and the effort is made to have the boys feel as free and independent there as they would in their parents' home.

Every one knows that growing boys are apt to get a bit lazy once in a while, and would like to shirk work and all responsibility. Of course, there are boys of this class at the home, too, but a clever method is also used in dealing with these. Then there are the "Weary Willies," who would like to shirk work altogether if they only could, and there are the boys who pretend to get terribly sick when there is anything extra to do. Mrs. Vance has a separate and distinct way of dealing with all of these afflictions.

The boys who will not work to pay their board are obliged to sit at another table, and there is no second helping of food given to them, and no butter. Then they are supposed to help wash the dishes and wait on the other busy lads at table, who must hurry and be off to their work.

The boy who has been lively and well all day Sunday, but who gets conveniently sick when it is time to get him up for work on Monday morning, is permitted to stay in bed, but no breakfast is served to him, because folks who are sick must not be overfed. He is given some medicine and put on liquid diet. One day of this treatment in most cases effects a cure, and the patient is quite ready to go to work on Tuesday morning.

The boys are allowed to play a friendly game of cards at the home, and to sing and dance. Much of their time is spent reading. They may go and come as they please, for they are little citizens, and this fact is impressed upon them. Staying out late is discouraged, although not forbidden. Mrs. Vance never sleeps until she is sure all of her boys are in for the night. When she looks pale or tired the boys always notice it, and ask about her health. Then she tells them she is quite well, but probably a little tired because she did not get sufficient sleep during the night, for one of her boys was out later than usual and she was uneasy about him. This is the cure for late hours. All the other boys immediately ask what the name of the "feller" that stayed out so late that "Mother" did not get sufficient sleep. Of course, this is a little secret between "Mother" and the offender, whom she never gives away. The offense is scarcely ever committed twice by the same boy.

There are many little conveniences that are needed for the home, which Mrs. Vance is anxious to have installed. One of the most necessary is a set of lockers, so that the boys may have their little possessions in individual places and safe under lock and key. The funds of the home will not permit of this extravagance, however.

A Tiny Gymnast.

Junior H. Hadley, the little five-and-a-half-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Hadley of No. 2323 West Ninth street, entertained a number of his little friends with a merry Halloween party. The home was profusely decorated with novelties of the Halloween season, and Halloween games were played by the youngsters. The guests were presented with jack-o'-lantern pumpkins by the little host as favors of the party. Junior Hadley is one of the youngest gymnasts in the country. Standing on his head for several seconds is one of his favorite stunts, and he does the back somersault with ease and grace. He has a little trapeze of his own in the back yard, where he performs many original tricks. His ambition now is to have a real circus tent of his own, where he may hold shows and invite his little friends. The guests at the party were Bernice La Cann, Genevieve Lusher, Lillian Lusher and Willis Lusher.

Morris Milbank,

handsome little son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls Milbank, No. 615 Coronado street. Morris took one of the leading parts in the operetta, "Golden Thoughts," recently given at the Gamut Club.

along but a minute or two ago with such eager anticipation.

The recollection of another look on her face then came abruptly to him. It was the one that had been there when she stood on the quay while the ship slowly slid away from her. She did not wave a handkerchief; she just stood—watching.

"Gad!" he said, and flung his cigarette away.

Then, rapidly, decisively, he covered the intervening two hundred yards.

She was not standing at the dining-room window as he walked up the path, nor, though he searched the other windows hungrily, did he catch a glimpse of her.

It was not until he pressed the bell that he had a hot fear that it would be her mother he would see first. It was afternoon-tea time, and as likely as not there would be one or two lady visitors. A vivid mental picture of himself talking banalities to the said ladies on making a stumbling explanation of his own startling visit gave him another impulse—this time for flight.

But the door opened. The face of the servant was unfamiliar, and his heart sank. He became in an instant absolutely sure that something dreadful had happened during his absence.

"Is Miss ——— in?" he asked, with such voice and expression that the girl looked scared.

She was—and alone. The mistress had gone to make a call. His heart gave a great leap.

He gave his name, and was conducted to the drawing-room, the door of which was softly closed behind him.

Like a rock he stood, listening. He heard the girl going upstairs; a distant tap, a voice, then the sound of quick feet.

He dragged open the door, advanced a step, and waited, looking up.

She ran half-way down the stairs, paused, leaned over the banisters to look at him, at his straining eyes . . . then she ran the remainder.

She came round the corner at the bottom of the stairs, breathless; and her hands went out to him of themselves.

He took two strides and caught them.

"Oh!" he said.

PROFESSORS ARRESTED.

Two Members of Stanford Faculty Are Fined—"Gum Shoe" Detectives Make a Round-up.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 4.—The police force of Palo Alto, with the assistance of two "gum shoe" detectives imported from San Francisco, made a round-up yesterday, and in their net were gamblers, tobacco-store clerks and members of the Stanford faculty. Two professors were fined $10 each for riding bicycles on the sidewalk. Eight gamblers were caught in the act of plying their trade and placed in the city jail. Three cigar-store clerks were "nabbed" for selling tobacco to minors, and four men were arrested for selling liquor.

The citizens of the town, while pleased with the enforcement of the law, assert that the "gum shoes" are just as bad as anybody they arrested, and are dissatisfied with the means employed to land the law-breakers.

Miss Margaret L. Ozier, '10, of Los Angeles, has been chosen to play the leading part in "The Road to Yesterday," which is to be presented in the assembly hall by The Masquers, the 19th inst. E. Wilson, '11, and G. D. Workman, '13, of Los Angeles also are in the cast.

FRANCE OUR GRANDMOTHER.

Hon. H. Merou, French Consul-General at San Francisco, was the principal speaker at an assembly of the students today. He discoursed upon the similarity existing between France and this country in government, soil and productions, and advanced historical arguments to show that if England is the mother of the United States, France is its grandmother.

The Faculty Committee on Student Affairs today indefinitely suspended a student for cheating in an examination. The student's name was not made public.

J. R. Capabanca, the champion chess player of the United States, has been engaged to play a simultaneous match against several of the best Stanford men.

The professorship is filled annually by American scholars, and Prof. Fairclough's appointment is the first to fall to any man living west of the Mississippi River.

Prof. W. F. Durand, who, with Prof. H. J. Ryan, was appointed to a consulting board connected with the Los Angeles aqueduct, has been granted a leave of absence for one year, and will travel in Europe.

Fur Hats Are First
In Fashionable Millinery

And Broadway is first with variety and individuality of the most popular styles in fur hats, at prices that are out of all reason in comparison to the charm and distinctive styles they represent.

Few women will believe that such charming hats can be produced to sell at such inexpensive prices. It clearly demonstrates once more the small profit margin upon which Broadway millinery is based.

Conspicuous among the styles are exquisite lynx, coney, imitation mink and Belgian hare fur hats many plain, others trimmed with fur heads and velvet rosette. And they're priced as low as

Thanksgiving--Then Christmas

Doesn't that remind you that time is waning and that Christmas buying should be uppermost in your mind?

Christmas began in the store months and months ago when we started assembling from the markets of the world the merchandise that was to greet you on every hand when you are ready for holiday buying.

Stocks are filling in every day; carloads of merchandise are being unfolded as fast as an army of men can handle them. Toys and dolls in hundreds of cases. Novelties, holiday books and stationery. Newest of neck novelties and gloves, jewelry and silverware. If we could just invite the public to a daily trip to the receiving room and witness the veritable flood of merchandise that is coming forward day by day you'd realize better than we can tell you what this assembling of Christmas merchandise means.

Pyrography, metalography and art needlework of all kinds are represented now in their fullest assortments. Already wonderful activity is enjoyed in these sections. Begin your holiday buying now.

19-inch Taffetas, Messalines, Liberty Satin and Novelty Silks,

For a number of days we have been holding these silks in our possession awaiting the final outcome of a controversy over this great lot of silks, representing thousands of yards of the very staple and desirable messalines, taffetas, wash taffetas, liberty satins, fancy messalines and novelty silk. In the first place, they were bought for a big sale and much under their real value, but by a delay in the time of shipment and because we were already generously supplied in regular stock with plenty of similar quality, we were about to return them, and so advised the wholesaler.

The controversy closed a few days ago by the wholesaler allowing us every claim, and more, and this makes possible this sensational sale event.

Understand, they are not odds and ends or short lengths, but full pieces representing nearly every color of the rainbow.

To make the offering doubly strong, we've filled in here and there with lines from our own stock of similar grades.

We want to say that these silks ordinarily in full pieces, and a color range like this is seldom if ever obtainable at such a price.

Included you'll find such shades as cedar, copenhagen, old rose, myrtle, reseda, Atlantic, canary, silver, terra cotta, wistaria, apricot, blue, pink, jasper, amethyst, wine, cardinal, Alice, taupe, helio, white,

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 26 years.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. He read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Sembrich, Julia Marlowe, H. E. Huntington, Admiral Evans, Jefferson, Anna Held, Annie Besant, Joaquin Miller, etc. These are a few of the many NOTED PUBLIC personages and for this reason only are they here mentioned—all positively read by Prof. Althouse, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers; therefore beware of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, clairvoyants, etc.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.
PROF. ALTHOUSE, in September, 1908, PUBLICLY predicted—by the PLANETS—the election of TAFT and the defeat of BRYAN.
DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States."
PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."
MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."
DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR TYNDALL SAYS: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."
FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY."
LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "Your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY."
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.
HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Daily and evening Sunday 10 to 2.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

WANTED—THERE IS A FASCINATION about life at sea which last year caused 65 per cent. of the men with good records to re-enlist. Besides the material advantages offered, good pay, steady employment, they find Navy life more attractive than routine jobs ashore, because of variety of scene. The conditions on board a spick-and-span battleship are ideal for young men who are fond of the sea, and desire to travel. Navy training broadens them. Their games and recreations, healthy exercise and regular drills, develop quickness, sound health, and self-reliance.
The first four months after enlistment you get the benefit of free instruction at a Navy Training Station. If you have some trade partially learned you may enlist at better pay, perhaps go first to a Navy Trade School. Assurance of advancement as reward for good work. Costs you nothing to enlist. Apply at NAVY RECRUITING OFFICE, San Fernando Bldg., 4th and Main sts., Los Angeles, Cal. x7

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 26 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. He read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Sembrich, Julia Marlowe, H. E. Huntington, Admiral Evans, Jefferson, Anna Held, Annie Besant, Joaquin Miller, etc. These are a few of the many NOTED PUBLIC persons—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—all positively read by Prof. Althouse, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers; therefore beware of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, clairvoyants, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE, in September, 1908, PUBLICLY predicted—by the PLANETS—the election of TAFT and the defeat of BRYAN.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR TYNDALL SAYS: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY."

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Their games and recreations, healthy exercise and regular drills, develop quickness, sound health, and self-reliance.
The first four months after enlistment you get the benefit of free instruction at a Navy Training Station. Classified Liners.

THINGS ON WHEELS—
All Sorts.
AUTOMOBILES.

THERE ARE FIVE CLASSES
OF PEOPLE
FROM WHOM YOU CAN BUY CARS.

1. The user of a car, who is through with it.
2. The dealer, who has a car taken in trade.
3. The second-hand dealer, who does not overhaul his cars.
4. The trader, who is constantly making real estate exchanges.
5. THE AUTOMOBILE CLEARING HOUSE ASSOCIATION.

—1—

THE PRIVATE OWNER has all sorts of excuses for offering his car for sale, which would be unnecessary if it really were what he represented.

—2—

THE DEALER who has taken a car in trade is only interested in the sale of this particular car in the quickest possible time, and does not go to the expense of putting the car in good order.

—3—

THE DEALER in second-hand automobiles who does not overhaul his cars cannot know their actual condition, and the buyer has to pay for his mistakes.

—4—

THE TRADER who is constantly on the lookout for a sucker, advertising from various private boxes, giving no name or using a fictitious one, takes in trade any old junk and will make any representation necessary to sell.

—5—

THE AUTOMOBILE CLEARING HOUSE ASSOCIATION does not buy old or worn out cars, and no matter how good the condition of the car may be when received, it is carefully overhauled before being offered for sale, and is guaranteed to be in first-class running condition when sold.

We have almost every standard make of car in stock, and it is not necessary for us to misrepresent the cars or their condition.

They are here to speak for themselves, both in appearance and by demonstration, and we are in position to save any intending purchaser a considerable amount of money.

To buy a car elsewhere without investigating our machines and our methods, is to do yourself an injustice.

We want you to come in, examine our stock, get our prices and be convinced.

THE CENTER OF ATTRACTION Is our grand assortment of slightly used cars. There is nothing like it to be seen elsewhere.

It is important that you secure only standard makes,—cars from well-known manufacturers, cars that delight the car, cars that please the eye with a first-class appearance, cars that represent good values for the prices asked. Save money. Many will hasten to respond to this attractive offer.

The magnitude of our offerings impresses everybody.

Don't consign your automobile to a small, irresponsible concern, simply because they need the stock. If you do, you stand in your own light. Automobiles do not increase in value, they depreciate every day. Next spring you will not get over fifty per cent. of what we offer you today.

If you have your car consigned now, get it back, then come and see us.

THE REX AUTO SALES COMPANY announce the purchase of the stock, good will and lease of the Pacific Automobile Company. The combined salesrooms will in the future be known as the Pacific Automobile Company. By reason of this consolidation we are in a position to show you the most complete line of automobiles ever shown upon a single floor on the Pacific Coast. Our stock is now very complete, including touring cars, roadsters and runabouts. To buy a car of us means 100 per cent. satisfaction. Why? Because every car sold is thoroughly overhauled by skilled and competent mechanics, and leaves our door in perfect running order. Second—Every car sold by us is sold under a positive guarantee, and on this basis we want your business.

If you are going to buy an automobile you owe it to yourself to see our cars and investigate our guarantee system. Then you want to investigate the value of our guarantee (also the other fellow's.)

The buying and selling of used automobiles has been in the past largely in the hands of financially irresponsible people. You should insist that dealers offering cars under guarantee should give ample evidence of their financial ability to carry out their guarantee. We will gladly do so.

If you have an automobile for sale, come and talk it over with us. We have the cash to buy your car or we will sell it on a straight commission basis. Your car left with us is perfectly safe. It will not be railroaded. It is fully insured either against accident or fire. Can you afford to place your car with dealers who could not possibly replace it in the event of accident.

HONORS DOWAGER EMPRESS.

PEKING, Nov. 6.—The Prince Regent received the members of the legations in turn today, within the Forbidden City, where they paid their respects before the bier of the Dowager Empress, whose funeral will be held on Tuesday.

CONSISTORY POSTPONED.

ROME, Nov. 6.—The consistory proposed for December has been postponed until January. Pressure is being brought to bear to have an American elevated to the cardinalate, but the Vatican authorities are skeptical of the success of this.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST THROWS HIMSELF BEFORE CAR.

Taken to the Charity Hospital in New Orleans Horribly Mangled and Bruised, But, Through Many Bandages, Declares That He Feels no Pain at All.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. C. Wilson, a Christian Scientist of Pass Christian, Miss., and now in the Charity Hospital here, mangled and bleeding, threw himself in front of a speeding trolley car today, to prove his faith.

Though horribly mangled he declares he feels no pain.

He is a scholar, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston, studied civil engineering and resided in Denver, then came south because of having development of consumption. He declared Christian Science cured him of consumption after eminent physicians failed. At the hospital tonight, Wilson declared: "I stepped in front of the car, knowing that I would not be killed, because of my true and deep faith in Christian Science. The car knocked me higher than a kite, but it did not kill me. So my belief in Christian Science has not been shaken."

COPENHAGEN DECLINES.

WILL NOT GIVE UP CLAIM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 6.—The consistory of the University of Copenhagen declined today to accept the proposal of the National Geographic Society that a committee representing the American body be present when the North Pole records of Dr. Cook are first examined.

A message was sent to Prof. Willis L. Moore, president of the National Geographic Society, at Washington, as follows:

"The university cannot accept the offered assistance, taking it for granted that the data and records of our examination will be placed at the disposal of other scientific institutions."

REQUEST MISUNDERSTOOD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Several hours after the receipt of its cablegram from the University of Copenhagen, the society issued the following:

"The cablegram of the National Geographic Society to the University of Copenhagen has been misunderstood. The society did not desire to participate with the university authorities or set in judgment with them on Dr. Cook's claim, nor did the society desire to anticipate the university by seeing the papers first. The society has been informed by Dr. Cook that only copies of the records will be sent to it.

"The society has received many requests every day from its thousands of members asking how soon it would pass on Dr. Cook's claims, and the officers have replied that they could not act until they had seen the original documents as in the case of commander Peary. As there was no prospect of the originals coming to this country, the society determined to send a commission to Copenhagen to see the original papers.

"We understand from the answer of the University of Copenhagen that these originals will be open for inspection as the university has passed upon them and this is all the society has desire or requested."

Port Items.

Lumber receipts today were [illegible] feet from the steamer James H. Higgins, 600,000 feet from the schooner Albert Meyer, 500,000 feet from the steamer Jim Butler, and 600,000 feet from the steamer Santa Barbara.

The German steamer Erna sailed this afternoon for Corinto, via Salina Cruz and Manzanillo. The steamer took aboard here 100 tons of dried fruit for Europe and twelve passengers for Mexican ports. Capt. Zeigenmeyer, late skipper of the Erna, who was arrested here on the last trip down the coast and taken from the vessel to answer a smuggling charge, to which he pleaded guilty, has gone to Hamburg, Germany. He went from here to Seattle, to explain that he was imposed upon by Soloranzo, the man who smuggled a package of Panama hats into the pilot boat. It is said that he got a cold reception from the management of the Jebsen-Ostrander line.

The Pacific Coast steamer City of Topeka arrived tonight from San Francisco with freight and passengers and will sail tomorrow for San Diego. The Santa Rosa is due tomorrow afternoon and will sail north Monday morning. The Alaska-Pacific steamer Admiral Sampson is also due tomorrow from Seattle and will sail for return Monday.

The Schubach-Hamilton steamer St. Croix sailed today for San Francisco with passengers. The reports that there is some prospect that the passenger rate war between here and San Francisco may come to an end is given color by a rumor that the California parties are negotiating for the purchase of the freight steamship Mackinaw, now loading at San Francisco for Portland. Some time ago it was reported that the Independent Steamship Company was about to purchase the St. Croix, but steamship men connected with the line declare that the St. Croix would not be a valuable addition to the line because of her limited freight capacity and lack of booms for handling freight from the wharf. It is suggested that the sale of the Mackinaw by the Schubach-Hamilton line might be an inducement to end the rate war.

Eye Troubles That Imperil Vision Are Soon Overcome

Los Angeles Expert Evolves New Method of Restoring Sight by His Special Lenses

My head and eyes would ache. At times the pain in and around my eyes, especially the back part, was so intense and constant I could not use my eyes at all with comfort, either for distance or near work. Neither could I use my eyes at all by night.

I could get no relief. I doctored and doctored, but the more I doctored the worse my eyes got. My eyes felt heavy, hot, sticky, and at times as if there was something in them. When reading or sewing the work would blur, the type and words run together and fade away; everything for a time would disappear as if I had entirely lost my eyesight. My position as public school teacher I was advised to give up by prominent oculists, as my eyesight was in imminent danger.

Several oculists and opticians had failed. It seemed as if they were experimenting and trying and did not understand my case. One optician refused to take back my glasses and said: "Just keep on wearing them; they'll come out all right." The more I wore them the worse my eyes got. If possible, after wearing them a short time my eyes were worse than ever before. Two of my friends who had consulted Dr. Rice, Broadway at Fifth street, upstairs opposite Fifth Street store, and who were wearing glasses prescribed by Dr. Rice, were so highly pleased for the very first time since they began wearing glasses years ago that they advised me to consult Dr. Rice.

In looking over a daily paper a few days later I noticed an open statement from Rev. R. S. Reese, a prominent retired minister of Los Angeles, who resides at 1630 Arapahoe street, phone 23759, who had been a minister for fifty years and had lived here for more than thirty years, who said: "I am highly pleased with my special glasses prescribed by Dr. Rice; fully meeting all requirements, giving easy, clear and comfortable vision both far and near sight; no eye strain." The desired result was so manifest with Rev. Reese's case I felt sure Dr. Rice could cure my eyes.

At Broadway and Fifth I found many waiting their turn to see the Los Angeles expert. After a few minutes' examination, absolutely without expense of one cent, with his up-to-date and thoroughly scientific equipment and modern methods, I was fully convinced immediately my examination was thorough and was made with great understanding and knowledge it was all my friends had claimed and that his twenty years of study of the eyes indeed had placed him foremost in his profession.

My glasses are perfect. They give great pleasure and comfort; my eye troubles have long since disappeared and I now use my eyes without strain and have no more trouble.

I heartily recommend Dr. Rice to my friends. What he did for me he can do for you. His prices are very reasonable.

Daughters of the Revolution

Busily spinning dainty fabrics for their trousseaus, the Daughters of The Revolution, in fancy, spun fairy fabrics of another kind—beautiful dreams of a table set for two, snowy linen, rare old china, and the quaint, old-fashioned silver handed down from Colonial times. Dearly they prized the time-honored pieces, and more than one maiden could single out a spoon or a fork used by the great LaFayette himself when entertained in America.

Even more would such pieces be prized by daughters of today, and scarcely less do they appreciate The LaFayette, a pattern which faithfully revives the old historic silver—plain and quaint of outline—a pattern which never fails to captivate the maiden whose brain is busily spinning the same old dream of love and home.

Before the Election.

The investment in San Francisco property was made just prior to the municipal election, which took place there this past week. What influence the pending election had upon the buyer or on the sellers we are unable to ascertain. As in the case in Los Angeles, the buyer in San Francisco was from the outside, and the sellers, at the head of whom stands I. W. Hellman, were very likely to have had a pretty clear insight into what the election was likely to result in. They had known San Francisco's political history for all past time, and it is quite fair to judge that they held on a little less grimly than they might have done had they not anticipated the turning over of the city to the same political organization that wrought such ruin there just about the time of the great fire. In our mind there is no doubt that the municipal election in San Francisco is going to check investment in real estate there at once, in any case, and hold it in check until the designs and methods of the new Mayor and his coadjutors and advisors may become clear. If anything like the riots not only countenanced but instigated by McCarthy in times past take place in the future, or if he and the Board of Supervisors with him should develop any such government as Mayor Schmitz and the old Board of Supervisors were responsible for, the further prosperity of San Francisco is in great jeopardy. To our mind, Los Angeles offers a much more inviting field for investment in real estate today than our neighbor on the big bay to the north. Los Angeles has always maintained industrial freedom and industrial peace within her borders, and will do so under any circumstances in all time to come. We have our own little troubles, and it remains for us in the election this week to put all disturbance and all chance of contention out of the way by our votes at the coming election. In no case can we conceive any conditions that threaten us, such as faces San Francisco as a probability. At the same time, the election this week will have a good deal to do with the future values in the city. If we have a business administration by business men, and not continual agitation on the part of those who will not give us a business administration, we may look for a very great growth in the city and an enhancement of real estate values.

The Future of Coast Cities.

The editor of Fact and Comment has before him a letter from former Superior Judge of Los Angeles County R. M. Widney, now engaged in real estate operations in the city of Portland. He writes as follows: "There is a great future in Portland, comparatively speaking. . . . There will be five great cities on this Coast: Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Each will be great on its own resources, and the growth of each will augment the others. Neither will grow to the detriment of the others to any material extent. Each has attributes characteristic of itself to cause its growth." Judge Widney is known here as a man of great intelligence in business matters and of broad views. The Times fully indorses his statements as to these five cities, and it is our opinion that Los Angeles will be one of the very largest of the five. Without deprecating the prospects of any of the others, it looks reasonable at this time to conjecture that Los Angeles will have a population of 1,000,000 probably before any of its four great rivals. The price of the property just sold here and referred to above, when you consider that, although a corner, it has but one frontage, while the parcel in San Francisco, although an inside lot, fronts on two streets, one of them the principal one of that municipality, shows that property here today is worth about as much as in San Francisco, founding our judgment on these two new record sales, and we believe that for all future time central business property with us will be worth fully as much as that in any city on the Coast, not excepting San Francisco.

BUILD MODERN BLOCK.

"Skyscraper" of Fifteen Years Ago to Make Way for Seven-Story Steel Structure.

Fifteen years ago, when it was built, the structure now being vacated by the Barker Bros. Furniture Company was the wonder of Spring street. It was the skyscraper of that important thoroughfare and pointed to with pride as an example of a modern business building in a growing city. Some time between December 1 and the beginning of 1910 this former proud structure is to be the scene of operation of a wrecking company who will all but raze it to the ground. A few months later a modern class "B" steel frame structure, seven stories in height, will rear itself in the same site.

The property is owned by I. N. Van Nuys, and is situated on the east side of South Spring street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. The lot is 60x150 feet, and the present building is five stories high. Morgan & Walls have prepared plans which call for the practical tearing down of the structure and its rebuilding over a seven-story steel skeleton. The material of the present building will be used as far as practicable in the clothing of this steel frame, but otherwise the proposed building will be a new one. The cost of the improvement will be about $60,000.

The structure, which is to be occupied by the Los Angeles Furniture Company, will be pushed to completion. It will have an ornamental cement front and be arranged to provide the maximum of light for the interior. Vacuum cleaning, sprinkler system and other up-to-date conveniences will be installed. Plunger elevators will be used.

COMPANY BUILDS HOMES.

The Investment Building Company has paid $36,000 for a ten-acre piece known as the Ingomar Tract on Prospect boulevard and Pacific avenue, Hollywood. The plans of the company, which was but recently incorporated as a stock organization, call for the erection of thirty-two handsome bungalows of from six to eight rooms each, and costing about $2500. Seven of these dwellings are now under way and seven more will be started next Tuesday. The company has its own contractors at work on the building. The lot sites are 50x140 feet each. Ralph M. Watson is president of the company, and Fred Baker, secretary. Both have been actively interested in building work in this city.

BUY CLOSE-IN TRACT.

F. W. Weeks and Mabel Kendall have sold to John C. Hamm, a tract of eighty acres at the southeast corner of Manchester and Central avenues, the consideration being about $80,000. The property will be subdivided at once, the immediate improvements planned calling for the expenditure of many thousands. A number of bungalows will be started on the completion of the street work. The transaction was accomplished through the agency of H. G. Cotton.

RECORD PRICE FOR CORNER.

FIRM HANDLES TWO BIG DEALS IN AS MANY DAYS.

Nearly Eight Thousand a Foot for Northeast Corner Broadway and Fifth—Five Thousand for Inside Lot—Eight-Story and Twelve-Story Buildings Assured.

Nearly $8000 a front foot for Broadway property was paid last Monday in the biggest real estate deal ever made in the business district of Los Angeles, by a Boston millionaire, who bought for $650,000 the lot and building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Firth. The buyer was Chester Williams, a shoe manufacturer, who has made other important investments here, and the seller was A. C. Bilicke. The latter was represented by R. A. Rowan & Co., and the buyer by Meyer & Johnson.

The Rowan company made still another stroke on Tuesday, as agents in the sale for the Title Insurance and Trust Company to the George J. Birkel Company of forty feet on the east side of Broadway, adjoining the Parmelee-Dohrmann building on the south, the consideration involved being $200,000, or at the rate of $5000 a front foot. The two deals aggregated $850,000, and represent quite the best week's business in inside property ever put through by a Los Angeles firm.

The corner site has a frontage of 86 feet on Broadway by a depth of 165 feet to a twenty-foot alley on Fifth. The price per front foot was a trifle more than $7858. The lot is improved with a two-story brick building, rentals from which are about $3500 a month. It is the intention of the buyer to erect a twelve-story office block on the site at the expiration of the principal leases two years hence.

The purchase by the George J. Birkel Company is a transaction of great importance to the city, as the buyers have signified their intention to erect a large building on the site, the work to start not later than next May. Morgan & Wells have been commissioned to prepare plans for this structure, which will be a credit to the business section of the city. The probable height will be eight stories, and the cost about $125,000.

BUYS ON SOUTH GRAND.

Through the agency of Kremer & Company, and Warren H. Cook, William Cook has purchased from Eulalie B. Vervoort, 60x162 feet at No. 838 South Grand avenue, just south of the Adams Apartments. The improvements consist of a frame building of a single story. The purchase price was $45,000. The buyer contemplates the erection of a store and apartment building on the site.

MAY COST MILLION.

Building for Chester Building Company at Fifth and Spring to Be Started Soon.

The construction of a magnificent ten-story office building to cost between $750,000 and $1,000,000, at the northeast corner of Spring and Fifth streets, will be begun in a short time by the Chester Fireproof Building Company. The time for beginning razing of the two-story brick building now on the site, together with a detail as to the exact ground area to be occupied by the new structure, will be determined upon the arrival in this city early this week of A. C. Bilicke, president of the company.

The lot has a frontage of ninety-five feet on Spring and of 160 feet to a twenty-foot alley on Fifth street. Along this alley the property extends for a width of sixty feet 240 feet to the north, making an L-shaped piece of great value. The entire site is owned by the heirs of the late Mrs. John H. Jones. The builders hold a fifty-year lease on the holding.

Plans have been prepared in the office of Parkinson & Bergstrom for a ten-story block to cover the rectangular piece of which the Spring-streeet and Fifth-street frontages of ninety-five feet and 160 feet, respectively, are an end and side. The architects' perspective of the building appeared exclusively in The Times November 5.

It is now proposed to cover the entire lot with the building, by extending it north from the rear for 240 feet from Fifth street. The plan would raise the cost from $750,000 to a million or over, and add nearly 90,000 square feet of floor space, bringing the total floor area up to over 230,000 square feet, or between seven and eight acres. In any event the plans already prepared will be used for the originally specified ground area.

BUY LARGE ACREAGE.

Another Big Tract in the Rich San Fernando Valley Bought for Subdivision.

Another big deal has been consummated in the San Fernando Valley, E. O. Hanson, manager of the Scandia Land and Loan Company, having secured the Hubbard & Wright ranch in the San Fernando Valley, 1100 acres, lying along the Southern Pacific main Coast line to San Francisco. This Hubbard & Wright tract is directly west of the holdings of the Mission Land Company, south of the B. F. Porter ranch, and directly north of the Los Angeles Farming and Milling Company's 48,000-acre property, recently purchased by Los Angeles investors for nearly $2,500,000.

Mr. Hanson has associated with him a number of former friends from the East, who have come here to seek investment in real estate. They have paid $150,000 for these 1100 acres, or about $135 per acre. They buy with the intention of cutting it up into small farms. They get immediate possession, and will proceed to the subdivision with all dispatch.

This land is twenty-three miles north of Los Angeles, seven miles west of San Fernando, six southeast of Chatsworth, and right in the very heart of the great San Fernando Valley. The railroad station known as Zelzah is on the land, and the expectation is to build up there a considerable town right in the center of the tract. The subdivisions will run at about twenty acres to each holding, giving about fifty-five allotments.

BIG RANCH DEAL.

Local Investors in Sale of Sixteen Thousand Acres Near Rialto for Million and Half.

Announcement was made last week that the Fontana Development Company and the San Francisco Savings Union have sold all their interests in the San Bernardino Valley and at Rialto, for a little more than $1,500,000. Some of the most valuable water rights in Lytle Creek are included in the deal. About $16,000 acres are involved.

Thomas Keefe, a San Bernardino attorney, who has been manager for the two companies, also sold his interest, it is understood. A. B. Miller of this city will take the position of manager for the Los Angeles and Pasadena capitalists who are among the purchasers.

Colonization of the lands in ten and twenty-acre tracts is supposed to be the purpose of the buyers, who will proceed at once to offer attractions to colonists.

OLIVE STREET SALE.

Lot Brings Large Price for Cash and One More Garage Will Probably Be Built.

Through the agency of Bryan & Bradford, B. M. Kramer has sold to Richard G. Beebe 50x155 feet on the west side of Olive street, between Twelfth and Pico streets, at a consideration of $31,000 cash. The site is improved with a two-story frame house.

Mr Beebe, who is an extensive holder in this city, buys for investment. He is considering the erection of a large automobile supply house on the site, but plans to this end are as yet indefinite.

The activity in South Olive-street property during the past few weeks has been little short of phenomenal. Within the past month the firm of Bryan & Bradford alone has handled nearly $300,000 worth of property on Olive, between Eighth and Pico streets.

ONEONTA PARK SALE.

Edwin G. Hart & Company have completed a sale of one of the finest residences in Oneonta Park, on the southwest corner of Monterey Road and Fair Oaks avenue. The property has 171 feet frontage on Fair Oaks and 225 feet on Monterey Road, and is improved with modern eleven-room house. The holding has been deeded by Edwin G. Hart to Agnes Clune and James W. Clune for a consideration of $25,000, a concession being made to the purchaser for cash payment of the whole amount.

OUR NEW DEPARTMENT FOR THE SALE OF RESIDENCES.
This branch of our business is less than a year old, and the number of sales we have made are good indications that our listings represent the very best to be had. More than 75 per cent. of the residences we offer are handled exclusively by us and any one interested in the purchase of a home will safeguard their own interests by 'Phoning Home 10444 or Main 7096 for any information desired and which we are only too glad to furnish free of charge.
We call especial attention to the following:
A southeast corner, 15 minutes from Fourth and Spring sts., at $12,500, on easy terms. Lot 110x145. 3-story mansion, which cost $15,000 to build. Finished in quartered oak. The lot alone is a bargain at $7500. $12,500 buys it, and it is cheap at $20,000.
$2x203, on Vernon st. Six-room cottage, 45 fruit trees. Cement walks and curbs. Between 2 car lines. 20 minutes from Main and Fourth st. Price $3500, on easy terms. Cost owner much over $5000 less than a year ago. Good reason for selling.
One of the most beautiful homes in this city, on West Adams Heights. Can be purchased for $31,000, including furniture. The rugs and carpets were made expressly for this home in Europe. The furniture and draperies were made in New York. The woods throughout this unusual home were finished and treated with acids to procure the soft, pleasing effects so popular in the East and in Europe by workmen from Vienna, Austria. We know of no home at any price that is more elegant or more beautifully furnished and only 3 months old. It is an ideal home. The owner wishes to go to Europe is the reason for selling.
Southeast corner of Julia and 24th can be purchased for $7500. It must be seen to be appreciated. Fine garage. Easy terms.

FOR SALE—
Lemon or Orange Groves.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES.

Districts—La Verne, San Dimas, Charter Oak and Claremont. We are and have been for many years engaged in orange and lemon growing. Planted our first trees near what is now Claremont, year 1875. Our experience of over 30 years growing oranges, our experience of over 25 years selling lands and orange and lemon groves, throughout these districts, our record and our method of doing business, together with our reputation and standing in the community in which we have lived for 34 years are matters for the careful investor to investigate. After you have thoroughly made this investigation and feel satisfied that W. T. Michael & Son after all, do know a few things about this orange growing business, as well as having the reputation of being pretty straight and fair fellows to do business with, then don't hesitate to come to our office. Like unto so many other MIGHTY GOOD MEN. THE VERY BEST MEN. We just can't help boosting for Southern California, this fair SUN-KISSED, MOON-KISSED, GOD-KISSED country in which we live. If you are interested in orange or lemon groves or vacant orange lands, better line up with us at once and have us assist you in finding just what you want. Our STOCK of LANDS and GROVES, is just as COMPLETE as any department store on Broadway. The class of groves you see advertised by some men as great SNAPS are as remnants to our up to date stock. Listen. If we told you 8 years ago that good orange groves in good locations would go to $1200 and $1500 per acre, you most likely said to yourself, OH FUDGE, or Oh Shoot. Again 5 years ago we promised you this class of groves would reach $2000 per acre, then you fairly SQUIRMED and said to us and to our friends, that MICHAEL & SON had gone clear crazy. That you were from Missouri and we would have hard work to show you, etc., etc. Only 2 years ago we were making lots of sales, this being our banner year, and from December 1, 1906 to August 1, 1907 our sales of orange and lemon groves ran away above the million dollar mark, and all through these 8 months of activity we found time to predict and warn our good friends from Missouri to get in line as fast as possible and invest their spare money into good orange and lemon groves, because we had the inside news, and felt confident and almost to a certainty the best and banner orange and lemon groves would reach $3000 to $4000 per acre. What did some of our prospective buyers think of this? Why they just simply said ugly things about us and not very many good things. Called us almost everything but ANARCHISTS. One fellow (and he was from Missouri) would have called us this awful thing, but he knew darn well we would not stand for it, so he took his money and lit out for his native State, Missouri. The above guesses and predictions have all come to pass. We have the records as proofs of all assertions hereto. Now a word to our prospective buyers of orange and lemon groves. First we will say we are among the ONLY PEOPLE IN THE WIDE WORLD who can boast of OWNING a SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. Second, the wheels and the whole machinery covering the whole United States cannot go wrong with such a man as we now have, W. H. Taft, at the helm. Third, just think of the vast and great things we are doing, building the Panama Canal, building and adding to the wonderful and great harbors at our doors, San Pedro. Bringing to our doors and our orange and lemon groves the great waters of the Owens River country. Building macadamized roads throughout our county. Building fine school-houses and MODERN, COMMODIOUS, up to date churches, all along the line throughout Southern California, in commemoration to him who gave us this sun-kissed country. With all these vast and enormous improvements now under way of completion, and we can fully realize within the next 3 to 5 years the very near future our present freight rates on our oranges and lemons to place them in the hands of the consumers throughout the far east, will likely be reduced to at least one-half our present rates. THEN and SURE THEN, you will see the BEST GROVES in the best locations selling for $4000 to $5000 per acre. You cannot, if the past is anything to guide the wayfaring investor, afford to delay or wait for lower prices on first-class orange and lemon groves. Prices have been gradually advancing for the past 8 to 10 years and even so during our last money panic of about 2 years ago.

Yours always anxious to please,
W. T. MICHAEL & SON,

FOR SALE—AT SAN PEDRO—

THE POINT FIRMIN TRACT.

$430,000 appropriation has been made by U. S. government for San Pedro.

The government is spending millions here.

The $10,000,000 of harbor bonds which will be voted by Los Angeles city will make great harbor improvements. The 144 acres in outer harbor will be the site for great warehouses, docks and general shipping business.

Lots in the Point Firmin tract are sightly, overlooking the whole harbor, the 144 acres and the big $3,000,000 government breakwater. Lots run to water's edge and command the finest view on Pacific coast.

We sell these lots cheaper than lots elsewhere in Southern California—$1000 to $2500 for large lots. Easy terms.

FOR SALE—
COLYEARS,
509-511 S. Main street.
(Where Bargains Reign.)

You are cordially invited to attend the great weekly clearance sale of SLIGHTLY-USED furniture on our second floor. We doubt very much if such an assortment of furniture could be found at any other store in the West.

Owing to the fact of our popular exchange department having outgrown our space allotted, we find it necessary to make room thus. Commencing Monday, we shall place on Special Sale an unusual lot of SLIGHTLY-USED Iron Beds, Bedroom Sets, Folding Beds, Sanitary Couches, Odd Dressers, Commodes, Buffets, Sideboards, Extension Tables, China Closets, Bookcases, Wardrobes, Rockers, Chairs, Upholstered and Bamboo Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Stoves and everything for the house.

If you have a piece of furniture that you have no use for, you can exchange it toward anything we have in stock. Seven floors of new, up-to-date furniture to select from.

You don't have to pay the cash, either. A dollar or so a week will do. All goods marked in plain figures.

Why pay a high price for new furniture at other stores when you can buy SLIGHTLY-USED furniture from us, in many instances, at less than half original cost.

THE OIL STOCKS.
For a long period occupying such relations to the oil industry, its production, transportation, and marketing, that I has given us much experience, and a valuable fund of information bearing on the subject generally and the Oil Companies of California in particular, we are in an unusual position to advertise the purchase or sale of these securities.
A demand for oil now equal to the production and growing beyond it with strengthening prices, it indicates a probable boom in oil stocks during the winter and a great advantage over present values. We commend UNION (and allied companies), Central, American Petroleum, Mexican Petroleum, Pinal, Palmer and other listed stocks paying from 6 to 16 per cent. or better. Also a few in the producing and near-dividend class that may prove great winners.
As members of the Los Angeles and San Francisco exchanges, we can execute orders for any securities listed thereon or on other exchanges of the country.

STRIDING.

NEW HOUSE IN EVERY BLOCK.

North Pasadena and Altadena Have Building Boom.

Forty Thousand Dollars Value of Pasadena Permits.

Continued Activity in All the Country Towns.

PASADENA, Nov. 6.—Real estate has been very active in Pasadena during the past week. Many big sales have been made, as well as a large number of smaller ones. Building activity goes on at a merry gait. New residences and business houses are going up on all sides, particularly in the Oak Knoll addition and the southeast part of the city. In North Pasadena and Altadena there is more building than ever before. Nearly every block has a new house going up on it.

During the past six days permits have been taken out for nearly $40,000 worth of new property, which is a record breaker and if this record is maintained for the entire month, this will make November one of the best months in the history of the city.

The William R. Staats Company states that the activity in the Oak Knoll addition is equal to a boom. They have made many good sales during the past week and have had an army of people looking over the ground with a view of making purchases. Through H. H. Godber they have sold four lots on Oakland avenue to an eastern investor, and two lots on the west side of Oakland, to Jane M. Phillips. Through the Allen-Pyle Company they have sold to Joseph E. Hinds, of Pasadena, seven lots on Oakland, south of Fillmore, and three lots in the same block to Pasadenans. The Staats company's total sales in this addition for the past week are reported by them to have been over $40,000.

The Hotel Maryland Company has decided to build another beautiful bungalow on North Los Robles, just north of the main wing of the hotel. This will make three new bungaows this fall.

Charles D. Sargent, of Pasadena, who has recently had a tract of 120 acres of land in the San Gabriel Valley laid out in small tracts for the planting of eucalyptus trees, has made a present of five acres of this land to the Children's Training School of Pasadena.

The City Council now have under consideration the matter of extending the fire restrition district over a trict covers nearly all the present district overs nearly all the present business district but business houses are spreading out so rapidly that the Council feels the fire district should be extended. Then also many small frame buildings are being built just outside of the present restricted territory which will have to be torn down when the district is extended. It is deemed best to extend the district now and prevent, in this manner, the building of fire traps which will sooner or later have to come down.

S. W. Banks and M. W. Davis who have recently placed the East Colorado street tract, on the market report and report nine good sales during the first ten days aggregating nearly $4000.

The Lindley & Kay Company report $60,000 in sales during the past sixty days, comprising ten houses and lots, twenty-five vacant lots and one fine business block in North Pasadena. These sales have been made in all parts of the city and at big prices.

During the past week, the vineyard of Ira C. Goodrich, located on North Lake avenue, consisting of nine acres, was sold for $18,000 or $2000 per are, which is a record breaker for vineyard land. This is the second high priced ranch to be sold within the past two weeks in the northern part of the city. The other ranch was the Clark ranch on North Lincoln avenue to Mr. Martin at $1000 per acre. There are twenty acres in the latter ranch.

The Rubio Cañon Land and Water Company has been making extensive improvements in its plant during the past couple of weeks and has developed a much larger supply of water which will be used to irrigate a large tract of land lying north of Altadena, and for furnishing water to a large number of houses in the northeastern part of Pasadena, which are not supplied at present.

C. J. Platt reports sales amounting to $25,000 during the past two weeks. Part of these sales are of city property, although the most of them are country property. He has made a number of good sales in Azusa.

BUILD MANY HOMES.

BIG DEAL WELL UNDER WAY.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 6.—Home building continues to go forward with rapid strides in San Diego. One realty firm reports sales of seventy-nine lots during the month of October, each sale representing a builder. These seventy-nine new houses are going up in one subdivision and is only a sample of what is taking place in other suburban tracts being opened up for home seekers.

According to the books of the Santa Fé Railroad Company thirty-five cars of household goods were received here in October. These represent as many families who have come here from North and East.

One of the biggest realty deals of the past fortnight, was the transfer of a block of six lots fronting on the south side of Ash street between Second and Third by the Wilcox estate to J. C. Rice and J. L. McMurtrie for $40,000. The purchasers represent a syndicate said to be negotiating for the remainder of the block at a price to exceed $60,000. This deal has not yet been concluded.

Minor sales of small tracts and building lots are numerous. Building activity bids fair to continue on a big scale, as a number of new projects are reported. John D. Spreckels, it is said, contemplates soon starting work on a theater and office building at Second and D streets. It is said plans prepared by Harrison Albright will call for a six-story block to occupy a ground space of 150x150 feet.

The supervising architect of the treasury has approved plans for a mission-style government building to cost $135,000. These plans it is thought will soon be ready for inspection by contractors wishing to bid on the construction. Work is soon to start on the Masonic Temple, which is to be a four-story building of reinforced concrete. Tenants have been secured for the lower floor, one to be a large automobile supply agency.

The County Supervisors have called for new plans for an addition to the Courthouse. One set of plans providing for a detached building with a garage for county automobiles was turned down. The new plans are to provide for a wing to be built onto the present building without the garage feature.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Apple shippers in the central part of the State are causing more trouble than they are aware of in all parts of the country. They have been lax in the marking of their stock, with the result that a great portion of the apples arriving are misbranded as to size. The packers have packed four, four and a half and five-tier fruit and have mislabeled all the way through, with the result that one car after another is being rejected on arrival in Los Angeles. As many as ten cars of fruit, which came in the week past, were rejected because of inaccuracy in packing. This means a loss to the jobber as well as the wholesaler and, although not causing any great damage to the cash sales of the shippers, will react on them next year. There are more apples in storage in Los Angeles this year than in three years past. The Bellefleurs are already being withdrawn because of rapid ripening. The few which are still arriving from the North are very ripe and are therefore forced on sale at once. The price on belles dropped 10 cents on quoted prices, going back to $1.25. Other varieties are holding unchanged. Receipts yesterday were only 666 boxes.

Egg receipts were fifty-seven cases. The market continued very firm and dealers were paying producers 42 cents for case-count stock. Eastern storage are moving more rapidly. The market the past week has been the best of the season on this particular grade of eggs.

The decline in butter has created a better demand for the present. Creamery extras are selling at 70 cents a pound sometimes, but more frequently the price is 1 cent below that. Eastern creamery extras are selling well up to quotations. There were no changes in cheap grades. Receipts were reported at 14,253 pounds.

The cheese market opened weak, but grew stronger during the last half of the week owing to a sudden slackening of receipts. There were no big sales and prices were unchanged in all lines. The market on northern fresh was better than on any other brand. Yesterday receipts only totaled 138 pounds.

Potato receipts were the largest of the week, 2838 sacks. The market on spuds was steady, but not as firm as through the remainder of the week. Resumption in operations in the northern fields is general. Onion receipts were 241 sacks. The market was slow during the week. Prices were unchanged.

Bean receipts were two sacks. This is no criterion of the week's arrivals, but these fell far below the expected receipts and as a result beans have advanced 25 cents a hundred through the entire list. Further jumps are looked for on account of the smallness of what had been estimated as a very large crop.

Vegetables have been on the see-saw, one day up and the next down. Even at that rate there has been a good call for vegetables and prices averaged below those of last week. Second crop is in full harvest in lettuce, cabbage, bean and some bunch goods. Tomatoes are slowly going higher.

Small fruits have been advancing. Berries are up and strawberries were valued at 8 cents yesterday, when the berry was fancy. Peaches are $1.25 a box and are all clingstones. Pears are worth $1.50 a box on anything like fancy stock.

Turpentine prices were changed yesterday, going to 80 cents in case lots and 73 cents when purchased by the barrel. No reason is given for the decline by the refining companies.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

VOLUME BEST OF ANY WEEK.

SIX DAYS' TRANSACTIONS ARE A NEW RECORD.

Closing Call on Saturday Shows Surprising Activity—Associated Oil Continues to Soar—Central Oil, Too. Mining Section Contributes Some Business.

The week which ended yesterday on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange was, in point of volume of business, the best in the history of the exchange. The activity of the single call yesterday probably surpassed any corresponding session in the past. The total valuation represented by the week's transactions is considerably in excess of $200,000. The members are elated over conditions.

Associated Oil continued to soar throughout yesterday's busy call, 110 shares being marketed at 42.00@42.50, prices from ¾ point to 1⅛ points higher than those prevailing on Friday's lively sessions. The close at 42.25@43.00 was advanced 1⅛ points and 1⅛ points, respectively, in the bid and asked.

Ten of American Petroleum common changed hands at the high figure of 76.25, ¼ point higher than the best price of the day before. The close, at 76.75 asked, was up ¼ point.

Central Oil caught the spirit of uplift and hit a new high, trading at 1.36@1.38 to the amount of 250 shares. [illegible] 1.38, buyer 60 days, 500 shares were handled.

Four thousand of the [illegible] listed Cleveland sold at 23.

Olinda Land was heard from for the first time in weeks, 500 shares selling at 32.

Eighty of Union Oil and 60 of Union Provident were transferred, the former at 104.00 and the latter at 101.75. Both closed fractionally advanced.

A single Associated Oil bond changed hands at 94. The rest of the list was quiet and practically unchanged, as were also the bank stocks and utilities.

In the mining section Bonnie Clare sold at 14½, Clark Copper at 3¾@3¾, and Mt. Gaines at 4 cents.

Off-board sales were reported as follows: 50 Associated Oil at 42.00, 20 American Petroleum common at 76.00, 40 Mexican Petroleum common at 28.00, 20 Union Provident Oil at 101.75.

GENERAL EASTERN.

CLOSE COMES AT TOP NOTCH.

EXPECTED SLUMP IN MOVEMENT STARTS BUYING.

Demand Chiefly for December Wheat and the Prices of That Option Climb Skyward in Consequence, Advancing Nearly Two Cents from Day's Low Figure.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Talk of a probable falling off in the movement of wheat in the United States next week inspired activity in buying of that grain on the Board of Trade today. Demand was chiefly for December, and the price of that option advanced nearly 2 cents from the low point of the day. The upturn occurred during the final hour, and at the close prices were almost at the top notch. December closed at $1.03. Advices from the West, Northwest and Southwest, predicting a lighter movement from the farms next week, were influential factors in starting the late upturn.

The bulge in wheat caused moderate firmness in corn and resulted in gains of 1-8 to 1-4 at the close.

Trade in oats was dull. The close was a shade lower to 1-8 higher.

Provisions closed 5 to 7½ cents lower than yesterday.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, firm; winter patents, 5.25@5.90; straights, 4.50@5.45; straights, 4.75@4.90; bakers, 3.50@5.20; No. 2 rye, 73½@74; feed or mixed barley, 53@55; fair to choice malting, 55@65; flaxseed, No. 1, southwestern, 1.64; No. 1, northwestern, 1.74; timothy seed, 3.75; clover, 9.50@14.00; mess pork, per bbl., 23.75@24.00; lard, per 100 lbs., 13.00; short ribs, sides (loose,) 10.75@11.00; short clear sides, (boxed,) 11.00@11.25.

Grain Statistics.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Total clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 452,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 1,116,000 bushels, compared with 1,140,000 bushels the corresponding day a year ago. Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 63 cars; corn, 179 cars; oats, 154 cars; hogs, 32,000 head.

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building.]

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—With the close of the week, the market showed very little snap. Small profit taking was evident in the stocks which have been favorites this week, notably Greene Cananea and Giroux. Amalgamated was also slightly softer, but we have every confidence in higher prices next week. The copper producers' report will be issued on Wednesday and should be decidedly favorable, although the largest sales of copper have been since the first of the month. We think Amalgamated will be the leader next week and will carry the rest of the copper stocks with it. Following were closing bid and asked quotations on the Boston Stock Exchange:

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Peers, of Hutton, says: "The only plausible reason that we can advance for the continued decline in cotton is that the recent advance of nearly 300 points without a reaction caused so much bullish enthusiasm all over the world that most traders over-traded themselves in the contract markets and the buying power in this way became exhausted. The drastic liquidation which has taken place the past three days should have pretty well cleaned out all of this weakly held cotton, and, as fundamental conditions are practically as bullish as ever, we expect an early restoration of confidence and bullish activity. Consumption is running at the rate of over 1,200,000 bales per month, and, as the crop promises only about 10,000,000 bales, the question arises, where is this cotton to come from to keep the mills running after next May? Producers and the South in general are paying but little attention to reports of contemplated curtailment of consumption, as it will be remembered that whereas it is proposed to work four days a week for a period of about five weeks abroad, 75 per cent. of the English mills were actually shut down from September to November 1 in 1908, yet the consumption of the world was the largest on record by about 500,000 bales, having been 13,157,000 bales of American last season."

Hill, of Logan & Bryan, says: "Liverpool is better than expected. It was undoubtedly influenced by the week-end figures, which were bullish. Mills' takings were 222,000, against 289,000 for the same week last year, and the visible increased 308,258, against 251,-778 last year. The weekly movement at interior towns is also a bullish document, as it shows only 47,000 bales added to the stock during the week, against an addition of 55,000 last year. We hope for a sagging market until a radical liquidation of contracts is had, and possibly until some liquidation is also noted in the spot development. Many, very many of those who now own contracts or who now own spot cotton are not anxious to own more—in fact, wish they did not have their present load."

To The Intelligent Voters and Tax-Payers of Los Angeles:

The undersigned can, with the utmost confidence, recommend that one of the nine votes, which each voter is privileged to cast for Councilman, be given to C. W. Conway.

We know Mr. Conway to be a man of integrity, experience and ability. It would be difficult to find one who in all respects is better fitted for the office of Councilman. We sincerely trust that a sufficient number of voters will be impressed with the unusual opportunity offered for securing for our city the services of so conscientious and well qualified a gentleman. In addition to his general capability, his expert knowledge of real estate matters would be of especial value in the many matters involving land values with which the Council is called upon to deal.

THE MARKET.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Another Week of Big Deals and Huge Projects—Encouraging Activity in All Classes of Residence Property—Lots in New Tracts in Demand.

Last week, like the week before, was one of the big, record-breaking deals. In fact, it is the universal comment of realty men that "things are off in a bunch" and that there will soon be "something doing" every moment. The activity in all classes of lot and residence property is most encouraging. Home builders are literally transforming the residential topography of Los Angeles. Not a week passes without the inauguration of one or more extensive subdivision plans, generally involving the erection of a great number of houses. These dwellings built on the wholesale plan, say real estate dealers, are snapped up almost as fast as they can be offered on the market. As a matter of fact, the demand for first-class property of all kinds from up to the minute bungalows to modern steel office buildings is at the moment constantly crowding the supply. Following are reports from busy owners and dealers in this section:

GROUP PLAN FOR SCHOOL.

Hollywood Pioneer in West in Developing University Campus Idea in Public School Building.

Hollywood is the first city in the West to adopt the plan of a group series of public school buildings, and the plans prepared by Norman F. Marsh for the proposed schools in the neighboring city are therefore of unusual interest to people of this section. With the funds of a $100,000 bond issue, the Hollywood district proposes to erect a Polytechnic High School, consisting of four educational structures and a heating and power plant, all distinct, and arranged around a campus on a regular university plan. The idea has met with the favorable criticism of educators of national importance, and Mr. Marsh's designs have been personally approved by the head of the Pratt Institue in Brooklyn and by Dr. G. Stanley Hall, former president of the National Educational Association.

The three most important buildings of the series, the science hall, the household and fine arts building and the auditorium, are reproduced on this page of The Times. The manual arts building and the plant for power and heat will not be pretentious architecturally.

The science hall will be a two-story pressed-brock structure, designed to accommodate learners in elementary and advanced sciences, agriculture, soil analysis, plant propagation and spray mixing. Experimental gardens will adjoin the building.

The household and fine arts building is the conception of Dr. Snyder, principal of the school. The lower floor will contain lunch hall and kitchen, glaze and kiln rooms and laundry. The main floor will be given over largely to the domestic science department, with ample provision for lockers, and recitation and lecture rooms. Sewing and millinery rooms and a small hospital ward will also be found on this floor. The upper story will be arranged for drafting, blue print, clay modeling, weaving and metal hammering rooms, together with a model housekeeping flat and offices for the instructors. The structure will be of old colonial design, and of brick and plaster construction.

The auditorium building will contain the auditorium proper, to seat 1100 people, and having ample stage facilities for the giving of plays and concerts. The structure will house, also, the department of oral expression, with a hall to seat 150, and a stage for small plays. The choral hall will seat 200, and contain a bank stage for a chorus of 100 voices. These separate rooms will be arranged so that it will be easy to throw them all into one great hall, to seat over 1400. The building will be of classic type and of pressed-brick construction.

The manual arts building will be built in the form of a factory, and will house the woodwork and pattern-making shops, the forge department and machine shops and lectural, locker and recitation rooms. Drafting and blue print rooms will be installed in the second story, together with tool and storage rooms.

COMPLETE REMODELING.

Attractive Four-Story Apartment Hotel Under Way on West Seventh Street.

Rapid progress is being made in the complete remodeling of the three-story brick apartments at Nos. 1211 to 1227 West Seventh street, owned by E. R. Brainerd. The work, which practically amounts to the construction of a new and up-to-date apartment hotel, will be finished about January 1. The plans were prepared by John C. Austin, and the improvements are being carried out under his supervision. The cost of the remodeling is approximately $75,000, which will bring Mr. Brainerd's investment in the property up to nearly $200,000.

The present building has a frontage of 190 feet and a depth of seventy-seven feet, and is set fifty feet back from the street line, on a terrace. From the ends of this building are being extended wings four stories in height, each 50x50 feet in size. In the court formed by these wings is to be a lobby of a single story, roofed over with concrete, and forming an open air terrace 96x36 feet in size.

In type of architecture, the apartments, which will be known as the St. Albans, will be Georgian. The exterior will be of hard burnt blue brick, trimmed with Chatsworth Park stone. The structure will contain 204 rooms. Three stores, spacious lobby, billiard rooms and parlor will occupy the first floor.

The interior will be in hardwood throughout, excepting the lobby, where scagliola and ornamental tile will be used. Elevator service, steam heat, vacuum cleaning, folding beds and other strictly modern conveniences will be installed.

PAYS A HUNDRED THOUSAND.

F. A. Bizzell has sold to a local investor, through the agency of W. Ross Campbell, fifty feet frontage at No 738 South Main street by a depth of 105 feet, for a consideration of $100,000. A frame house on the site is now being razed to make way for a one-story pressed-brick front building to contain three storerooms. This improvement is leased for a short term, at the end of which the owner contemplates the erection of a large and substantial structure on the lot.

PERMITS ISSUED FOR NEW RESIDENCE EVERY HOUR.

Construction Project Representing Fifteen Hundred Dollars Value Undertaken in Los Angeles Every Ten Minutes of Every Working Day Since First of November.

"We have issued an average of one building permit, representing a valuation of $1560, every ten minutes of every eight hours of every working day to date in November," was the astonishing comment of Chief Clerk Mark C. Cohn of the building department yesterday afternoon, when he was asked about the remarkable permit record for the first five days of this month. "We have issued enough permits for residences to average one permit of $1750 valuation for every hour of the twenty-four of every day," he added. "There is nothing like it in the history of the department for the period covered."

From November 1 to November 5, inclusive, the department issued permits for 223 construction projects, representing a valuation of $77,383. The figures for the corresponding period last year were 113 permits and $124,614 valuation. The gain is 110 in number of building items, and $242,769, or 183 per cent., in valuation. Permits for residences of one, one and a half and two stories numbered 120, and were valued at $208,091. Residence items for the first five days in November, 1908, numbered seventy-nine, and were valued at $127,997. The permits for residences alone for the period covered are nearly double in valuation the figures for all items in 1908. Since September 1, the permits for residences have been of record-breaking proportions, leading the corresponding period for the boom times of 1906 by large margins.

WHITMORE PARK.
THE CREAM OF THEM ALL.
WHY? WHY? WHY? WHY?
BECAUSE—

IT faces on one of the best paved streets in the city.

IT is reached by the best car line in the city with three-minute service.

IT lies on the most direct street running to the Los Angeles Harbor.

IT is 40 feet higher than most of the much-advertised tracts in the southwest.

ALL lots are 50-ft. front, and all streets improved, as they should be.

IF you are thinking about a lot for a home or speculation, do yourself justice by looking over this up to date, close-in tract.

50 FT. LOTS $800 TO $900.
We have sold more lots to builders who are now building than any tract of its size in the city.

Only 42 out of 127 lots left, so get one, for you don't have many chances to buy 50-ft. lots for $800.

Take Central ave. car, and get off at Whitmore Park.

FOR SALE— Business Property.

FOR SALE— BY. R. J. WIDNEY.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.

A 10-story building at 5th and Broadway.
Alexandria Annex at 5th and Broadway.
A 10-story building at Fifth and Spring.
A 10-story building at Sixth and Spring.
A 10-story building at 7th and Olive.
A $500,000 Athletic Club at 7th and Olive.
Three of our largest merchants, i. e. Barker Bros., Bullock's and Hamburger's,
Now on Broadway, at or below 7th.
Another of our largest department stores
Soon to be at Broadway and 7th.

Here are a few facts,
The investor cannot overlook.

The advanced business section Of Greater Los Angeles is no longer a dream.
It has arrived.

Broadway from 5th to 9th
Is and will be
The highest-priced property,
Because this section
Will always be occupied
By the class of business
That can and does pay
The highest rents.

The best way to arrive at values
Is by comparison.
The recent sale at 5th and Broadway
At $7500 a front foot,
And of the adjacent inside 40 feet
At $5000 a front foot,
Only emphasizes and makes certain
That Broadway, from 7th to 9th,
Will soon be built on
And sell at
As much per front foot
As Broadway, north of 7th.

I can deliver 78x163 feet
On E. side of Broadway, bet. 8th and 9th,
At $2800 a front foot.
This property will, in my opinion,
Sell well within 5 years
At $5000 a front foot.

Remember that
75 per cent. of our present population is,
And 90 per cent. of our future population
Will be tributary to the district
Between 7th, Pico, Main and Figueroa.

If you care to buy, sell or lease
Property so located,

FOR SALE—

A $1000 VINEYARD PRODUCES AN $1800 CROP. IN ONE SEASON.

Etiwanda grape growers "got the money" this fall. They sold their muscat grapes for table use at $40 a ton in Los Angeles and in the East. With 9 tons to the acre, some of them cleared $360 on 5 acres of land. That is big money, and you can do as well if you wish. You can get a producing vineyard at Etiwanda without doing the work and at a very small expenditure of money. Select 5 acres, pay $2.50 per acre cash and $2.50 per acre monthly. We will cultivate and care for your vines free of charge for three years until they come into bearing with a full stand of vines guaranteed. We do the work. Turn over to you a producing vineyard. You have no care, no worry about it. That's our part of the contract.

Etiwanda is only a short ride from Los Angeles in the famous San Gabriel Valley. The conditions there are just right for grapes. The land is level, water is piped to every 5 acres. Surrounding towns furnish all modern conveniences, good schools, churches, stores, etc. You can buy this land at from $200 to $250 an acre on the above easy terms, planted land, with free care for three years. Investigate this—there is money in it for YOU. My Free Art Folder tells the whole story. Get it, then see Etiwanda. Excursions daily.

TROUBLE.

FURIOUS FIGHTS IMPENDING IN WAR TO DRY UP CHICAGO.

Bitter Struggle Between Anti-Saloon Campaigners and the Personal Liberty League.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—"Make Caicago dry for its own sake and for the vast moral influence, such a victory would have in achieving ultimate prohibition for the nation."

"Let us accept the challenge of these misguided zealots and fake reformers, beat them at their own game and thus advance immeasurably the cause of personal liberty everywhere."

First of these is the slogan of the temperance army, which is mustering its force and deploying its divisions to drive the saloon out of Chicago next spring. Second is the rallying cry of the United Societies, the Personal Liberty League, and the liquor interests of the second city of the nation.

Events are taking shape for what is likely to prove the most remarkable battle ever waged in an American municipality for and against the saloon. Theoretically, it is to be a battle of ballots at the last, but if the turn of the tide this way or that be matter of doubt, the world may well be prepared for something more stirring.

A month or more ago 40,000 foes of the saloon marched through the streets of Chicago with floats and banners that told of a protest and a hope. A fortnight later as many thousand German citizens marched the same streets. In these two long columns were visualized, in a way, the armies which are preparing for the shock of battle next April. They might have been called the standing armies, the forces already equipped for action. Behind each of these standing armies, waiting for the call, are scores of thousands of volunteers, who will enlist in the service and fight till the last ballot is cast on election daq. If victory rests on the one side the saloon will go; if on the other, it will stay until the attacking force is ready for another assault.

THE STUNT.

At this stage in the preliminary skirmishes the anti-saloon army is more interesting for the zeal and spirit it displays than for a definite knowledge of its actual fighting strength. Never before have the chances seemed so bright for concert of action among the foes of the liquor traffic. Not all the details of the game of war on that side have been mapped out, but the first task necessary to the setting of the ultimate battle appears to be an easy one. It is up to the anti-saloon leaders to procure the signatures of some sixty thousand qualified voters to a petition to have placed on the aldermanic ticket next spring a proposition whether or not the saloon shall be voted out of Chicago. It is the question, already voted on by many cities and towns in Illinois, of license or no license.

Enlisted in the fight as dependable soldiers will be the Illinois Anti-Saloon League membership, which already has succeeded in making thirty-six counties in the State absolutely dry and banished the drink traffic from hundreds of towns and villages in other counties. James K. Shields, superintendent of the League, addressed letters to 150 ministers in Chicago asking their judgment of the wisdom of a movement to storm the saloons. From them 140 replies were received, heartily indorsing the proposed campaign. These ministers are counted upon to recruit their congregations up to fighting efficiency and furnish one of the most valiant divisions of the attacking army.

Charles R. Jones, chairman of the National Prohibition Committee, is expected to swing the full force of his organization into line of battle. The committee's headquarters are in Chicago, and its operations can be conducted with the advantage of a close range survey of the field. A committee of 100, with Attorney John H. Hill as its active spirit and with its personnel representing vast material interests in the city is depended upon to render yeoman service at the critical stages. The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Cook county, with Mrs. Emily Hill as its executive head, is an influence to be reckoned into the equation, as is the Catholic Total Abstinence Society, an organization which wields a tremendous power in the Roman Catholic Church. At the head of this is Father P. J. O'Callaghan of the Paulist Fathers, the national president. Still another division is the Young People's Christian Temperance Union, presided over by F. D. L. Squires. It is an organization of 500 young people's societies, having a total membership of 40,000.

OTHER SIDE.

On the other side the standing army, in addition to those pecuniarily interested in the liquor traffic, is the organization known as the United Societies of Local Self-Government. Subsidiary to and allied with it is the Liberty League, boasting an active membership of 60,000. The ottal membership of the United Societies is close to 200,000 now, and this number will be increased as the campaign progresses. When its annual report was read by President George L. Pfeiffer last May, the organization was composed of 431 constituent societies divided thus; German, 334; Bohemian, 167; Polish, 84; Italian, 27; miscellaneous, 19. One hundred and thirty-one new societies were enrolled during the fiscal year, ending in May. The body is now in the third year of its existence.

Making allowance for members not naturalized, the United Societies has over 160,000 legal voters in Cook county within its influence. That this claim is not exaggerated is indicated in the fact that it was able in five days to obtain nearly 100,000 signatures to an election petition prepared by it for submission. Liberty League had 45,000 members last May. The number has increased greatly since then. The members of this organization are "duly enrolled, registered and subdivided into wards and precincts." It is doubtful if there is a more thoroughly organized body in Chicago than the United Societies or the Liberty League.

In the headquarters at No. 81 South Clark street there is an elaborate card index of members. There are kept the names, residences, political affiliations of the voters and other data valuable for quick reference. It is known for what candidates and which party each man voted at a primary or an election. Frank H. Hitchcock might go to these headquarters and learn something to his liking about how to "keep tab" on voters. The ward, the precinct, the house number—they are all there, plus some pertinent comment now and then as to the characteristics of men.

Modesty is not one of the shining virtues of the United Societies or of the Liberty League. It finds that the setting forth of its voting strength, its political power, is a very effective sort of eloquence with candidates of either of the two great parties. It takes pains to say that to it was due the defeat of John J. Healy for reëlection as State's Attorney, and that the Chicago charter was thrust into the discard by the hostile votes it mustered. In his report, President Pfeiffer said: "We are a unit on one point, namely: 'Any charter bill (before the Legislature) which does not contain in clear and irrevocable terms suitable provisions for home rule on all questions of a purely local character, must be defeated, and we hold that the regulation of the observance of Sunday is a question to be decided by each community.'

"The success of our opponents depends largely upon the prevailing ignorance of the moral and economic character, and the inevitable disastrous consequence of their movement. Their arguments are not and cannot be supported by principle, science or experience. Not able to appeal to reason, they create prejudice by discriminating misinformations and falsehood, to belittle our influence and to villify our character."

Summarizing the political success of the United Societies in Cook county at the last general election, President Pferffer says that of the six candidates for the Senate indorsed four were elected; for the House thirty-seven of the forty-seven were successful; five of nine municipal court candidates won. At the aldermanic election of last April thirteen of the nineteen candidates indorsed were elected, as a result of which, according to the societies' reckoning, forty-seven of the seventy members in the City Council are in sympathy with the principles of the organization.

THE WORRYING ONES.

That the personal liberty forces are on the anxious seat regarding the future, and that the coming campaign will not be a kid-glove affair may be gathered from this excerpt taken from a booklet of the constitution and bylaws issued by the United Societies:

"While religious liberty is guaranteed and the church is separated from the state, the citizens (of Illinois) are, nevertheless, commanded to 'keep the Sabbath holy.' They are prohibited from recuperating and enjoying themselves after their own fashion on the first day of the week. In addition, the harmless use of beer and wine is made a crime in many localities, and the fanatics themselves confess that they are bound not to lay down their arms until all saloons are closed, all breweries destroyed, and all spirituous and malt liquors banished. They do not wish to promote the cause of temperance, but blind-pig whisky drinking and hypocrisy. By their zeal and their untiring activity they have gained a tremendous and still growing influence over the legislative bodies. Single-handed the liberal-minded citizen cannot oppose effectively these obnoxious demands. The whole nation will sink into shameful slavery unless all the enemies of a professed piety and compulsory abstinence resolve to stand together."

Walter R. Michaelis, chairman of the Political Action Committee of the United Societies, said the plans of campaign on his side would not be mapped out until it was learned whether or not the anti-saloon element succeeded with its petition.

"You can be assured that we will fight and fight hard," he said with a smile. "Sunday saloons in Chicago have not been closed since 1873, and the administration which closed them met with quick political disaster. We do not purpose that these reformers for revenue, these fanatics and hypocrites, shall invade our rights. We have a sense of our own strength, and we do not fear the outcome if there is to be a battle next spring."

The sparks of the anti-saloon campaign will begin to fly from December 5 to 9, at which time the national convention of the league will be held here. This gathering is expected to be the biggest assembly of liquor foes ever held in America. During that week district meetings will be held in all parts of the city to light the neigshborhood fires in the cause of local option. The most eloquent "drys" of the nation will be here to sound the war alarm at a monster banquet at the Auditorium on the night of December 6.

Three representatives in Congress—James M. Miller of Kansas, Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama and John W. Langley of Kentucky—are scheduled to give the movement impetus. George R. Stuart of Tennessee, who is said to be another Sam Jones in effective oratory, and R. B. Glenn of North Carolina, will add to the chorus of protest against the liquor traffic. Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan of Chicago and Rev. J. M. Cleary of Minnesota will represent the Roman Catholic sentiment. With the campaign beginning on this scale, it is the intention to gridiron Chicago and get close to the individual voter in winning recruits to the cause from that time until the polls close on election day.

POWERFUL INDORSEMENT.

That some big railroad, mercantile and industrial concerns may throw their moral, if not active, influence into the scales on the side of the "dry" army is quite probable, although the liquor element laughs at the suggestion. For instance, the Pennsylvania, the Illinois Central, the New York Central and the Santa Fé managements have a rule which reads something like this: "The use of intoxicants by employés while on duty is prohibited. Their habitual use, or the frequenting of places where they are sold, is sufficient cause for dismissal." The Chicago and Alton and the St. Paul have similar regulations, and the tendency is to make them more, rather than less, drastic.

A representative of Marshall Field & Co. is quoted by the Prohibition press as saying:

"We will not, to our knowledge, place a young man who drinks in our business, and even though a man should apply for a position whose ability and other all-round qualifications would seem to fit him for the position, if we knew or discovered that he was a drinking man, we would decline to consider his application. Any man in our employ who acquires the habit of drink, even though moderately, is marked down in our estimation. Unless we can dissuade him from this serious fault, we feel compelled to do without his services."

In its wholesale and retail establishments, Field & Co. employ 10,000 men and women.

It may be a clew to popular sentiment to say that thirty-eight Com-

Liberal Party Leaders Hold All Trump Cards.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The political situation in England at the present time is one of quite extraordinary interest. The British people are exhibiting a much more lively concern for the happenings in Parliament and the doings and sayings of their politicians than has been customary for many years past. The summer months, which are usually the dead season in the political world, have seen the unwonted spectacle of crowded political meetings throughout the length and breadth of the country. The addresses of Asquith and Lloyd George, Balfour and Roseberry have been anticipated with eager interest, published verbatim in hundreds of newspapers and then distributed by the thousand in pamphlet form.

And all this, at a time when no pending election stimulates the public to a transitory excitement. The sporting interest, which, at election time makes even the most cold-blooded citizen an eager partisan, has not been the mainspring of the activities of recent months, though it may now be true that a general election cannot be long delayed.

REALLY CONCERNED.

The people are for once really concerned in real issues. Whatever happens in the political world during the next few months, will vitally affect the life of the people, and the people know it. Politics have ceased to be a matter of more or less remote interest to the masses. They are coming home to the ordinary man and to his wife. Rich and poor are alike affected, and none are indifferent.

Shall the growing burden of the national expenditure be met by taxing the rich man's superfluities or the poor man's necessities? That is the issue which the British people have now to decide; and bound up with it, and indeed overshadowing it, is the further issue whether this and every other question is to be settled ultimately by the people themselves or by the House of Lords. To such issues none can be indifferent.

To realize how matters have reached this point it is necessary to go back to the days when the present Liberal administration began its career. In January, 1906, the people, tired and a little ashamed of the wild debauch of imperialism which had cost them thousands of valuable lives and £250,000,000 in money, flung aside their former idols and returned a liberal government to power by an unexampled majority.

HUGE WAR DEBT.

The Liberals found themselves faced with a national debt of over £794,000,000, an increase of £160,000,000, as a direct result of the South African war, and with an enormously enhanced annual charge for the army and navy. Moreover there was a universal feeling that much would have to be done in the way of social reform. Foreign war inevitably means the cessation of all reforming efforts at home, and there was much leeway to be made up. Many of the reforms demanded would inevitably cost much money. The financial outlook for the Liberals, therefore, appeared to be anything but rosy.

One of the first things to be done was to heal, as far as possible, the wounds left by the war. To the Prime Minister, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, more than to any other man, was due the success of the efforts put forth in this direction. South Africa today, united, self-governing, loyal to the empire, is a triumphant vindication of his principles.

With regard to home affairs, a number of measures of considerable importance were introduced and duly passed through the House of Commons, but many of them, notably those dealing with education, the drink trade, electoral reform and land valuation, were either rejected by the House of Lords or so mutilated that the government decided to drop them altogether. Thus the party of progress found itself thwarted again and again by its old foe. The rank and file of the Liberals became dispirited; the government distinctly lost caste in the eyes of the people, and many of the more militant among the Liberals and Radicals, felt that the policy of "filling up the cup" was being carried too far, and that it was time the gage of battle was thrown down and the fight with the Lords should now be carried to a decisive issue.

FIGHT DELAYED.

Mr. Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had to provide for an expenditure calculated to exceed by fully £14,000,000 the expenditure of the previous year. The additional sum was needed to pay for the new Dreadnoughts in the navy, and the newly-established old age pensions—two objects concerning which both parties in the state were in substantial agreement, so that there has been very little controversy as to the amount of money required to be raised. The battle is wholly in respect to the method of raising it.

As there was no probability of the national expenditure declining in succeeding years, the new taxation had to be of a permanent and if possible, a naturally expanding character. Again, the Chancellor had to accomplish by means of the finance bill, one at least, of the great social reforms, which the recent action of the House of Lords had sought to prevent. That is to say, he had to secure by means of excise and licensing taxation some of the objects aimed at by the licensing bill, which the Lords rejected. And, finally, he had to demonstrate in the most unmistakable fashion, the possibility of meeting all the nation's financial burdens without departing from the principles to which the Liberal government and the Liberal party are firmly committed.

Looking round on the way in which the burden of taxation is divided as between class and class the Chancellor finds that the rich pay much less and the working classes much more

A FRIEND IN POWER.

GODFATHER WHO LOOKS AFTER FRENCH SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

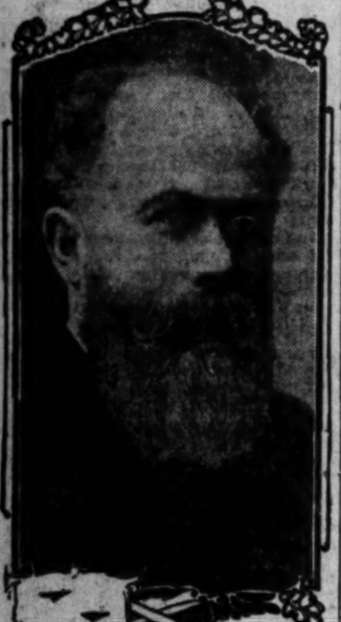
Henry Cheron Has Rooted Out Graft and Improved Conditions in the Army and Now Has "Rough Job" of Seeing That the Thieves Are Thrown Out of the Navy and That Jack Gets All He Is Entitled to.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Henry Chéron, otherwise known to the two services as "the good bearded fairy (la bonne fée barbue)" is one of the most remarkable Frenchmen of the younger generation. It is notorious that France is suffering today from a bad attack of the "piston" or graft and that this weakness in the national character is the cause of endless corruption and abuse.

When, however, a Frenchman does set himself to redress abuses, few men, of whatever nationality they may be, can compare with him in wholehearted devotion to his task. Nothing on earth can hold him back. No one on earth could bribe him. He will go through with the work or die in the attempt.

Such a man is Henry Chéron, whose admirable activity as Under Secretary of State for War in M. Clemenceau's ministry marked him out as the right man to tackle a rough job. When M. Briand, some weeks ago, succeeded M. Clemenceau as president of the Council, he could find no rougher job for M. Chéron than to create an undersecretaryship of State for the Navy, give the portfolio to him and bid him set to work to do for the navy what he had already done for the army.



French Foe of Graft.

Henry Cheron, who is now reorganizing the French navy, after having made things comfortable for the men of the army.

M. Chéron's career, short as it has been—he is only 42—proves him to be a man of wonderful energy. A barrister by profession, he became Mayor of Caen at the age of 27. Twelve years later he decided to enter parliamentary life. He was at once elected deputy for Caen. Six months afterwards M. Clemenceau, a keen judge of men—offered him the portfolio of Under Secretary of State for War. This was in 1906.

M. Chéron threw himself, with characteristic energy into his new work. An ardent patriot he holds that if it is every citizen's duty "to pay the blood tax," it is equally the duty of his superiors to see that his life is made tolerable during the two or three years of military service. From the outset he strove to make the soldier's lot a happy one. The curse of a soldier's existence and the beginning of disaffection is bad feeling. Diseased and often putrid meat, moldy bread, badly cooked food, unscrupulous and fraudulent contractors, weak or corrupt government inspectors, these were the objectives of M. Chéron's first crusade.

Within a few months the mess of the "piou-piou," as the French private soldier is nicknamed, was a palatable meal. M. Chéron became the terror of the wicked contractor. The Under Secretary of State for War was ubiquitous. Wherever fraudulent or negligent practices were robbing the soldier of his food, M. Chéron, thanks to his perfectly diabolical instinct, was sure to swoop down when least expected. A few sharp sentences to six months' or a year's imprisonment sufficed to convince the contractor that M. Chéron was in dead earnest.

His next step was to order that every regiment should be provided with a cookery book. In this interesting manual the regimental cook finds every possible direction as to how to vary the menu, and how to make the best use of the material placed at his disposal, not to speak of the recipe for each dish. A similar manual is now in the possession of every ship's cook as well.

In the course of his visits to barracks, M. Chéron discovered that the soldier's bedding was of the most primitive kind. A circular was forthwith issued to the generals commanding divisions, instructing them to see that the troops were provided with clean and comfortable sleeping accommodations.

Next M. Chéron noticed that many of the soldiers never wore socks. Horrified, he inquired into the matter, and learned that no provision was made by the army clothing department to supply them. The soldier had to buy his own socks, the result being in a vast number of cases that he preferred to go without rather than spend his meager pocket money in buying them for himself. Another circular; and every soldier now receives socks with his uniform.

M. Chéron now asked himself what the soldier did with his leisure hours. Inquiry proved that the "piou-piou" had no better way of passing his leisure than to frequent the wine shop and the music hall. A fresh circular was issued urging the officers to provide means of recreation, and suggesting that walks and excursions to points of interest in the districts surrounding the barracks, under the guidance of an officer, non-commissioned or otherwise, who would act as cicerone, would be an excellent counter-attraction to cards and drink. M. Chéron went so far as to advise that small parties might be taken to visit historic monuments at no great distance, and made arrangements that they might even occasionally be lodged for a night in the barracks of neighboring towns, where regiments are stationed. Thus the well-conducted soldier might, from time to time, be granted a pleasant holiday from the monotony of barrack-room life, and at the same time have his patriotic spirit kindled and his mind instructed by seeing national monuments, art galleries, museums, etc., under intelligent guidance. This circular must have been instantly acted upon, for two or three days later a party of soldiers was encountered being taken over the national porcelain manufactory at Sevres by an officer whose commentaries were being listened to with evident interest.

It must not be though that these reforms were easy to effect. The Frenchman is a born "blagueur," and M. Chéron was mercilessly chaffed and made fun of on every variety stage; but M. Chéron is too much in earnest to heed chaff. The man who for months would spend his nights in a railway train in order to pay a surprise visit to barracks all over the country so that he might satisfy himself that his instructions were being carried out, was not likely to be turned aside from his path by good-humored ridicule. In time however, the scoffer ceased to scoff, for it was evident that M. Chéron was doing a great and patriotic work.

As Under-Secretary of State for the Navy, M. Chéron has already done wonders. A strike of "inscrits maritimes," or naval reserve men, had been going on at Marseilles for weeks, and the trade of Algeria with France was paralyzed. M. Chéron rushed off to Marseilles, called the representatives of the sailors and the shipowners to meet him at the maritime prefecture, placed them in two separate rooms, and told them that a solution must be found. Within a few hours the strike was settled.

Then M. Chéron, instead of going back to Paris, as most ministers would have done, paid a flying visit to a ship in harbor. He scrutinized the men's quarters, the kitchen, tasted the bread, smelt the tinned meat, satisfied himself that the lifeboats were in working order, and was off again before the captain, who had never seen such a thing in his life, had recovered from his stupefaction.

From Marseilles M. Chéron went on to Toulon, hailed a cab, and drove to the naval hospital. Nearly all his visits are incognito, and woe betide officials who are caught napping. No one who has followed current events in France during the last few years can have failed to notice the constant mutinies which break out aboard the ships of the fleet. These mutinies are seldom very grave in themselves, but they nearly always have for their cause bad or insufficient food. It is symptomatic that for some weeks past not a single case of this nature has been reported. The fact is, "Jack" is beginning to believe the big bearded fairy has waved his wand over the fleet, as he did over the army, and that he now has a friend who will not only promise but perform.

A Weary's Man's Dirge.

The same thing over every day,
The street cars run the same old way,
The drivers beat the same old nags,
And actors spring the same old gags;
Old faces show up every morn,
Some wear the same old look forlorn,
The same old ice man goes his rounds,
The same old smoke—the same old sounds.

The same old knockers ply their trade,
The same old butcher's bills are paid (?)
Just as in the days of long ago
The same old grafters get the dough;
I'm waiting for the gladsome day
When, on my final trip, I may
Pass through the peaceful heavens blue
And really gaze on something new.

Thought-Drift.

Dim hour by hour through autumn's wane
The silkweed lets her plumes adrift;
They rove—they sink—and yet again
Upon the wavering breeze they lift.

No count is made of where they roam;
They are not found, they are not lost—
Soft wanderers without a home,
Yet scathless to the sworded frost.

Not otherwise dim hour by hour
I shed white thoughts into the wind—
Sole drift of my life a vanished flower;
They are not lost—yet none may find.

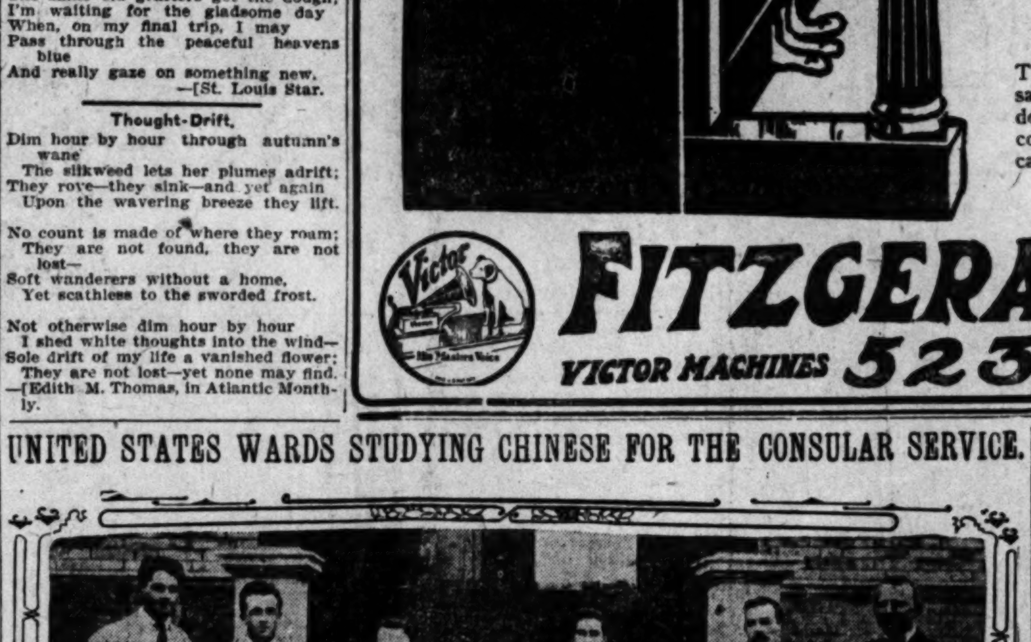
UNITED STATES WARDS STUDYING CHINESE FOR THE CONSULAR SERVICE.



The student interpreters attached to the American Legation at Peking. In the center is Dr. C. D. Tenney, Chinese Secretary of Legation. Reading from left to right: Mr. Jameson, Mr. Myers, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Peck, Assistant Chinese Secretary; Mr. Henry, Mr. Gale, Mr. Viney and Mr. Johnson.

PEKING, Oct. 10.—While China is sending her sons to the United States to be educated, the American government has in China a class of bright young men who are being educated in Chinese at government expense. This is a fact about which little is known by the majority of Americans, but it furnishes a most valuable contribution to that better knowledge of China and the Chinese which is bound to play a most important part in the future relations of the two great countries.

Attached to the American Legation in Peking are ten young Americans whose status is that of student interpreters. These young men are wards of the government, children of the Department of State.

Their primary purpose in life is the study of the Chinese oral and written language. The special incentive of their work is future usefulness in the consular service, or in any capacity in which the knowledge they are acquiring may be of value to their country.

The first appointment of students interpreters authorized by Congress was made in 1902. The existing law provides for ten in all. Under the regulations issued by the Department of State in conformity with the spirit of the law, it is specified that to be eligible a young man must be between 19 and 26 years of age, of good character, strong constitution, good deportment and education. Applicants are first examined by the State Department, the appointments being made from the list of those who have passed the department's examination.

Doctors Must be Supported.

Occasionally an economist rises up to remind us that crime has its material advantages. Consider, for instance, all the constabulary, a considerable proportion of the lawyers, judges, prison officials, sheriffs, night watchmen and a miscellaneous host in some way concerned with the busines created by crime—what would they do for a living were crime suddenly to be abolished? In the same way, perhaps, off against the cost to humanity of bodily diseases some gains might properly be set, in order that the final estimate be less appalling than is the gross amount. Thus, when that Cornell professor tells us that the waste by sickness in the United States amounts to more than a billion dollars a year, it may be reasonable to note an exception. How about the livelihood of doctors, nurses, pharmacists and all their associates and dependents? Apparently, there is some increment from disease somewhere to sustain the hope that the net loss may be something less than a billion.—[Providence Journal.

Newport Bay Looms Up.

The Newport Bay Oil Company is pumping its No. 3, and has had as high as 100 barrels, it is asserted, daily. The oil is quite heavy and suitable for roads. The hole is down to 2100 feet, with some 400 feet of sand. It was finished in good shape by shutting off the water, in the first place, above the oil sands wherever needed instead of carrying it down to the sand as was tried in the older wells. The cost was about one-fourth and the work successful.

It is expected several new concerns may start here within the next thirty to sixty days.

The Balboa is still drilling. It is encountering strong gas pressure.

It was in 1881, two years after my arrival in Tokio, that the memorable proclamation appeared coming direct from the Mikado, which promised that within ten years a constitutional form of government would be granted to the country. This meant a decade of strenuous and careful labor on the part of those who had the guidance of the country's affairs. The leading spirit in the policy was known to be Ito, and he immediately planned an extended visit to the lands across the sea, taking with him many prominent or promising officials. They came to this country and then crossed over to England. Thereafter France, Germany and other countries of the European continent got their best attention. The result was not an imitation, as had been expected, of the American houses or the British Parliament, which they considered as lacking in dignity; but an acceptance of the German system as best worthy of trial.

Many causes led to this decision. In the first place, the German executive has always reserved to itself many powers and privileges that the Japanese government was still anxious to retain. Again, the position of the Emperor in Germany closely resembled the relations of the Mikado to his people, a war lord taking his initiative directly, in the final issue, from a religious motive and the warrant of a dignified heredity. Also, Germany has solved in a particularly satisfactory fashion the problem of the systematisation of modern education; and Ito was determined that Japan should not fall behind in science and investigation of all kinds. Moreover the temper of the German people is law-abiding and submissive to authority, and the Japanese are also characterized by these qualities. In Great Britain and the United States the country relies upon individual initiative and amateur statesmanship; but the class that furnishes such material does not yet exist in Japan.

And so Ito brought back with him to Japan the virus of German measles and the people were inoculated. Everything was Germanised, as far as could be. A grand entertainment was given at the Imperial College of Engineering to further the cause of the Red Cross Society, and the Japanese high society heard the tones of "Lohengrin" from a German company.

It was considered necessary to establish grades of nobility so that the Emperor and the Imperial Princes might not stand entirely alone; and dukes, marquises, counts, viscounts and barons were forthwith created. Ito and Inouye became Counts, and remained at this grade till 1895 when both became marquises. No dukedoms were established. These grades were more on the English model than on any other. The old nobility, the ancient daimyos, were ennobled; I had a daimyo-viscount in one of my classes at the university, a somewhat listless student.

Not many assassinations took place in those years. Count Okuma, who was more liberal than the Satsuma-Choshu combination, came into the Foreign Office as Minister in 1890, and an assassin threw a bomb at him as he was leaving the official building one afternoon; I was across the park at the time. The effects just failed of being fatal, and the veteran lost his left leg. The reason for the act was the willingness of Okuma to allow foreigners to sit in Japanese courts alongside of native judges. These were the days of extra-territoriality, when Japan was treated as still barbarian, and unequal to the task of dealing fairly with foreign residents. The system came to an end at the close of the century, much to the country's gratification and relief.

The other minister to fall by an assassin's hand was Viscount Mori of the Department of Education. He had lifted, with his walking stick, the curtain of a sacred shrine at Ise and the act was regarded as sacrilegious. That very evening he was to give an evening reception to Tokio society, and I should have met Ito and the others there. The funeral ceremony at Aoyama gathered us together for a very different and less happy purpose. Mori was stabbed with a long kitchen knife, and his assassin became a hero, whose grave was kept decorated.

Soon after followed the Chinese war, for which the whole structure of the state had been fashioned during these eventful years; another reason why Ito should have preferred German models, Germany being a state always ready for warfare. Its successful completion meant additional powers and prestige for Ito, who became a marquis. At the famous conference of Shimonoseki, he was pitted against the great Li Hung Chang, who would have scorned him as an equal ten years before.

The brilliant victories of the Russian conflict again served to establish Ito in the national confidence. And it is but right to say that he did not harden into a rigid conservatism, as did some of his Satcho associates, but kept liberal and in touch with liberals. He was always a real, far-sighted statesman. Not that he ever became the idol of the people. His life was too inconsistent for that. When the people of Hyogo Ken erected to their old governor at Kobe, a statue in his honor, it was badly maltreated. The statesman had been known to spend most of his spare moments in the company of geisha and women of the town, and a band of young men dragged the statue from its pedestal and flung it into a pond in the redlight quarter, as its proper location. The heroes of the Japanese have been good-living men, as we understand the term. Nothing was done to the perpetrators of the deed; the scandal was hushed.

With the question of Korea to deal with, as its resident-general, Ito came up against the hardest problem of his life. He was hampered with a less desirable class of his nationals, and with a steady and bitter unfriendliness on the part of an ancient and proud people. It had not been generally stated in the press that Ito was made by adoption, in 1907, a Prince of the blood royal of Korea; and so, to a patriotic Korean, he was a usurper as well as an intruder and a tyrant. We can well understand the wrath that boiled up among native hot bloods; and it is difficult to see how he could have escaped murder sooner or later. Perhaps it is better for his fate that he has been cut off before he had survived his usefulness or diminished his glory of success. For in the annals of modern history he will rank with Cavour and Bismarck as the founder of a modern nation, one of the five or six great men of a century.

"Any one who has studied music in Paris knows that some of the best masters there, if they are interested in a voice and really believe its possessor in earnest, will give their time and instructions for nothing. What does it signify, then, that there are not more American girls returning from abroad crowned with Parisian laurels. It means that the girls do not work—that is all."

The Furs of Fashion
In Broad, Generous Assortments At Prices That Represent Savings

There's many a merchant would be afraid to mark such splendid furs so low, because he'd think the public would consider them inferior, and if they had come to us in the ordinary channels you might not have reason to expect such quality and such economy combined.

Boas, scarfs, stoles and muffs in the most practical of furs. We call particular emphasis to

White Coney Furs at $4.95 to $7.95
These are here in both scarfs and throws.

White Fox Furs at $14.95 and $19.50
These are in long throws and ties.

Rugs and Pillow Muffs at $7.50

A Wonderful Sale of Women's Suits
$19.50 The Value Importance of Which Will Reach From Coast to Coast $19.50
Just 4 Styles are Illustrated--Values Beyond Description

To announce a sale of women's suits at $19.50 is not out of the ordinary, but to announce the fact that we are able to sell such garments as we have been fortunate enough to secure in this purchase to sell at $19.50 is so unusual, so remarkable, so far reaching in value effect that we can hardly refrain from using the full line of superlatives in the telling of it.

This sale comes through the personal effort of our representative, who is at present in the New York market, on his fifth trip of the season.

These repeated trips to the market are wonderfully important from our patrons' standpoint, as well as from the fact that it gives us the opportunity to secure such value plums as we announce herewith. They are important because they put you in closer touch with the New York market, affording you equal opportunities with the metropolitan stores of the Atlantic Coast.

We hardly know how to express the enthusiasm we feel in being able to present these garments at the price. They are not ordinary $19.50 garments. They are not ordinary $25 garments. They are garments of a high character, both from material and tailoring standpoints, from the fit and finish. The illustrations will give you a faint idea of what the garments are, but you'll have to see them to note how perfectly they're made from finest broadcloths, serges, cheviots and tweeds.

The coats are 45 and 48-inch lengths and lined with fine satin. As the illustrations show some of the garments have the side and cluster pleated skirts. There's a splendid range of colors, including black, navy blue. Foremost among the shades represented are catawba, gray, raisin, electric, eggplant, green and tan. We want you to come to this sale expecting most remarkable values. You will not be disappointed. Come to the second floor. There's a big quantity, there's a big variety, there's big values.

MILLIONS IN MOTION.

MOVING-PICTURE MANUFACTURE.

TEN THOUSAND THEATERS USING THE PICTURE FILMS.

A Large Industry Developed by the Novel Entertainment—System of Exchange of Films Saves Large Cost to Individual Theaters—A Trust Now Formed.

Forty-five million dollars is a very large sum of money, yet, according to an authority that ought to be reliable, that sum represents the amount of capital invested in the moving-picture enterprise today. It would take rather a long time to make up $45,000,000 from the admission fee of 5 and 10 cents the customary charges at the motion-picture houses, but there are those who are willing to take the chance. There are 10,000 theaters in the country where moving pictures are exhibited. There are also many concerns which produce the moving-picture films, and many more which act as intermediaries between the film producers and those who exhibit the pictures to the public.

As all good things seem to breed trusts, according to the popular belief of the day, the moving picture has bred what has come to be known as a trust by those who compete with it. Ten of the leading film manufactures, in order to prevent duplictaion of films and thereby save expense, and for many other apparently good and sufficient reasons, bought up all the patents for making films which seemed to them to promise the best results in the moving-picture line. They organized and laid down certain rules for the conduct of their joint business.

These manufacturers then licensed 120 film-renting exchanges, which in turn rent the film reels to those who exhibit the pictures to the public, regulating the rental of a reel according to the "newness" of the film. Some motion-picture exhibitors rent films direct from the manufacturers, thus insuring the absolutely first exhibition of the pictures in their theaters; others rent from the exchanges.

SCOPE OF ALLEGED TRUST.

The trust, if it can be called such, embraces not only the film manufacturers, but the film exchanges and the exhibitors of the pictures. The exhibitors, it is claimed, profit by membership in the trust in several ways. First, only they can rent the films produced by the ten manufacturers; second, the manufacturers and exchanges undertake to protect exhibitors from competition by declining to furnish or rent films to those not in the trust, or to accept for membership those whose theaters come within a certain distance of theaters already established, and using the trust films; third, they are guaranteed against a duplication of films in the same city or town, except by special arrangement, and, fourth, they are guaranteed only films that have passed the central board of censors, thus insuring that they are not objectionable from a moral, a religious or a patriotic standpoint.

The motion-picture combination considers this last feature one of the greatest things it has accomplished in the interest of the motion picture business. It has a board of censors composed of three prominent clergymen and four progressive members of the combination. No film that does not receive the approval of this board can be sold or rented. The ten manufacturers are not restricted as to the number of new films they may produce each week, and each manufacturer is actually in competition in the production of films, as well as in the quality of those produced. The output at the present time is said to be about eighteen new films a week, but this is shortly expected to be increased to twenty.

REGULATES USE OF MACHINERY.

There is also a regulation of the trust as to the kind of machinery which shall be used in producing the pictures, the idea being to concentrate the entire interests of the business as far as possible for the benefit of all the members of the combination.

The machinery used in this country, at least, is almost exclusively of American manufacture, and it is claimed to be the best. It costs about $125. It consists of an arc lamp and a rheostat to control the current. The two make a light of about 2500 candle power at its best. There is also the projecting machine, which throws the picture on the screen. It is equipped with an intricate combination of shutters that are operated with inconceivable rapidity to shut off the light between the pictures; for be it remembered that there are a great many separate and distinct pictures on a film reel that are blended with the aid of this machinery so as to appear upon the screen as only one picture with living and moving beings in it acting just as they do in life. A reel that runs seventeen minutes displays probably 10,000 pictures. These pictures are but five-eighths of an inch by one inch in size on the film, yet when propected on the screen are about 14x18 feet in measurement. In other words, the film picture is magnified by the projecting machinery about 48,000 diameters, and, notwithstanding the delicacy and wonderful power of the machine, it takes a very clever operator to prevent the picture on the screen from flickering and injuring the eyes of the observer.

The screens are made of all sorts of white material—fireproofed. There is also a stereopticon required for announcements and other slides. This makes the machinery outfit.

COST OF OUTFIT VARIES.

The cost of establishing a motion picture theater varies, according to the ambition and aspirations of the owner. There is one in this city which is said to have cost its owner $90,000. It is equipped in all respects like a standard theater, with dressing-rooms, stage entrance and the like, because it combines live vaudeville with its picture exhibit. From that sum the cost runs downward, according to the location, size and equipment. The expense of running the theater also varies, according to the film service and the extras provided. Usually, a nimble-fingered young woman, with a resounding piano, constitutes the orchestra. The cost of the film and other service in the $90,000 theater already mentioned is about $600 to $650 a week, almost equal that of a minor theater for dramatic productions.

In the operation of the business the film exchange buys from each manufacturer one or more films a week. The films are on reels and are frequently referred to as reels. The exchange then forms a circuit in its licensed territory and starts the reels on their round to the motion-picture theaters. Some get new reels every day and some less frequently—it all depends upon what they pay for the service. The average cost of a reel to an exchange is about $150, and with 120 exchanges to run it can easily be seen what the manufacturer realizes.

Each theater uses from two to three reels a day in its exhibitions. Two of the avenue theaters representing the trust and the independent interests rent their reels direct from the manufacturers and give their audiences always absolutely new pictures. This service costs them probably $20 a day. It costs some theaters in the city as high as $50 a day and others perhaps more. The rental fluctuates according to the age and condition of the film. Its "newness" is determined by the length of time it has been exhibited.

OF UNLIMITED SCOPE.

The scope of the motion picture is unlimited. Not only can the little machine, probably twelve pounds in weight, with which the negatives for the films are taken, faithfully record everything that can be reproduced with photography, but by clever manipulation the films can be so doctored as to make pictures do the impossible. That is a sort of Irish bull, but it is true. For instance, the films can be so manipulated as to make a human being actually defy the laws of gravity; make a mere man turn a backward somersault over objects as high as the Washington Monument; even make the tiny house fly apparently juggle sticks of cordwood and dumbbells incredibly large.

The possibilities of the motion picture in trick pictures are at times astounding. A very recent film represents a man seated at a table smoking. Around him are scattered pipes, cigars, tobacco, cigarettes and matches. He falls asleep, and almost immediately a tiny fairy princess steps out of the tobacco box, followed by a smaller fairy. The fairy attendant climbs into the pipe and pulls the tobacco over her head.

The man awakens and tries to light his pipe, but it will not draw. He examines it with a magnifying glass, and out of the blue smoke arising from the tobacco the fairy looks up and laughs in his face. Into the tobacco box she jumps and out again with the princess; back into the box again they go, leaving one arm projecting. The man grabs at it and finds in his fingers a large rose. In a moment smoke puffs from it, and out bobs the fairy blowing the smoke of a cigarette at him. Soon the leaves detach themselves from the rose and roll themselves into a cigar. The man lights it and the smoke from it pours into the neck of a bottle on the table. The fairy is inside. The man breaks the bottle, and lo! she is on the tobacco box. She hands him a cigarette and he blows the smoke at her, whereupon she retaliates by setting off the box of matches and disappearing in the blaze.

BUT ONE OF MANY EFFECTS.

This is but one of the charming trick pictures that have recently been produced. There are others perhaps not so mysterious. There was recently exhibited in a local theater a series of pictures showing former President Roosevelt hunting lions in Africa. It was made in Chicago. The lion was actually bought and killed for the purpose, but not before he had almost killed two of the manufacturer's staff. Yet there was President Roosevelt and there the strangely garbed and ungarbed Africans of the jungle. The picture was very realistic and excited much favorable comment.

But it is not in trick pictures that the greatest interest lies. There are films that are instructive as well as entertaining; those that show foreign lands and the customs of the people; those that virtually take the audience to some far-away city or country and give a series of views of its industries. The straw hat industry of Italy, for instance, has been shown in the minutest detail from the gathering of the straw to the packing of the finished hat.

Pictures of this sort are classed as educational. One need not go abroad to see foreign countries; they are brought to his door by the motion picture man.

Then there are other pictures of a highly educational character. With the aid of competent actors and the make-up, scenes of a historical character are enacted probably just as they occurred. Recently one of the manufacturers turned out four reels which depict the life of Washington, with the setting, costuming and environments, historically correct. The same firm has produced three reels depicting the more important incidents in the life of Napoleon.

PASSION PLAY REPRODUCED.

The celebrated Passion Play of Oberammergau has been reproduced with the strictest fidelity, and it is estimated that more than 20,000,000 people have seen it who would never have seen it otherwise. It is one of the most beautiful and inspiring series ever produced. Every one of Shakespeare's plays as produced by eminent players has been reproduced in the motion picture film. So, too, of many French historical plays, the scenes being laid in the very rooms where the incidents they represent occurred, with costumes and manners as they were in the times they recall.

Indeed, the development of the motion-picture film has called into play every conceivable factor necessary to the reproduction of historic, dramatic and national incidents and events. In France the best actors in the theatrical profession do not scruple to forsake their smaller audiences of the theaters at times to present themes for the edification and information of the world at large in the theaters, parks and environments provided by the manufacturers for motion pictures. Some of the greatest dramatic masterpieces of the world have been reproduced by them for this purpose.

The leading American players have not yet reached the stage where they are willing to follow suit, but it is believed the time is not far distant when they will appreciate the honor of giving thousands the pleasure of seeing their great performances in this way to the tens that see them in the legitimate theaters. Sarah Bernhardt will soon appear for the great French film manufacturers. Many of her company have already repeatedly appeared in this way.

The manufacturers of films have also succeeded in producing motion pictures in the natural colors of the objects. It is a most difficult and delicate undertaking to color the thousands of these miniature film pictures that go to make up a series, and yet it has been accomplished in a remarkable way.

The motion-picture theater is frequently spoken of as the poor man's theater, probably because of the extraordinary cheapness of admission, but in all the big cities, as well as in Washington, the most refined of the social circle, the exclusive of the elite, may be found seated side by side with the poor man or the poor woman enjoying a motion-picture exhibit. One evening recently there were twenty-eight automobiles of the finest type lined up against the sidewalk on Pennsylvania avenue, while those who came in them were enjoying a motion-picture show on the inside of one of the theaters. It is almost incredible the business done by these small theaters. One alone, whose seating capacity is 168, had an actual attendance of 14,000 people in one week.

Everybody loves pictures. Adults as well as children will while away hours looking over a picture book. What then, must be the possibilities of the living picture book whose pages are changed daily in the thousands of petite theaters, throughout the land?—[Washington Star.

She Couldn't Help It.

It was a gala occasion at the school, and the young lady principal was very anxious that her pupils should show off to the best advantage before the many ladies present.

So to the first scholar she said:

"Now, Grace, where was Mary Queen of Scots born?"

"At Linlithgow," answered the pupil.

"And why was Mary born there?" asked the teacher.

And sweet little Grace promptly answered:

"Because, ma'am, her mother was staying there."—[Chicago Tribune.

than their fair share. While 680,000 rich persons pay in taxation £38,000,000 a year, 5,100,000 persons of the middle class pay £42,000,000 a year and 38,200,000 working class people pay £40,000,000.

GLARING INEQUALITY.

Thus the three social classes pay approximately the same amount in taxation; the glaring inequality of such a division becomes apparent when we see that the accumulated wealth of the rich amounts to £12,000,000,000, of the middle class to £3,000,000,000 and of the whole of the working class to only £1,000,000,000. He finds, too, that land escapes almost entirely the burdens which fall on most other kinds of property, and that this immunity is fruitful cause of social evils.

The greatness of the budget is that it redresses, or at any rate, begins to redress, these injustices. It opens a new epoch in democratic finance, because it begins to place the heavy burdens on the broad shoulders, not indeed exempting the poor, but making all classes bear, as in the United States, an equitable share of the common burden. A further graduation of the income tax, making large incomes pay at a higher rate than smaller ones, an increase of the death duties, especially on very large estates, an increase in the licensing duties and a series of taxes on land are the principal means by which the Chancellor proposes to secure his ends.

A strong attempt is being made by those whose interests are affected by the new taxes to create prejudice against them by denouncing them as socialistic. Nothing could be more absurdly inaccurate. Whether the budget proposals are just or unjust, wise or unwise, they are certainly not socialism. Indeed they are denounced by the more extreme socialists as a delusion and a snare.

SOCIALISTS UNSATISFIED.

The opponents of private property find little to gratify them in the budget. On the other hand it is supported by many whom it is ludicrous to think of as being concerned in a predatory attack on property. The six richest men in the House of Commons as it happens, are all Liberals and they are all strong supporters of the budget. Their names are W. H. Lever (soap manufacturer,) Sir Weetman Pearson (contractor,) Sir Christopher Furniss (ship-owner,) Alfred Mond (alkali manufacturer,) Sir J. T. Brunner (alkali manufacturer) and A. H. Crosfield (soap manufacturer.)

To the majority of the House of Lords, however, the budget is a thing accurst. Some of the wilder spirits openly threaten to reject the finance bill when it reaches them from the Commons, as it must in a few days. Whether they carry with them in this purpose the responsible leaders of their party in the House and in the country is a matter which is, to say the least of it, open to doubt. But the irresponsible may be quite numerous enough to overcome the objections of Lord Lansdowne, their leader.

BUDGET POPULAR.

The budget is immensely popular. In a general election following upon the usurpation of power by the upper house the Liberals and Labor parties would almost certainly be returned by large majorities. The budget would be safe. But what would then become of the Lords? Their power to thwart the people's will would be at an end. The demand for the limitation or abolition of their veto would be overwhelming. Any Liberal government would be bound to give effect to it, and that the people's will in this matter might be ensured to fulfillment, Mr. Asquith, or any other Liberal leader for whom the King might send, would insist, as a condition of taking office, upon his Majesty's undertaking to create new peers, should it be necessary, in order, to force a reform bill through the House of Lords.

With matters in this position the situation has been rendered a little more complicated by the intervention of the King. His Majesty has interviewed the leaders on both sides, and there can be little doubt that the purposes of this intervention is to stave off the coming conflict. The King has always acted as a strictly constitutional monarch, and it is not surprising that he should not be enamoured of revolutions. He would doubtless prefer a solution which would not involve any change in the Constitution. Yet it is extremely unlikely that His Majesty has been bringing pressure to bear on the Liberal government to patch up a compromise with their opponents. It is much more likely that his influence has been directed to securing the cooperation of the conservative leaders—Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne—in an effort to prevent the Lords committing political suicide.

Whatever may be the exact issue upon which the battle is joined, it is certain that the coming struggle will be one of the most interesting and exciting of modern times—as keen as the Home Rule election of twenty years ago and more far-reaching and momentous in its results. New reputations will be made and old reputations will be enhanced and sometimes, perhaps, destroyed.

The Irish Nationalists are an independent party of eighty-three members led by John Redmond, one of the ablest Parliamentarians and most brilliant orators in the House of Commons. They recognize the earnest efforts of the Liberals to ameliorate the condition of the country, but they remain unshaken in their determination to obtain Home Rule, and would willingly ally themselves with any party that would help them to realize that end. Their sympathies are entirely democratic and in the budget struggle they give a general support to the government, though in certain details they think Ireland should have received more generous treatment—one of their constant grievances being the over-taxation, as they consider it, of their fellow countrymen in Ireland.

The Labor party, composed in the main of labor-union representatives, and a distinct political organization, is lead by Arthur Henderson, and its most prominent war cry is "Death to the old party, no compromise, not even the slightest accommodation," and often with the balance of power, in closely contested districts, is so hide bound as to go to the polls and decline to use its power in any stated case where either the Liberal of Conservative parties would be benefited. The Labor people have thirty-one members in the present Parliament.

Roscoe Anderson, a senior at the University of Minnesota, is organizing a Dr. Cook club among the students. It is his intention to make a dash for the pole himself next summer, in case he gets his plans perfected. He has been in Alaska and knows much of arctic conditions and dangers.

Hudson Mexim, the famous inventor, started his professional career in the printing and publishing business in 1883. Five years later he began to make ordnance and explosives. He was first to make smokeless powder in the United States. He submitted samples to the government for trial. In 1890 he built a factory at Maxim, N. J. (named for him.) Later he sold the smokeless powder plant and formulas and became an engineer. The government adopted his invention. In 1901 he sold to the United States government the formula of "Maximite." It was the first high explosive to be fired through heavy armor plate. He has invented many kinds of explosives and gunners' appliances. Mr. Maxim's idea of rest is a change of work. He has been resting a great deal these years—as witness the various inventions he has brought forth.

Harlan I. Smith of the department of anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History has returned from a three months' trip along the northwest coast of America from Seattle to Skagway. Over 300 photographs, of which 192 were on 6½x8½ plates, were taken to show as completely as possible all the phases of Indian life met with on the trip at Victoria, North Saanich, Alert Bay, Rivers Inlet, Bella Coola, Port Simpson, along Nass River, at Wrangel and along the Stickine, Iskut and Chilkat rivers. Photographic prints illustrating ethnological conditions were also purchased wherever possible.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

MRS. A. D. WINSHIP of Racine, Wis., although near her seventy-ninth birthday anniversary, has entered the classes at Ohio State University for the year. For the last two years she has been attending summer school at the university, taking special studies. She has progressed so satisfactorily that she has decided to take a regular course. She will study psychology and literature especially. She says that she has planned a course of study that will keep her occupied until she reaches her ninetieth birthday.

Mrs. Agnes J. Connell, the only woman in this country who has papers permitting her to navigate a steamer of any class in any ocean, is now running the steamer J. L. Luckenbach from New Orleans to Boston. She is known over all the world, for a steamer is her only home, and she has sailed everywhere with her husband, Capt. William J. Connell. She is an accredited pilot for the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River, and also holds a government license entitling her to navigate any kind of craft in any waters.

Dr. Sofie Herzog of Brazoria, Tex., is said to be the only woman railroad surgeon in the world. She has held the position of surgeon for the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad ever since that line was built, several years ago. In addition to her railroad duties she has a large private practice. As surgeon for the railroad, Dr. Herzog has gone through many experiences, but in no instance was there the slightest falter in the quick and effective performance of her work.

Miss Mabel Sturtevant of Brookfield, Md., has been in Halifax, Nova Scotia, for the last month doing research work under the Braun International Scholarship, which sends her to all parts of the world to study history and sociology. She has accomplished a feat never before attempted by an American woman and perhaps by not more than a dozen men, having ascended Mount Major or Melancholy Mountain.

Miss Anne Morgan now wants the navy yard at Washington improved, especially in the way of lunchrooms, changes having been made under the direction of the National Civic Federation of Women so successfully at other navy yards. Her plan contemplates the erection of a one-story building to seat 500.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

WILLIAM WOODWARD, a Lehigh Valley railroad conductor, with a run between Wilkesbarre and Sayre, Pa., has what is believed to be the most remarkable record of any conductor in the United States. He is now serving his forty-second year on the road. All of that time he has been a conductor, and, what is more remarkable, he has had the same run—Wilkesbarre to Sayre and return—continuously.

Rev. T. H. McConnell of Chicago and Rev. Stado Munneke of Mendota, Ill., are candidates for the pastorate of Calvary Church, Milwaukee. The former occupied the pulpit of the Milwaukee church three weeks ago and the latter two weeks ago. To the surprise of the congregation, each preached the same sermon, even to the literary flights of fancy.

A. W. Austin is the oldest street peddler in Chicago in years, but he is young in service. He is 91 years old, and he obtained a license yesterday to peddle wooden cups. "I was born in Vermont on May 23, 1818," he said, "I served in the Seventy-first New York, Twelfth New York, and Second Vermont regiments. I fought at Bull Run, Harper's Ferry, and a number of other places. I never got a pension from the government, never asked one, and don't want any. I have no friends or relatives, but I only want a chance to work."

Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, owns and manages an extensive railroad system in Texas, is president of one bank and director in three others and owns and conducts cattle ranches and cotton plantations. He even raises flowers and has the best greenhouse with one exception in America. This is not conducted for his personal pleasure but as an investment which has become very profitable. Last year he sold $160,000 worth of American Beauty roses, wholesale selling price.

Charles Mulford Robinson of Rochester, N. Y., has been commissioned to draw plans for the beautification of Des Moines, Iowa, a city of much public spirit. Mr. Robinson will include in his general scheme the contemplated improvement of the east bank of the Des Moines River.

Andrew Carnegie is said to be managing his Scotch estate so carefully that it returns a profit each year. The game and fruit from the lands about Skibo Castle bring good prices, and every detail of marketing them is studied in the most business-like manner.

Henry M. Flagier started life as clerk in a country store at Canandaigua, N. Y., where he was born in 1830. He later, removed to Saginaw, Mich., where he became a salt manufacturer. He afterward went into the oil busines and finally became connected with the management of the Standard Oil Company.

OVER THE SEA.

BERNARD DERNBURG, German colonial secretary, has been studying cotton-growing conditions in the United States with a view to introducing American methods in cotton growing in German South Africa.

Sir Moses Ezekiel, the American sculptor, has lived in Rome the greater part of his life. He was born in Virginia in 1844, and was a student at the Virginia Military Institute at the beginning of the Civil War. Enlisting with many of his fellow-cadets, he served for a time and until captured. He went to Berlin in 1870 to study art, and for four years struggled against adversity, giving lessons in English to earn a living. In 1874 the Royal Academy of Berlin gave the "Roman" prize to his mystical figure-piece, "Israel." Soon after this the now successful artist went to Rome. His first commission there came from America and resulted in the symbolic group, "Religious Liberty," which was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

A wealthy resident of Moscow owns the smallest watch in the world, which once belonged to the last Empress of Brazil. It was made in Geneva by the famous watchmaker, W. The Dowager Duchess d'Uzes, is, in spite of her age, one of the most energetic women in France. She is president of the Lyceum Club, a women's club with clubhouses in London, Paris and Berlin; a sculptor, a social leader and a devoted huntress.

Glennon to be captains, Lieutenant-Commanders John F. Hubbard and M. L. Miller to be commanders, Lieuts. William D. Leahy and Andrew T. Graham to be lieutenant-commanders.

Col. Henry L. Harris, Coast Artillery Corps, commanding the post at Fort Hancock, N. J., has been relieved from duty and ordered to his home preparatory to retirement for age, December 4. Col. Harris is from Pennsylvania, and was graduated from the United States Military Academy in June, 1869, and from the Artillery School in 1880. His entire service has been in the artillery arm, in which he reached the grade of colonel in October, 1906.

Capt. Richard T. Mulligan, detail officer of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, will be the first commander of the new big battleship Delaware, which will be the first of the so-called American dreadnoughts to be placed in commission. It is expected she will be ready for service about the first of January. Capt. Mulligan is from New Jersey, and entered the navy in 1871. During the Spanish War he was attached to the cruiser New York and since then has made a long cruise in command of the gunboat Yorktown.

Commander Robert L. Russell, in charge of the fifth lighthouse district, stationed at Baltimore, has been ordered to Washington as judge-advocate-general of the navy, relieving Capt. Edward H. Campbell, who, it is expected, will be placed in command of one of the new battleships.

Col. H. O. S. Heistand, U.S.A., adjutant-general of the Department of the East, has been ordered to the Philippines as adjutant-general, and will sail from San Francisco on December 5 to assume his new duties. Col. Heistand is now at the head of his grade in the army, and when he severs his connection with the Governor's Island headquarters will have been on duty continuously in New York for almost six years.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Questioner.

I called the boy to my knee one day,
And I said: "You're just past four;
Will you laugh in that same light-hearted way
When you're turned, say, thirty more?"
Then I thought of a past I'd fain erase—
More clouded skies than blue—
And I anxiously peered in his upturned face
For it seemed to say:
"Did you?"

I touched my lips to his tiny own
And I said to the boy: "Heigh, ho.
Those lips are as sweet as the hay, new mown;
Will you keep them always so?"
Then back from those years came a rakish song—
With a ribald jest or two—
And I gazed at the child who knew no wrong,
And I thought he asked:
"Did you?"

I looked in his eyes, big, brown, and clear,
And I cried: "Oh, boy of mine,
Will you keep them true in the after year?
Will you leave no heart to pine?"
Then out of the past came another's eyes—
Sad eyes of tear-dimmed blue—
Did he know they were not his mother's eyes?
For he answered me:
"Did you?"

Humanizing a Demigod.

THE MAN SHAKESPEARE AND HIS TRAGIC LIFE STORY. By Frank Harris. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $2.50 net.)

Some essays on "The Man Shakespeare" from the pen of Frank Harris appeared in the Saturday Review a dozen years ago. They excited a good deal of controversy at the time; every competent student understood that at length Shakespeare was being analyzed and re-created by one who held the key to his mystery, and hoped that the articles might later be expanded into a book.

Here now is the long-expected book; far deeper and more complete than the promise. It is difficult to describe what Frank Harris has done; the book, we feel, was inevitable, yet the method is new and the conclusions reached are startling in their revelation of truth too long concealed.

Take this page from the introduction: "There is another reason why Shakespeare is more interesting to us than the greatest men of the past, than Dante even, or Homer; for Dante and Homer worked only at their best in the flower of manhood. Shakespeare, on the other hand, has painted himself for us in his green youth with hardly any knowledge of life or art, and then in his eventful maturity, with growing experience and new powers, in masterpiece after masterpiece; and at length in his decline with weakened grasp and fading colors, so that in him we can study the growth and fruiting and decay of the finest spirit that has yet been born among men. This tragedy of tragedies, in which 'Lear' is only one scene—this rise to intensest life and widest vision and fall through abysms of despair and madness to exhaustion and death—can be followed, experience by experience, from Stratford to London and its thirty years of passionate living, and then from London to village Stratford again, and the eternal shrouding silence."

But let us follow Mr. Harris's steps from the beginning. He takes "Hamlet" as Shakespeare's deepest psychological study; the portrait, therefore, in which Shakespeare has revealed himself most; then shows that Romeo and Jaques are preliminary sketches, so to speak, for the great picture, and both fair portraits of Hamlet. He clinches this argument by proving that Macbeth and Hamlet are one and the same person. This chapter in its searching, and convincing analysis fairly bewitches us, and after half a dozen such chapters we are forced to admit that so far from hiding himself in his works, Shakespeare has painted himself at full length in twenty dramas.

When handling the historical plays Mr. Harris draws special attention to the new characters Shakespeare added, and thus pictures him for us again beyond the possibility of doubt; we are simply compelled to recognize the same traits in the gentle, loving Arthur, in the irresolute Richard II, and in the saintly Henry VI, that we find in Biron, Valentine, Romeo, Jaques, Hamlet, Macbeth, Posthumus and Prospero.

After considering and comparing all these portraits till the outlines of Shakespeare's character are clear and certain, Mr. Harris goes on (still from his works) to show how his little vanities idealized the portrait, and so we come to see "Shakespeare as he was with his imperial intellect and small snobberies, his giant vices and paltry self-deceptions, his sweet gentleness and long martyrdom."

Armed with this knowledge of the man, we come to the sonnets and tragedy of Shakespeare's life. Mr. Harris uses the plays to prove Mr. Tyler's theory that Shakespeare fell in love with the wanton maid of honor, Mary Fitton. This is the most astounding part of an astounding book. Mr. Harris shows that the love episode of the sonnets did not end as Mr. Tyler supposed in 1600; Shakespeare took up his chains again and again and spent twelve years in love's slavery; to use his own words, he was "a strumpet's fool . . . the bellows and the fan to cool a harlot's lust." His great tragedies are but pictures of his various weaknesses. His life and work from 1597 onward are one long hymn of passion, and Mr. Harris sets it all forth with perfect courage and perfect sympathy. For the first time the sonnet story is put in its true light, and the wonder of wonders is that no one has seen it before, or even guessed its significance in Shakespeare's life.

A most astonishing and fascinating book; the finest product of synthetic criticism, finer because far truer than Carlyle's "Cromwell" or Renan's "Life of Jesus." Mr. Harris has not been afraid to paint in the shadows. As biography, this book must rank with Boswell's "Life of Johnson;" as art, it must rank above it.

Thanks to this book, we now know Shakespeare in his habit as he lived; we know him in his love and jealousy and despair; and we are fain to admit with Mr. Harris that Shakespeare's suffering and wreck are symbolical of the fate of genius everywhere and at all times. His life story is therefore of enduring interest; in its own way a world-tragedy.

How Much Are You?

SELF-MEASUREMENT: A SCALE OF HUMAN VALUES WITH DIRECTIONS FOR PERSONAL APPLICATION. By William De Witt Hyde. In the Art of Life Series. B. W. Huebsch, New York. (Price 50 cents net.)

Most men know how rich they are but few men know what they are worth. Dollars can be counted, but manhood cannot be estimated in money standards. Material wealth represents purchasing power, character inherent value! How can this be weighed, measured; and thus a self-knowledge be given that may furnish a basis for wise and good conduct?

The author's answer to this is a scale showing that man stands in a system of relations and that he rises or falls as he fulfills or violates them. These words from his preface serve to throw light on the purpose of the book: "It is easy to show that life is enormously complex. It is easy, also, to cut out of life some single aspect; let that stand for the whole; and so give life a false appearance of simplicity. But to run principles straight through life, and make them stand out clear in the midst of its complexity, is not easy. That is what this book undertakes to do."

So carefully has Dr. Hyde worked out his theory that a glance at the scale reveals the ten fundamental relations of every life and the three degrees in which they may be fulfilled; namely, receptive, productive and creative, and, inversely, the three degrees in which they may be violated; namely, defective, perversive and destructive. He provides a term to express each degree of each relation, but to those who prefer results expressed in figures he offers the alternative of graduated numbers; namely, plus one, plus two, plus three, for the degrees of fulfillment, and similarly, minus one, minus two, minus three, for the degrees of violation.

The value of the book, of course, would lie in the assumption that Dr. Hyde's ideas of what constitutes the ideal man are correct. He may be right—I am sure I do not know. However, he does not agree with me—which makes me suspect he is occasionally in error. However—count yourself up. It may possibly be that you are not so bad after all.

Translated Preachment.

HINDRANCES OF LIFE. By Johannes Muller. Translated from the German by F. F. Strecker. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $1.50 net.)

(Apology: The following review is written from a point of view alien to my nature:)

Dr. Miller is a brilliant thinker and worker who has done an immense amount of good in a sane, unsensational way. A student both of letters and of life, he combines sound knowledge with earnestness and insight. His influence over those who have known him personally, or received the benefit of his lectures, has been unusual and enduring; and it has rapidly extended far beyond local limits.

His chief aim has been the fostering of personal life—the strengthening of character by rational means; the development of the will to regulate conduct wisely and well; the removal of those tendencies to pessimism and sadness which wreck so many lives. "Hindrances of Life" represents the work and thought of many years. Its teaching is supremely important, helpful and thorough. Dealing especially with such mental attitudes as grief, worry, lack of assurance and their physical consequences, it is a book of large sincerity and earnestness, of peculiar insight and power. No one can read it without gaining a higher comprehension of life in general, and a knowledge of self and of self-control, so clear and intimate that the effect on character, action and happiness will inevitably be profound.

Quite Readable.

THE CONFESSIONS OF A CON MAN. As told to Will Irwin. Illustrated by W. Glackens. B. W. Huebsch, New York. (Price $1 net.)

Josiah Flint, Prof. Wyckoff and others have given us interesting views of the underworld as amateur actors in it. Friedman's "Autobiography of a Beggar" reflects that life, but in fiction. Now we get the unvarnished tale of a professional grafter in "The Confessions of a Con Man," which Will Irwin has set down with the fidelity of a born reporter. In his preface Mr. Irwin assures us of his belief in the genuineness of the confession and disclaims any responsibility but that of a transcriber. The story has the air of truth and there is never a doubt in the reader's mind as he follows the Con Man in his career.

We learn how to cheat with marked cards and are introduced to the heroes of that calling. One of them was Jim Barnes, who now owns a cattle ranch in Texas and gambles only for fun. Such a finish, we are told, is exceptional among professional gamblers. We see the Con Man as the official cheater in three different gambling houses at Hot Springs, where "everything was as wide open as a church door and as crooked as a cork screw." Then we find him an assistant to benevolent old Dr. Benedict, whom it paid better to fool people by selling them spectacles than to cheat them with cards.

He exposes the innocent side shows of the traveling circus, and tells us that the largest part of the profits of a circus come from the confidence outfits and crooked gambling games which accompany it, mentioning by name the few honorable exceptions to this rule. He tells us frankly how the chief of police, the justices of the peace, and other officials were bought off when the circus struck town. With the Mayor it was not so easy, but free tickets generally did the trick. With fine scorn the Con Man speaks of the man who had six or seven medals for being mean. "Though he earned a good living at the shells he made his wife play Circassian Beauty with the side show—forced that little woman to sit all afternoon and evening in one of those hot Circassian wigs for a salary of $8 per week."

We learn that it is unnecessary to devise new tricks with which to entrap the unwary, that they still succumb readily to three-card monte, and even the hoary gold brick industry, if properly presented. It makes us nervous to read of the alliance between confidence men and railroad men. On our next journey we shall remember to suspect the conductor, the brakeman and all innocent looking countrymen, especially the Texans who wear sombreros and have bandanna handkerchiefs around their necks.

The book is full of fun and rich in expressive phrases that the reader may be tempted to adopt into his vocabulary. The illustrations by Glackens alone are worth the price of admission.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTHOR FOLK.

Few readers of John Bigelow's vigorous letters and pamphlets on current questions realize that this is the John Bigelow who was Minister to France during the Civil War, friend of William Cullen Bryant, Secretary Seward, John Bright, Richard Cobden, de Lhuys, Motley and the other great men of the time. Mr. Bigelow has written about his career, his friends and the historic events in which he had part, in his "Retrospections of an Active Life," published this fall by the Baker & Taylor Co.

The life of Henry M. Stanley, as revealed in his "Autobiography," presents a notable and adventurous career. From the humblest of beginnings, a foundling child in an English workhouse he became successively a Louisiana planter, Confederate soldier, English journalist, African explorer and finally a member of the English Parliament, knighted by the Queen. It is doubtful if the present season will bring forth a more important or interesting biography.

Burton S. Stevenson, author of "The Child's Guide to Biography," which the Baker & Taylor Co. are publishing, is a librarian as well as an author. He has been librarian of the Chillicothe (O.) public library for ten years and during that time has published ten books. Among these have been several stirring books for boys dealing with great figures of our history, by which he has developed the unusual power of interesting young readers, shown in this "Child's Guide to Biography."

Although "Trix and Over-the-Moon," the new book by Amélie Rives (the Princess Troubetsky,) which is about to be published by the Harpers, is a story of the woman who genuinely loves horses better than anything else in the world, what is known as the "horsy" quality is entirely absent from the type, which is pictured as that of a cheerful, healthy practical Virginian who manages her own plantation and breeds her own horses with much more competence than is shown by her husband, a writer of very poor novels. The determination of this heroine, who is a mother as well as a matron, to ride her thoroughbred in the face of physical hazard, leads to a half-tragic revelation of the difference in the maternal passion as it exists in different women.

The next aërial flight will be made by Mark Twain—or is Mr. Clemens merely going to stand by and help waft aloft an old friend? We have only the Harpers' statement that "Capt. Stormfield's Visit to Heaven," by Mark Twain, will take place in the book world on or about the morning of October 14.

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, whose new story, "Susanna and Sue," is just published," is busy preparing for the reehearsals of her play, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which begins in New York on the 18th. Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger have not yet announced the name of the young actress who will play the title role, but she is said to be possessed of much personal charm and rare qualifications for the part.

Dr. Washington Gladden, whose "Recollections" are published by Houghton, Mifflin Company this week, will deliver the annual sermon and make two addresses at the joint meeting of the American Board of Foreign Missions and the National Congregational Brotherhood at Minneapolis, October 13-17.

NOTES OF NEW AND FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

Demetra Vaka, the author of "Haremlik," one of the most talked-of books of the past summer, has been visiting in Charlottesville, Va., but will soon return to Boston. She recently received a letter from a former secretary to Prince Abdul Medjid, in part, as follows: "Will you kindly permit one of the many delighted readers of your 'Haremlik' to express his feelings of gratitude for having given to the American people and to the world at large the first true picture of Turkish womanhood? It has been my privilege to live in Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi's Serail at Constantinople from 1899 to 1904. And at every page which I read in your book—for the first time ever since I read books on Turkey—my thoughts delighted in the memory of great Turkish women near whom I lived at the Summit of the Tchamlida, women who resemble your Djimlahs and Mihirmahs, your wonderful Valide Hanoum, your Aishes and 'Buyuk Kalfas.' I cannot tell you how much your book meant for me. Ever since I first came to America, I endeavored in a small circle of friends to portray the purity and greatness of Turkish women. It was not a story of Pierre Loti, nor of any of the less-gifted travelers who spend four weeks in Turkey and write a 'book' on the Turkish people whom they never met and knew, that I gave to my friends, but the truth as I had seen it daily for five happy years. And now, at my greatest satisfaction, all of my friends find the crippled and incomplete description that I could give them in discussion and talks verified, testified to and completed in this true monument of Turkish womanhood, 'Haremlik.'"

Messrs. A. C. McClurg & Co. have acquired the publishing rights to a number of important books on the list of the Outing Publishing Company and will hereafter issue the titles over their imprint. These include two books of unusual interest which have not yet been put on the market, "The Conquest of the Missouri," by Joseph Mills Hanson, and "Ships and Sailors of Old Salem," by Ralph D. Paine, which will be issued at once. The books already published include Clarence E. Mulford's two stories, "Bar 20" and "The Orphan;" Ralph D. Paine's "Greater America" and "The Stroke Oar;" Zane Grey's "The Last of the Plainsmen;" Dillon Wallace's "The Long Labrador Trail," and two practical books, Sando's "American Poultry Culture" and Massey's "Practical Farming." These purchases, together with the recent acquirements of the publishing rights in Mrs. Katherine Yates's well-known Christian Science stories for children, and the issuing of about sixty new books on their fall list, will mean the most active season that Messrs. A. C. McClurg & Co. have ever had. The firm now maintains branch offices in New York and San Francisco.

Josephine Daskam Bacon believes that the real ideal of a woman and of the human race for her is not social nor artistic independence, but the bearing and bringing up of great children. This is so old an idea that it is at first startling to meet it in a book. "Advanced views" held by and for women are so usual in this age, however, that a vigorous, charming defense of old ideas seems really in order. In her new volume, "In the Border Country," just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., Mrs. Bacon tells, in three tales, the story of a woman who is an artist, feverishly ambitious, yearning to do great work that will live forever. At "the hut in the wood" she learns that her work, after all, is with her flesh and blood—her children. "Go back, child, and let men make pictures. Do you make men," says to her the happy old woman in the hut.

These are Mrs. Bacon's beliefs: It is not a woman's work to make laws, but to teach her children to obey them; not write great songs, but to teach them into her children. No woman living will ever do a great work who could not have borne great children, and if she can bear great children she can do no other great work.

Now that the North Pole has been discovered, attention is naturally centered on the opposite pole, and the publication of Lieut. Shackleton's own narrative of the expedition that came almost within sight of the much-desired goal is awaited with great interest. Preparations are going forward for the printing of the American edition of Lieut. Shackleton's work, which is promised in November. The Lippincotts have received a large installment of the copy for the book and are actively engaged in the actual work of composition. Unlike many books that are published simultaneously in America and England, the American edition of the Shackleton book will be entirely of American manufacture.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. announce second printings of this season's boooks as follows:

"Mental Medicine," by Oliver Huckel. "Ethics of Progress," by Charles F. Dole. "Into the Night," by Frances Nimmo Greene. "We Four and Two More," by Imogen Clark "Found by the Circus," by James Otis. "Land of Nod," by J. Walker McSpadden. "Christmas Child," by Hesba Stretton. "Dorothy Brooke," by Frances Campbell Sparhawk.

New editions are also under way of many other books, such as:

"Peace, Power and Plenty," by Orison Swett Marden. "In Tune With the Infinite," by Ralph Waldo Trine. "Irrigation," by Frederick Haynes Newell. "Economics of Forestry," by Bernhard E. Fernow.

"Court Life in China," by Isaac Taylor Headland, announced by the Fleming H. Revell Company for publication this week, probably gives the best portrait yet offered of the Empress Dowager. Mr. Headland, through Mrs. Headland's association as physician with the court, had unusual opportunities to know the Empress and many of the high official ladies. An unusual feature is the illustrations, which number several from the brush of the Empress herself as well as several photographs and paintings of this remarkable woman, which will be new to the West.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. will issue at once "Masters of the English Novel: a Study of Principles and Personalities," by Dr. Richard Burton, whose biblical drama, "Rahab," they recently published, and who is also favorably known for his "Literary Likings" and other books of literary criticism. This new book includes fourteen chapters, among them being "Fiction and the Novel," "Hardy and Meredith," "Stevenson" and the "American Contribution."

EGYPTIAN PROFESSION OF FAITH

Page from the "Book of the Dead" Gives Some Good Suggestions for Guidance of the Living.

[Duluth Herald:] Capt. Ray T. Lewis of Duluth, on a recent trip, copied from the wall of a passage in one of the tombs of the kings in Thebes an interesting passage from the "Book of the Dead," in which a fine scheme of living is laid down. The inscription is in a very hard red granite, and though cut over 3500 years ago, before steel had been discovered, it is clear and finely executed, like many others there. The inscription, which follows, appears to be a profession of faith and of a righteous life:

I have committed no fraud against men.

I have not tormented the widow.

I have not spoken falsely in the tribunal, nor do I know ill faith.

I have done no forbidden thing.

I have not exacted of a task master more work than he could do daily.

I have not been neglectful.

I have not been idle.

I have not refused my debts, nor have I been wearied in well doing.

I have not done that which is abominable to the gods.

I have not slandered the slave to his master.

I have starved none.

I have made none weep.

I have slain none, nor have I commanded to murder by treachery.

I have not stolen the temple bread.

I have not seized the cakes offered to the gods.

I have not taken the board or the fillets of the dead.

I have not gained money by fraud.

I have not changed the measure of the corn.

I have not defrauded the breath of a finger on the hand.

I have not seized land.

I have not changed the plates of the balance.

I have not falsified the balance.

I have not taken the milk from the mouths of the sucklings.

I have not hunted the sacred animals in their pastures.

I have not taken the divine birds in their nest.

I have not fished for the sacred fish in their ponds.

I have not kept the water back in its season.

I have not cut a branch of the water in its passage.

I have not quenched the sacred fire at its house.

I have not violated the divine cycle in its chosen offerings.

I have not driven the oxen from the sacred pastures.

I have not turned aside the god in his possession.

I am pure. I am pure. I am pure. I am pure.

ROCKEFELLER'S GIFT.

John D. Rockefeller could not put a million to better use than he has in endowing the campaign against the hook-worm disease in the South. To stamp out this disease, together with pellagra, the mysterious malady that is now passing from the South into Illinois and other Northern States, is a task that challenges the medical profession.—[Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Mr. Rockefeller is a wise giver. He does not make large offerings for any cause without preliminary investigation. He prefaces his letter of donation of $1,000,000 to be used in studying the nature and prevalence of the hook-worm disease with a statement that his representatives have been making inquiries for many months. Those inquiries have brought conviction that there is something definite to be investigated in connection with the "vampire of the South," as a magazine writer calls it, and that there is a chance to find a "cure for 2,000,000 sick." Mr. Rockefeller has been a friend of medical research for some years. He evidently believes in thoroughgoing methods in combating the physical ills of mankind. The campaign against the hook worm is to be an aggressive one. The gift of a million is not an endowment. It is a campaign fund for use during the next five years.—[Chicago Tribune.

John D. Rockefeller's gift of $1,000,000 to a commission to be used in eradicating the hook-worm disease in the Southern States does not differ in its essential aspects from several other large gifts he has made. Nevertheless, one cannot contemplate it without a fresh feeling of admiration for the originality and intelligence with which he acts in his benavolences.—[Chicago Record-Herald.

It is rarely indeed, even in these days of large giving by men and women of vast millions, that philanthropy hits upon anything quite so noble in its conception and purpose as John D. Rockefeller's latest benefaction to the South. His appropriation of $1,000,000 to cope with the hook-worm plague, withits 2,500,000 pitiful victims, must compel the admiration and sympathetic approval of the whole country.—[Pittsburgh Gazette.

For a long time the public thought the "hook-worm" was a joke. The idea that a parasite could be held responsible for the shiftlessness of the mountain whites of the South seemed absurd. It was laziness, the scoffers said; why, try to conceal a racial defect with a scientific theory?

Now John D. Rockefeller, who is not commonly considered to be an impractical theorist, gives $1,000,000 for the purpose of combating the "hook-worm" disease. So soon does the world accept the discoveries of its scientific investigators and act upon their advice. Mr. Rockefeller appears to have chosen a strong commission to carry out his designs. The object being the creation of a stronger race of men, its members have ample incentive to do a great life-saving work for the world.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FAMOUS CHINESE TEMPLES.

Those of Heaven and Agriculture Are of Extraordinary Interest and Magnificence.

Prof. George A. Dorsey of Chicago, who is traveling in China sends to the Chicago Tribune the following impressions of a visit to two of the famous temples of Peking:

The Temple of Heaven consists of many buildings and imperial apartments; is in the center of a great park nearly a mile square, surrounded by a great wall. Within are walls within walls and moats and beautiful marble bridges with carved marble balustrades and ancient pines and cypresses.

At the great circular altar, which rises in the form of three terraces, approached on four sides by marble steps, and each terrace surrounded by a most beautiful marble balustrade, is performed once a year the most important of all Chinese acts of worship and sacrifice, for here the Emperor himself repairs on the twenty-first of December, having spent the preceding night in fasting and meditation, and in the center of the altar praises heaven. Near-by burnt offering of a bullock is made in a large altar furnace nine feet high, faced with green glazed brick, with three stairways of green brick. Here also is sacrificed a cylindrical piece of blue jade a foot in length, twelve bundles of cloth, and vessels of corn.

"I can conceive of nothing finer than the dignity, silence and stateliness of this enormous marble altar, with the walls and halls beyond, the halls roofed with the bluest of blue tiles. Not a sound reaches here from the city and nothing could exceed the dignity and beautiful somber green of the stately cypresses. In the imperial pavilion, where the Emperor rests in solitude, I saw the largest and most beautifully carved screen behind the altar I ever have seen.

"North of the altar of heaven is a lofty circular temple with enormous teakwood columns, decorated with red and gold figures, and a splendid roof of blue tiles, and an exceedingly elaborate ridge of blue, green, and gold. This temple also, stands upon a terraced white marble platform, with carved balustrades, etc., similar to the altar of heaven. The building itself, inside and out, is one of the most beautiful visions in color that I ever have seen. In fact, the richness of the tiles on the roofs and walls about this temple, as well as those which I saw yesterday, give me an entirely new conception of the possibilities of colored tiles.

"It would take days to become saturated with the beauties of the innumerable interesting features of this temple, and we made our way reluctantly back to the gate to visit the Temple of Agriculture on the opposite side of the road. In this temple and the one which I saw yesterday, are many evidences of the white man's occupation: names written on the walls and other defilement visible on every hand, for during the Boxer troubles the British troops were quartered and played polo in the gardens of the Temple of Heaven, this incurring the everlasting hostility of the Chinese, while our own troops took up their quarters in the almost equally sacred Temple of Agriculture.

"The grounds of the Temple of Agriculture are smaller than those of the opposite temple. Within are four great altars, with accompanying buildings, two of the altars being rectangular. At one side of one of the altars are four marble shrines nine feet in height, splendidly carved with clouds and dragons. We were shown a pavilion, within which are the tools used by the Emperor and his suite when he comes here in the spring to plow certain furrows and make imperial offerings. The tools used by the Emperor are yellow in color and those used by the nobility are red. Here I saw plows, seed drills, forks, baskets, sieves, shovels, water buckets, etc. Near the tool-house is a circular house in which cereals are deposited upon the shrine. Two of the temples are roofed with

SPLIT TRACT INTO RANCHES.

Huge Colonization Scheme Is Now Under Way.

Immigration Tide Flowing Into Chihuahua.

Mexican Capitalist Buying Land in Texas.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—For subdivision into small farms to be sold to American colonists 105,000 acres of land in Tamaulipas, seventy miles southwest of Brownsville, Tex., has been bought by Nat B. Birge and Thomas Forbes of Sherman Tex., for $206,000. Another Texan land deal, pending in Mexico, involves many thousands of acres in the isthmian country.

As a reversal of the usual movement, the United States and Mexican Trust Company of this city has bought 30,000 acres of land in the lower Pecos Valley, southwest of San Angelo, Tex., along the projected line of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad, now building from San Angelo southward to connect with the division extending northward from Chihuahua. Ample irrigation rights have been acquired and expensive improvements are being prosecuted through the building of reservoirs and digging of ditches. A third of the area has already been sold at prices ranging up to $45 per acre. Three years ago the same land could be bought at $2 and $3 an acre.

IMMIGRATION TIDE

The immigration tide into Southwestern Texas and Oklahoma is beginning to show a strong tendency toward overflow into Chihuahua and other States of the north of Mexico, where there lie vast wastes of finest soil under ideal climatic conditions, with water the only requisite to the development of as productive an agricultural region as can be found anywhere. The soil is as rich and deep as that in the most fertile valleys of the Rocky Mountain States, with water as easily accessible and the decided weather advantage in favor of Northern Mexico.

Experiments of the last three years have proved the existence of a great undersheet of water in Chihuahua, where numerous artesian wells have been sunk for the successful irrigation of large tracts theretofore sterile. The government has under way a big irrigation project on the Nazas River, an English company is building great reservoirs in Northwestern Chihuahua and the dam of the Mexican Northern Power Company, on the Conchos River, will impound liberal stores of water which will ultimately be utilized in agriculture.

M. L. Voight, John W. Warren and J. J. Coffman, all of San Antonio, Tex., have obtained a government concession for liberal water rights on their El Celeste and La Reforma ranches, 28,000 acres, in the State of Tamaulipas, where there will be built one of the largest canals in the commonwealth. The estate comprises some of the richest areas in the upper Tamesi River country, seventy-five miles northwest of Tampico, and expert horticulturists of Southern California, who have made careful examinations and experiments, unite in the belief that this section is as well adapted to the growing of fruits as the record-breaking districts of the Golden State. Eventually El Celeste and La Reforma will be subdivided for colonization purposes.

BIG IRRIGATION SCHEME.

Gov. Guillermo Landa y Escandon of the Mexican Federal district is one of the largest owners in a ranching corporation which has secured government consent to the use of the waters of the Santiago and San Pedro rivers to irrigate the San Lorenzo hacienda, 250,000 acres, in the west coast region, to be cut up into small farms for settlement. The land was purchased from Barron, Forbes & Co., a strong English syndicate, which receives a percentage of the products, chiefly corn, coffee, beans, rice and cane. The San Lorenzo ranch is now valued at $2,500,000 and will be worth many times that amount when put under water.

The Libertad and Moctezuma coffee plantations of the Missouri Coffee Growers' Association has become the property of the United States Banking Company of Oaxaca, in liquidation of an account. With the transfer the company's account was credited with $42,446.

A thousand acres of the San Enrique hacienda in the State of Coahuila near the Tamaulipas border, is being planted in pecan trees under the supervision of Prof. Harvey C. Stiles of Raymondsville, Tex., consulting horticulturist to many of the largest plantations in the country. The hacienda comprises 32,000 acres and a large part of it will soon be under irrigation with the installation of a big reservoir system and canals. There are coal mines on the same land. Prof. Stiles states that the grape fruit raised in the Tampico region is especially fine, sweet enough for use without sugar as early as September 1 and yet of more character and piquancy than the West Indian.

ESTIMATES OVERDONE.

Mexico will not suffer on account of corn shortage following the phenomenal frosts of September. The loss is nothing like so severe as was indicated by early government estimates. About $4,000,000, gold, it is now believed, will cover the damage. The crop this season would have been far above the average except for the cold snap. Beans and chile suffered only slightly. The government has taken steps to relieve the situation in districts most needy, having already bought 55,000 bushels of corn in the State of Mexico for distribution at reasonable prices. Some suffering is threatened in San Juan Bautista as the result of the disastrous flood along the valleys of the Grijalva River.

President Diaz formally opened the annual cattle fair at Coyoacan on the morning of October 31. This exhibition has become one of the great events of the year among breeders of fine cattle, horses, hogs and poultry from all sections of Central Mexico.

A party of thirty capitalists from Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas, all heavily interested in Mexican lands and industries, left Wichita by special car November 2, traveling via the Santa Fé and National Railways of Mexico to Tampico, where they will take steamer for the possessions of the Mexican Immigration Land and Fiber Company, sixty miles down the national canal from Tampico and facing the Gulf. At the head of the party is E. J. Votaw of Wichita, president of the Mexico Land, Pineapple and Fiber and also of the immigration company. J. M. Langston, Jr., of Fort Smith, Ark., secretary of the former company, is making the trip and others in the special car crowd are from Salina, Kan.; Great Bend, Kan.; Cherokee, Okla.; Perkins, Okla.; Arkansas City, Ark., and Dallas, Tex.

The news might well have staggered the intellect of a strong-minded man. But John Shil merely frowned, and his eyes were full of pity as he looked at Laura's white face. He was now firmly convinced that the death of her child had affected her brain.

"Laurie," he said gently, "my dear Laurie. What do you mean? Why, you are the wife of Sir William Tankerlane."

"I am now," she replied, "but two months ago I was—well, you can guess what I was." She tried to speak calmly, but her whole body trembled with excitement. She knew that she must speak calmly to convince him, yet the knowledge that he believed her to be mad nearly drove her out of her senses.

"Laurie," the man cried pitifully, "my dearest Laurie. Let us talk of something else. We will talk of this another day, when you have had a rest. Let us walk back to the house now or go on round the island."

She looked at him for a moment in horror, and then, as she realized the full meaning of his words she lost all control of herself.

"Do you think me mad?" she cried. "I am as sane as you," but the look on her face and the fierce light in her eyes were almost a contradiction to her words. John Shil might well be forgiven for thinking that she had taken leave of her senses.

"Mad?" he said quietly. "No, of course not, Laurie. How absurd you are! But I'd rather hear your story another day, say tomorrow. I really ought to be getting off now. I will come tomorrow, Laurie, and we'll have a long talk together."

"Don't you believe what I say?" she cried. "I swear to you that two months ago Leonore was the wife of Sir William Tankerlane, and that I—oh God, that I should have to plead and swear like this in order to be believed by you—by you, Jack, for whom I sacrificed my whole life, for whom I sold myself, for whom I have gone down into the very depths of hell."

"Laurie," he cried tenderly, as he took her in his arms. "Oh Laurie, my dearest."

His agony was pitiful to witness, for he believed that suffering had driven her mad, and her talk of sacrifice conveyed nothing to his mind. He only wished to soothe her, to comfort her, and persuade her to return to Dowsett's house. His heart ached for her, and yet he did not know how to reply to her ravings without offence. He merely held her in his arms, in the hope that she would realize how much he longed to help her and protect her from herself.

But the agony of the woman was more terrible than his own. All that she had suffered, all the misery of her life, all the grief for the loss of her child, all the fury at the treachery of Leonore, all the bodily pain and exhaustion of the last twenty-four hours had culminated in this one moment, when the man to whom she had looked for love and sympathy had insulted her with such kindness as one offers to a lunatic or a drunkard. With a cry of anguish she tore herself from his grasp, struck wildly at his face with her clenched hands, and then, falling to the ground, she laughed and sobbed like a maniac.

And then, as she lay huddled in a heap, with loosened hair and closed eyes, and hands that were thrust into the mud, wild, incoherent words broke from her lips. She babbled of Ben Holland, of the quarry in Round Plantation, of William Tankerlane, of Leonore, of Paris, of her dead child, of her father, of the grinding poverty of Widley street. Her brain was trying to piece together the story of her life. In her darkness she was trying to grope for the light. She imagined that she was telling John Shil all that she wished him to know, and that he would understand how she had sacrificed herself for him, and how she had suffered and how she had come back to him to give him all her love.

But John Shil, as he listened to her disconnected ravings, did not understand. In fact he hardly heard the words, and certainly did not try to make sense of them. All his thoughts were occupied with the terrible and embarrassing position in which he found himself, and he was more concerned about Laura's present condition than about anything else she might have to tell him.

He knelt down by her side and tried to comfort her, but she shrank and shuddered at his touch, and the torrent of words still came from her lips—broken, incoherent words, interspersed with fits of weeping and laughter.

Then at last the words grew fainter and the sobbing less violent, and at last both died away into silence.

"Laurie," said John Shil tenderly, laying his hand on her shoulder. She did not move or answer him. "Laurie," he repeated, "let me carry you back to the cottage."

She made no reply, and he shook her gently.

"Laurie," he cried piteously, "my dearest."

Then he picked her up from the ground and looked at her face. Her eyes were closed and her skin was white as paper. She lay limp and helpless in his arms. He laid her down again on the grass, and, running quickly to a small pool, filled his cap with muddy water and dashed the dirty liquid in her face. He did this again and again, but she did not open her eyes. He placed his hand against her heart; it fluttered feebly and irregularly.

"Oh, God!" he cried aloud in his anguish, "if she should die." And for the moment the awful thought came to him that God had intervened in this manner to save them both from sin. "Give her back to me," he cried again, "and I will not take her till she is free."

And then, as if in answer to his prayer, Laura opened her eyes and looked at him. But there was no recognition in her look. She stared past him at the sky.

"Laurie," he said softly, "my dearest Laurie, I will take you back now to the cottage. You want rest, dear. Will you let me carry you?"

She did not answer him, but still gazed at the sky.

Then a great fear seized him, and, stooping down, he picked her up in his arms and climbed the bank to the path. She did not resist, but a few incoherent words came from her lips, and she stared vacantly at sea and sky and marshland.

When he reached the cottage with his burden he encountered Mrs. Dowsett.

"Lord help us!" she cried with a look of fear on her white, dull face. "What be it, sir; what be it?"

"Miss Vane has been taken ill," he replied. "She has fainted. I'm afraid it is serious. I'm going to place her in your hands, and you must nurse her. I'll pay you well for your trouble—two hundred pounds if you will look after her and keep your mouth shut."

"Take her upstairs, sir," the woman answered grimly, "and don't talk of money now. Poor thing, poor thing. I mistrusted the look in her eyes."

John Shil carried his burden up to the clean, plainly-furnished room, and laid it on the bed. Mrs. Dowsett followed, carrying a small bottle of some greenish-white liquid.

"Where is your nearest doctor?" he asked sharply.

"Gorehaven, sir."

"How long will it take to get there?"

"'Bout two hours in a boat."

"Can't you get there by land?"

"No, sir; leastways, not in that time."

"Well, your husband must take me round at once in his oyster smack and I'll bring a doctor back with me."

"He's down the creek, sir."

"Well," said John Shil, "I'll row down and fetch him. Do all you can."

"I've a drop of medicine here, sir," she replied, holding out the bottle. "'Tis powerful good stuff for fever."

"Fever?" exclaimed John Shil. "Miss Vane hasn't got fever."

"Ay, sir," the woman replied with a look of wisdom. "All our ills come from fever. 'Tis fever she has, poor soul, and it's reached her brain."

"What is the stuff?" he asked. "Did a doctor make it up?"

"Doctor?" the woman replied with a harsh laugh. "No, sir; doctors ain't for us on Conasea, save in childbirth, or death, or such like. We brew the stuff ourselves, as our folk have done since time began. Made of marsh herbs it is, sir—good, honest stuff. This be the home of the fever, and Nature allers grows remedy close to hand."

"Well, I daresay it won't hurt her," he replied impatiently. "Do all you can, and I'll do all I can for you in return. I am going now to find Dowsett."

He gave a last glance at Laura, who still lay motionless on the bed with wide-open eyes, and then left the room. He could do no more than fetch a doctor, and yet, perhaps, Laura would be beyond the reach of all medical aid before he returned. The man had suffered much during the last two years, but never had he suffered so terribly as this.

He launched the punt, set the sail, and tore down the creek with wind and tide in his favor. In less than ten minutes he had hailed the William and Sarah, and, as the smack hove to, he ran his little craft alongside, and jumped aboard with the painter in his hand.

"I want you to take me to Gorehaven at once," he exclaimed. "I want a doctor. Miss Vane is very ill."

"Pull in the dredge," said Dowsett to the man who constituted the crew of the smack. That was all he said. He did not mention terms. He knew well enough that the reward would be worth more than his loss of time.

"I'll tow the punt ashore with the dinghy," said Shil, "and drop her anchor. She'll be all right, I suppose."

"She'll be all right, sir. We'll pick her up on the way back."

In a few minutes John Shil was back on the William and Sarah, and the smack was rushing down the creek toward the sea. Yet to John Shil she seemed to crawl along like a fat snail.

"It's a matter of life and death," he said, as he stood by Dowsett at the tiller.

"Take the tiller a minute, sir, will you?" the sailor replied. "I and my mate'll rig up a spinnaker, though we ain't a yacht."

The two sailors got the big balloon jib out of the foc's'le and rigged it up on a spar. John Shil at the tiller set his teeth and kept his eyes on the fluttering red pennant, as the freshening wind drove them through a wall of white foam and green water. He was not much of a sailor, and knew that if he gybed the boat he might carry everything out of her, and not reach Gorehaven till nightfall.

Then Dowsett came aft, and relieved him at the post.

"We'll be there in hour'n half," said the sailor, "but it'll be a long beat back."

John Shil did not answer. He was looking over the stern at the seething wall of white foam, and the dull yellow water beyond, and again beyond that at the tiny black roof of a cottage. And, as he looked, he prayed.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The William and Sarah reached Gorehaven Harbor in an hour and twenty minutes, and John Shil was put ashore directly she dropped anchor.

He made his way to the nearest doctor, and explained matters to him.

"I know you must be busy," he said, after he had answered the doctor's brief questions, "but you can ask what fee you like for this case. And if you pull it through all right—well, you can have anything it is in my power to give. But I must ask one thing of you, doctor, and that is secrecy. I don't wish this lady's name——"

"I am not in the habit of discussing my patients," the doctor replied stiffly.

"No, of course not," said John Shil, "but this is a peculiar case. I will be perfectly frank with you. This lady is a married woman, and if her husband finds her, all the doctors in the world won't save her. She has run away from him."

"I understand," the doctor replied, with a grim smile, "but I am not concerned with my patients' histories, except where they bear on the case. Well, I can start in five minutes."

"Is there no other way of getting to the place?" Shil asked. "It'll be a dead beat all the way back—four hours of it, so Dowsett says."

"Oh, yes," replied the doctor, "I've got a little motor launch, and we'll run down in that. A good deal of my practice lies up the creeks in places one can't get to by road, and I've found the launch invaluable. We'll get there in an hour and ten minutes."

"Good man," cried Shil joyfully, "you deserve to have a fine practice."

"You'd better get on down to the wharf," said the doctor. "I've got a few things to get together, and you can be telling Dowsett what you're going to do. It'll save time."

John Shil left the house, found Dowsett, and explained matters to him. Then Dr. Hardy appeared with a bag, and a few minutes later the two men were spinning out of the harbor into the teeth of the wind.

The doctor, a fine, sunburnt young fellow of about thirty, was an interesting companion, and he chatted incessantly, as though anxious to divert Shil's thoughts from the object of their journey. He had lived in the district for five years, and had much to tell about the marsh folk, about their dislike of doctors, about the Peculiar People, who looked on medicine as the food of the devil; about the storms he had encountered in order to reach a sick bed, about the sailor folk who came and went continually, and whom he often visited on their ships. And then he spoke of the loneliness of the marshland, and how it had entered into the souls of the inhabitants, and how he himself had felt the spell of it in some silent creek at night time. But he ended by declaring that he would not exchange his life for the finest practice in the West End.

And so the journey passed quickly and pleasantly enough, but as the roof of Dowsett's cottage came in view the doctor ceased talking. He knew that nothing would now distract the thoughts of his companion, and that conversation might only irritate him.

They anchored a few yards away from the "hard" and went ashore in the little dinghy. Dr. Hardy took his bag and went straight upstairs to Laura's room. John Shil stayed in the parlor by himself. Mrs. Dowsett had met them at the door with the news that there was no change in the patient's condition, and the man consoled himself with the thought that he had this at least to be thankful for.

When twenty minutes had passed, the doctor came downstairs with a grave face, and, closing the door behind him, came over to Shil and laid a hand upon his arm.

"Brain fever," he said calmly. "There is no need to be alarmed, but at the same time I may as well tell you that it is a serious case. I don't believe in doctors telling lies to relatives and friends. She must have perfect rest and quiet and constant attention. I'm going to stay here tonight. Mrs. Dowsett will sleep in the patient's room, and Dowsett on the smack. If I get time for any sleep there'll be a bed for me."

John Shil held out his hand and said nothing. It was a simple way of expressing his thanks.

"Would you like to stay here?" continued the doctor, "or will you return to Black Hall?"

"I must return," Shil replied in a low voice. "I cannot explain everything to you, doctor, but I can tell you that this lady's husband will look for her at Black Hal, and that, if I am absent—well, you can understand what he will think."

"I understand," the doctor replied with a slight frown. He was a clean-living man, and he had a poor opinion of men who took wives away from their husbands.

"You misunderstand me," Shil continued, "if you think that I am engaged in a common intrigue; that I am mixed up in a vulgar scandal. This lady is as good and sweet as my own mother. But she loathes her husband. I cannot explain the facts to you, nor can I explain why I, for certain other reasons, am bound to protect her from her husband's violence." He spoke earnestly, and looked the doctor full in the face as he spoke.

"I believe you," Dr. Hardy replied simply.

"If you require any further proof of my intentions," Shil continued, "I will tell you that I am shortly to be married to another woman, and that I have always passed as an honorable man."

Dr. Hardy held out his hand.

"These matters do not concern me," he replied, "but I like to deal with straight people. Go home, Mr. Shil, and we'll do all we can. You can do no good here. Come down tomorrow on the first ebb, and I hope I shall have good news for you."

"May I see her before I go?" asked Shil. "I should like to, if I may, in case——" He paused; he was afraid to put his fear into words.

He followed the doctor upstairs, and when the latter had opened the door, he entered, and, crossing over to the bedside, looked earnestly at Laura's face. It was scarcely visible in the darkened room, but he could see that the eyes were closed. Then he turned abruptly on his heel and left the room.

A few minutes later he was sailing down the creek, but when he had crossed the broad estuary, he lowered the sail, and bent to his oars with furious energy. With the help of the flood tide he reached the quay by the park in an hour and a half, and walked up to the house with his gun under his arm, and Pat meekly trotting at his heel.

After a cold bath and a shave and a change of clothes, he felt refreshed in body and mind, and did full justice to a cold luncheon which was awaiting him in the dining-room. It was half-past four in the afternoon and he had not tasted food since his breakfast on Conasea Island.

When he had finished his meal he retired to the smoking room and lit a pipe. He was tired, but more easy in his mind than he had been for hours. Under the soothing influence of good food and wine and tobacco, things ap-to have during the season as many of the best musicians of the city as it is possible to get, to come before the department. "We feel," said Miss Blythe, "that pupils should not only study the best music and understand its history, but that they should hear the very best interpretations, and none but the best." In the study of Wagner, selections from that great composer are given on the pianola; and it is the aim to connect, or correlate the study of music with that of art and literature. A series of folk songs are being studied, the French, German and Spanish classes taking this up and singing the songs in the original. A mandolin club or class will soon be organized, and the season will doubtless be rich in entertainment from the music department.

Many of the Los Angeles High School pupils will take part in the coming society musical play, "Professor Napoleon," although the faculty insists that none shall take part unless well up in all studies.

Several members of the life class, in Mr. McBurney's department, are making striking and attractive posters for the "Professor Napoleon." Miss Harrison, of the same department, is designing a cover for a northern magazine.

Mr. Daniels, head of the chemistry department, is refitting the old laboratory on the fourth floor of the old building, and endeavoring to create a modern scientific workroom there.

The teachers' classes, which are conducted at the Olive-street High School, between the hours of 4:30 and 5:30 each day, are proving very popular. Attendance is optional, but the opportunity of hearing the leading educators discuss subjects of vital interest to those truly interested in this vocation, has been quickly grasped by teachers throughout the city. On Thursday, Prof. Chamberlain gave a lecture on "Geography." Dr. Albert E. Wilson will lecture upon German teaching; Dr. Beckman upon "Beginning Spanish." There have been talks by Superintendent Grant Carr, Dr. Gasell and Dr. Moore.

The girls' basketball team of the Olive-street High School, played San Pedro, at San Pedro, on Friday.

The Friday programme this week, was under the auspices of the Adelphic Society. It consisted of piano duet, Eugenie Witzleben and Gertrude Rormel; reading, May Heintz; vocal solo, Freda Faris; violin solo, Edna McGeary; reading, Ethel Hodgan; piano solo, Arthur Church, and the Girls' Glee Club, under direction of Mr. Goodwin.

OUR CONSULS SAY.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

American coals have proved a success at Marseilles and Genoa. It is hoped they will also gradually prevail at other Mediterranean ports. Port Said imports 1,500,000 tons of coal yearly on the average. It is the chief Levantine consuming port, followed by Alexandria and Beirut. Imports at Port Said were 800,000 tons for the first half of 1909. Alexandria imported 1,299,298 tons in 1908 and Beirut consumes 25,000 tons a year. Prices this year at Port Said range from $3.36 to $5.50 per ton and at Alexandria $4.46 to $5.50 per ton. Prices were higher last year. Demand at Beirut is increasing, owing to railroad extensions, increased shipping, new factories and fresh industrial activity generally. Report No. 3617.

Belgium, in 1908, produced 23,635,174 tons of coal, employing 143,947 miners. Compared with 1907 the record is 1981 more miners and 195,115 less tons of coal.

Formosa produces enough coal to supply her railways, steamers and factories, and has about 25,000 tons a year available for export to China. The output of the 210 mines is increasing, but only thirteen of the mines are operated by machinery. The mining is very primitive in the others.

Experiments at St. Helen's, England, in manufacturing coal gas in vertical retorts have proved successful. Fully detailed in consular report No. 3614. It is thought that this may revolutionize gas making.

Santo Domingo's most important minerals found in modern times are gold, silver, iron ore, copper ore, lignite, salt and petroleum, but gold is the only mineral that has been worked to any extent. The gold mining record goes back to the year 1496, when there were the mines or placer workings of La Vega, the Cibao, the San Custabal and the Buenaventure. The sands of the Yaque, Verde, Bao, Jaina and Mao rivers and their tributaries yield considerable gold at the present time. The entire lack of roads for transporting machinery to the interior are the greatest present drawback to mining. Abundant capital, modern methods and machinery with passable roads would probably work wonders.

Exporting the soya beans of Manchuria in the raw state to England is profitable to grower and exporter. The Mitsui Company of Japan made $498,000 profit out of the exporting end last year. A prosperous Manchuria means the sale of more American goods, particularly cotton piece goods.

A French concession is seeking a concession in Uruguay to furnish electric light and power to eighteen towns not now provided with electric plants.

The St. Lawrence Company (and American company associated) wants a Canadian government franchise to utilize the waters of the St. Lawrence for a hydro-electric plant of very large capacity. They have already spent $1,000,000 in purchasing sites. The first dam is to cost $4,000,000 and will develop 65,000 to 70,000 horse-power.

The China Export, Import and Banking Company is making enormous profits, almost based on its import business in aniline dyes, and colors, largely from Germany, followed by Belgium. In two years the company has distributed 50 per cent. in dividends. German manufacturers want to get these profits by direct sales by securing enough of the shares to vote its wind-up, says the Hongkong Telegraph.

American machinery, tools, hardware, iron and cotton manufactures, jewelers' tools, plated ware, wood manufactures, wire, moving pictures and talking machines, boots and shoes and typewriters are among the many American manufactures which have obtained a foothold in Canada, not easily to be overcome, even by discriminating tariff preferentials.

As all Asia Minor lights by petroleum lamps, both houses and streets, its imports om chimney glass through Smyrna alone is worth $500,000 a year. No attempt by America nmanufacturers to export glass to Smyrna has yet been heard of.

The humiliating record is $38,330,000 worth of British cotton goods to South America in 1908; $13,823,000 of German in 1907; $5,702,000 worth of French; $8,332,000 worth of Italian; $2,630,000 worth of Spanish, and only $2,760,000 worth of American in 1908.

Levantine newspapers report that Turkey has granted a conditional concession to an American syndicate for a 1243-mile railroad through Asia Minor. Other concessions, covering railroads, harbors, telephones, reclamation of lands, electrical enterprises in Turkey, are being sought by Americans. The railway referred to will cost $97,200,000. Consular Report No. 3616.

The Honduras Railroad Company, an American enterprise, is making moderately good progress on the construction of its line from Truxillo, on the Atlantic Coast, to Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras. The company intends to colonize.

About $57,000,000 of British capital is invested in railway and industrial enterprises in Brazil, besides the heavy British holding of Brazilian government and semi-government securities. These investments explain the grip of British enterprises on the import market of Brazil.

Parcel post between the United States and Dutch Guiana, South America, went into effect on October 1, last. The capital and chief town is Paramaribo; a consular agency of the United States is located there.

Banking (except American) is increasing fast in Turkey. A Russian bank has opened in Constantinople. The National Bank of Turkey has just been organized. The Imperial Ottoman Bank is adding to its branches throughout the empire. A land-mortgage bank has been decided upon. All this means fresh capital into the Ottoman empire.

Natal's chief imports of manufactures are ready-made clothing, boots and shoes, cotton goods, cigars and Cigarettes, drugs, chemicals and pharmaceutical supplies, electric cables, wire and fittings, furniture, haberdashery and millinery, hardware and cutlery, agricultural implements, mining machinery, electrical machinery, manufacturing machinery, agricultural machinery, and motor cars—all lines in which American factories excel. In the first half of 1909, American goods imported totaled a value of $1,138,000 (decrease, $39,000 from 1908 first half,) while the imports from Germany, Sweden and Belgium showed substantial increases.

INSURANCE WORLD.

The United States Fire of Nashville, a mutual company, has been given two weeks to settle with claimants or be thrown into the hands of a receiver by the Insurance Commission. Officers of the company declare that it is doing well and that the Chattanooga suits grew out of some personal differences.

The American Sugar Refining Company is now covering practically all its properties with insurance, after having carried no insurance for several years on its fireproof buildings. The company has an insurance reserve fund of $6,000,000, and a percentage of the lines will be carried in this fund, the blanket form containing a co-insurance clause, so that the fund will contribute in case of any loss.

Although the amendment to the Robertson investment and deposit insurance law became effective on April 7 of this year, the twenty-one old-line companies which withdrew from Texas following the passage of the law in 1907 have not returned or given any indications of coming back. The amendment of 1909 repealed in its entirety the provision of the law which required the securities bought in Texas to be deposited in this State.

The Automobile Insurance Company of America has been organized at Indianapolis, with a million capital and a like surplus. Automobile insurance exclusively will be written, and some of the largest capitalists in the country are interested in the company.

Frank H. Wentworth, secretary for the National Fire Protection Association, says the profligate burning every year of $250,000,000 in value of the work of men's hands means the inevitable impoverishment of the nation. What if we were to lose that sum annually out of the national treasury; or in wheat, or corn, or cotton? A loss of $250,000,000 per year means $500 per minute for every hour of the twenty-four. This fearful loss, spread over the entire business world of America, is beginning to manifest its impoverishing blight. The people feel it without yet being awake to its cause.

TO DRY UP CHICAGO.

manders of Grand Army posts in Chicago formally voted indorsement of the recent anti-saloon demonstration in the streets. George H. Thomas Post, one of the most prominent in the entire army, went on record unanimously to take part, and did so.

In the parade, a grewsome but striking feature was the marching, Indian file, of fifty-seven shrouded figures behind a black coffin, which bore the legend, "The Poor Man's Club." These fifty-seven varieties were intended to represent as many murders committed recently in Chicago as the outcome of saloon fights. These shrouded marchers are suggestive of the style of illustration the liquor evil will be given when the election campaign reaches its zenith of excitement.

At the big German day celebration, Harry Rubens, a leading representative of "Das Vaderland" in Chicago, proclaimed it the purpose of the German-Americans to resist with every lawful weapon encroachments on their customs, and to enlist all other foreign-born citizens who believe in toleration and personal liberty. He counseled active entrance into politics to prevent the "reëstablishment of a Puritan foothold in the country," and to see that national and State laws were enacted more in consonance with the spirit of the Constitution.

Wiping the saloons out of Chicago will be a big proposition economically and in other ways. The number of bars is, in round figures, 7200. Placed side by side on the usual building lot of Chicago, 7200 saloons would wall both sides of a street twenty miles long, counting fifty feet for street intersections and fifteen feet for alleys. By taking a drink before each meal, one drink for each saloon, a man could make the rounds in a little less than seven years. His total bill would be something like $1000.

Banishment of saloons would not put the Chicago breweries and distilleries out of business, but it would be a hard blow to them. During the year 1908, the manufactures of the distillers amounted to $20,000,000, and of the brewers to $15,000,000. The wholesale trade in liquors and wines totaled $50,000,000. While definite data are lackinfg, it seems safe to say that $100,000,000 is invested in Chicago in distilleries, breweries, saloons and stocks of goods. There are a score of bar-rooms whose furnishings alone cost $25,000 each. A few involve much greater expense than that. Rentals in some cases run as high as $1000 a month. The monthly rent roll for all saloons probably reaches $450,000.

Making allowance for the bars conducted in hotels, clubs and cafés, making Chicago "dry" would mean the throwing of 6000 store rooms on the market for rental. Averaging three men, the saloons of Chicago give employment to 21,000. Probably 15,000 of them are on a monthly salary averaging $50, or a total yearly pay of $9,000,000. In these figures are found one of the economic problems involved in the abolishment of the saloon.

There is another problem involving the city. Into the treasury of the municipality under present conditions, saloon-keepers, or brewers and distillers for them, pay the sum of $7,100,000 annually, or one-fourth of the entire running expenses of the city government. The city has found it necessary, under existing conditions, to whittle its budget wherever possible to get within its revenue. With the $7,100,000 taken away, the financial geniuses who try to make ends meet will have new difficulties to contend with.

It is from an entirely different angle the anti-saloon folk, and especially the Prohibitionists, survey this question. They submit figures to show that Chicago pours annually into the cash registers of the saloons for drink the sum of $70,000,000. They set this $70,000,000 over against the $7,000,000 which the municipality obtains for licenses, and asks if the account is not very one-sided, if there is not bad economics in the whole thing.

WHAT'S IN SEVENTY MILLIONS.

Seventy million dollars would maintain the police force on its present basis for fourteen years, or the fire department twenty-three years, or the bureau of streets twenty-two years, or the entire city government in all its branches for two and a half years. At $1.50 a day, it would pay 10,000 to work steadily cleaning the streets for fifteen years. The opportunity to make Chicago "Spotless Town" is apparent. If 2000 men were added at $4 a day, the fund would hold out ten years. In ten years, Chicago's liquor bill would reproduce every dwelling in the city today. In one year it would pave 1800 miles of street with the best material at current prices, including curbs. It would settle the bill for all track elevation and construction of necessary subways since World's Fair year, and leave enough over to pay for the new City Hall and eighty river bridges. It would pay in cash for a subway system capacious enough for fifty years. Finally, it would go far toward converting the dream of a "city beautiful" into substantial reality.

A most important factor in the battle next spring and in the campaign preceding will be the Law and Order League, of which Arthur Burrage Farwell is the active spirit. Mr. Farwell has been called the Anthony Comstock. His organization is against vice in all its forms, and it has waged constant fight against the encroachment of saloons on the already "dry" territory of Chicago. Behind it is the power of wealth and personal influence, backed up by an aggressive spirit which knows no shirking. The foes of the saloon may not win this time, but they intend that the public mind in Chicago and elsewhere shall be concentrated on the conditions surrounding the liquor traffic as never before.

RAILROAD INTERESTS.

It takes the railroads to put money into circulation. The New York, New Haven and Hartford has just voted to issue $50,000,000 of new stock for road improvements. The New York Central has placed orders for $25,000,000 of new equipment for next year, and the Atlantic Coast Line is considering the expenditure of $250,000,000 for double tracking its system and improving terminal facilities.

The net income per mile of road of the railroads in the United States for 1907 exceeded that for 1897 by $1543, an increase of 345 per cent.

The net increase of all the railroads in the United States for 1907 was $449,461,148, and for 1897, $81,257,506—an increase of 453 per cent.

The surplus from operations of all the railroads in the United States for 1907 exceeded the net income for 1897 by $60,065,785.

The amount of railroad stock paying dividends increased from $1,603,649,978 in 1897 to $4,948,756,203 in 1907—an increase of $3,345,206,225. The rate of dividends on stock increased from 5.42 per cent. in 1897 to 6.23 per cent. in 1907—an increase of 14.7 per cent.

"Train for Br-rh-oo-gh--ump, Wog-a-ro-ker-chew 'n' Sog-a-naw-sty—all-'board!" That's about the way the men say it whose business it is to announce the departure of trains. General Manager Bury of the Canadian Pacific thinks that the phonograph can do it better than this without half trying, and he has installed one in the Winnipeg station to see how it will work. Special records have been made for this machine, which calls out the trains with a rare distinctness, and if travelers hereafter get on the train for Victoria, B. C., when they wanted to go to Halifax, N. S., it will be their own fault—[The Pathfinder.

The annual statement of the Northern Pacific shows that the ratio of operating expenses to total operating revenue decreased from 58.40 to 55.54 per cent. from the preceding fiscal year. The only decrease in revenue shown was $802,630.46 in passenger earnings. Freight earnings advanced from $46,423,836.33 to $47,073,305.13, an increase of $649,468.80, which is a remarkable showing in the face of conditions that prevailed during the greater part of the fiscal year. The other revenue from transportation increased from $3,065,076.27 to $3,416,101.72. The net income for last year was $7,534,250.09, compared with $6,258,117.84, an increase of $1,276,232.25.

During 1908 the steam and electric railroads purchased a total of 112,463,449 crossties, this number being a decrease of 41,236,171 ties or 26.8 per cent. from the number purchased in 1907. In 1908 only 7,431,170 ties or 6.6 per cent. of the total were reported as purchased for new tracks, while in 1907, 23,557,000 ties or 15.3 per cent. of the total were purchased for the same purpose.

Two-thirds of the ties purchased for new track in 1908 were reported by the steam roads and one-third by the electric roads. Since the total mileage of the steam roads was several times that of the electric roads these figures indicate that the building activity on the part of electric roads was relatively much greater than that of the steam roads in 1908. The total cost of the ties was $56,280,568, or an average of 50 cents apiece.

EGYPTIAN POSTAL SERVICE.

Records Showing How Mail Was Delivered Over Two Thousand Years Ago—Regular Waybill.

[Christian Science Monitor:] There is on view at the Imperial Postal Museum here a papyrus which shows how the ancient Egyptians conducted a state postal service more than 2150 years ago. It dates from the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus, who reigned from 283 to 247 B. C., when postal deliveries were confined to stations along the Nile. The papyrus is of the nature of a waybill and bears the signatures of five postal officials who would correspond to the present sorters, postmen and branch superintendents. The document reads somewhat as follows:

"On this, the 16th day of .... I Alexander, received the following: For Ptolemy, the King, 1 letter packet; for Appolonius of the Exchequer, 1 letter packet and 2 letters; for Antiochus the Cretan, 1 letter packet; for Menodorus, 1 letter packet; for Chelos, 1 letter packet. Delivered the above into the hands of Nicodemus, this the 17th day of .... Signed, Alexander."

"This morning, the .... I, Phoenix, junior, son of Heracletus the Macedonian, have delivered to Aminon 1 letter packet and paid expenses to Phanias, the carrier. I, Aminon, delivered the above to Theochrestus, etc., etc."

It is noteworthy that the time of the dispatch of parcels is given with routine-like regularity. Mention is further made of letter packets to the chief of the elephant hunt; to Theogenes, the tax collector; to Zoilos, the chief of the exchequer at Hermanpolis, and various other departmental chiefs.

A little Los Angeles girl on her return from Sunday-school last week announced to her mother, "Jesus wasn't there today, mother."

Further inquiry from her mother brought this information: "Well, they sang 'Jesus is Calling Today.'"

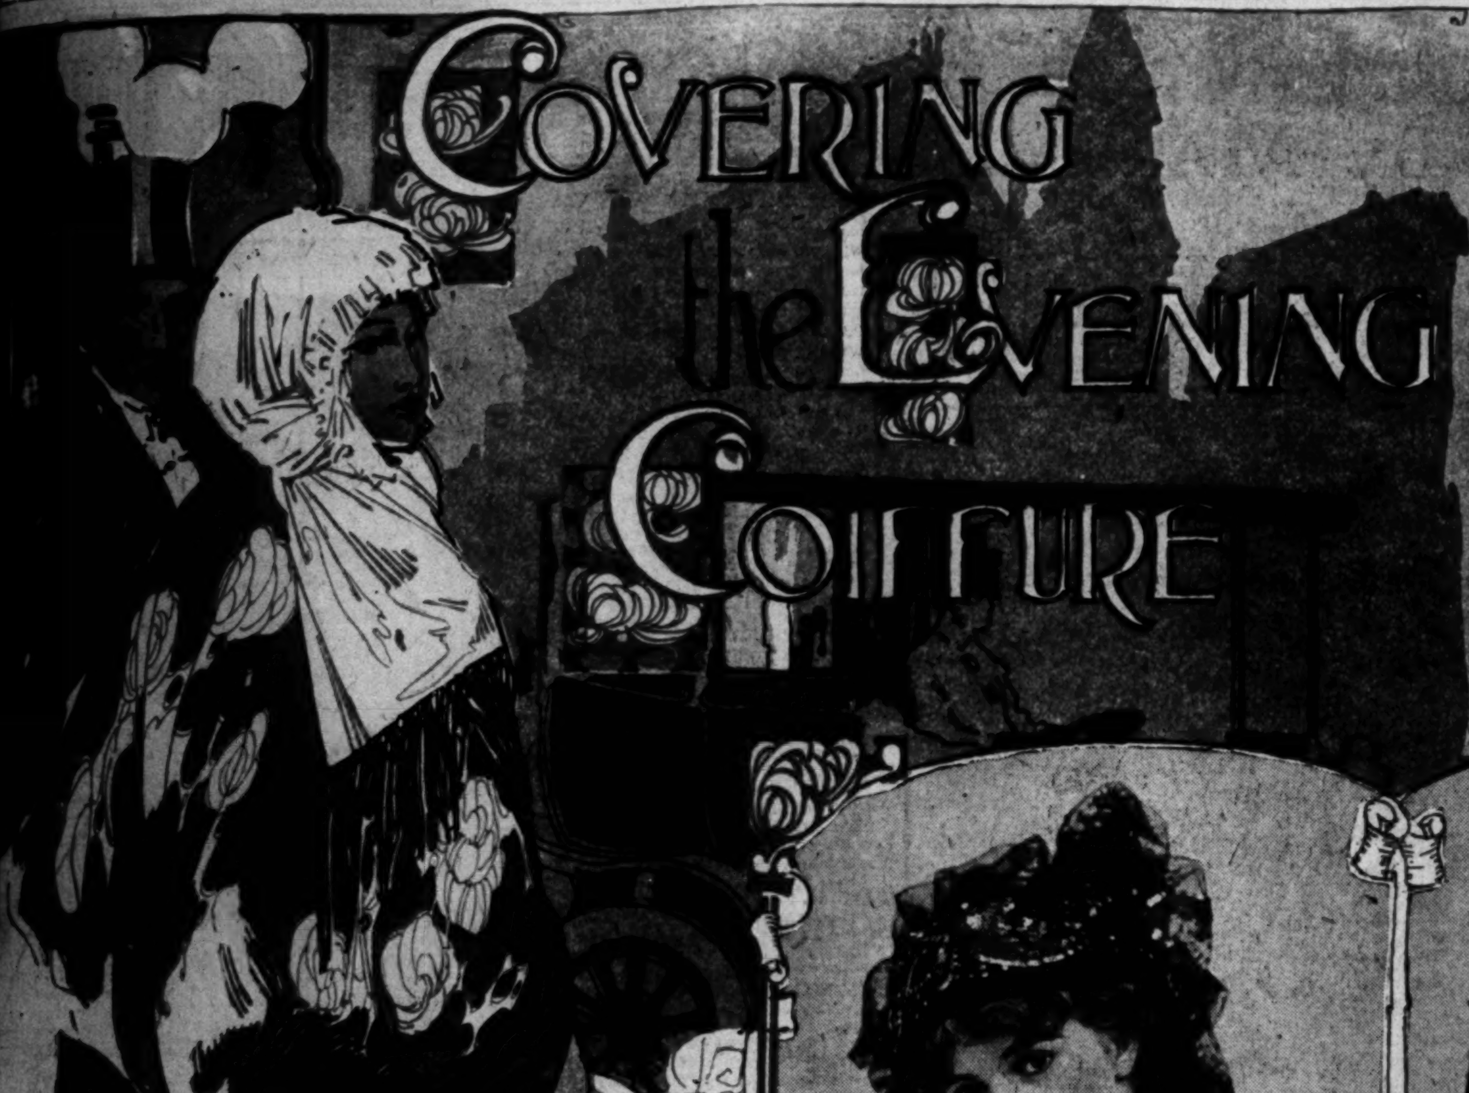
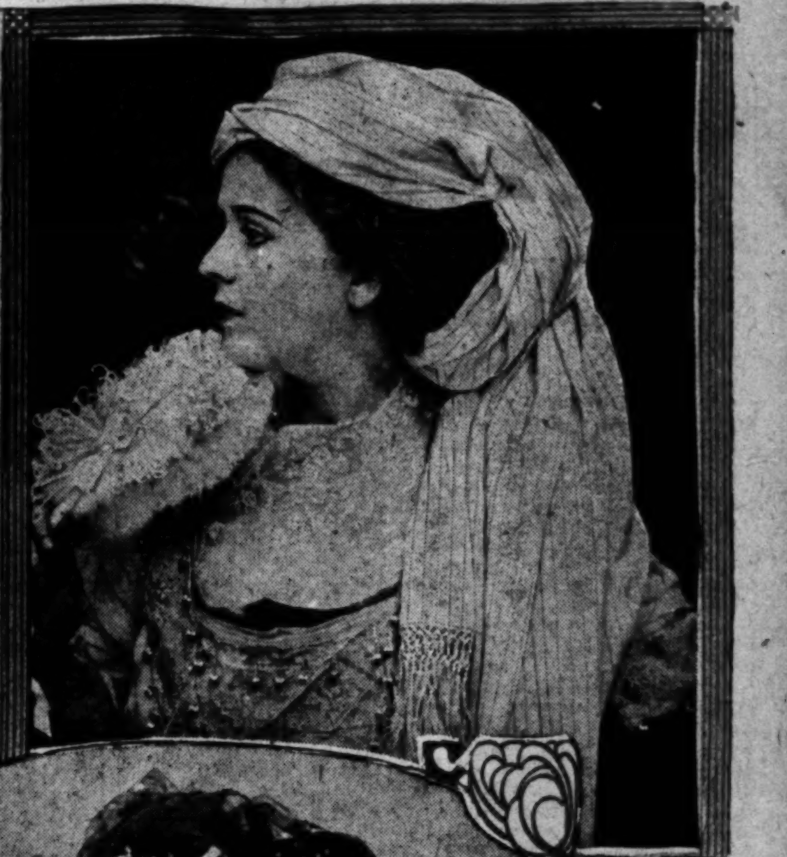
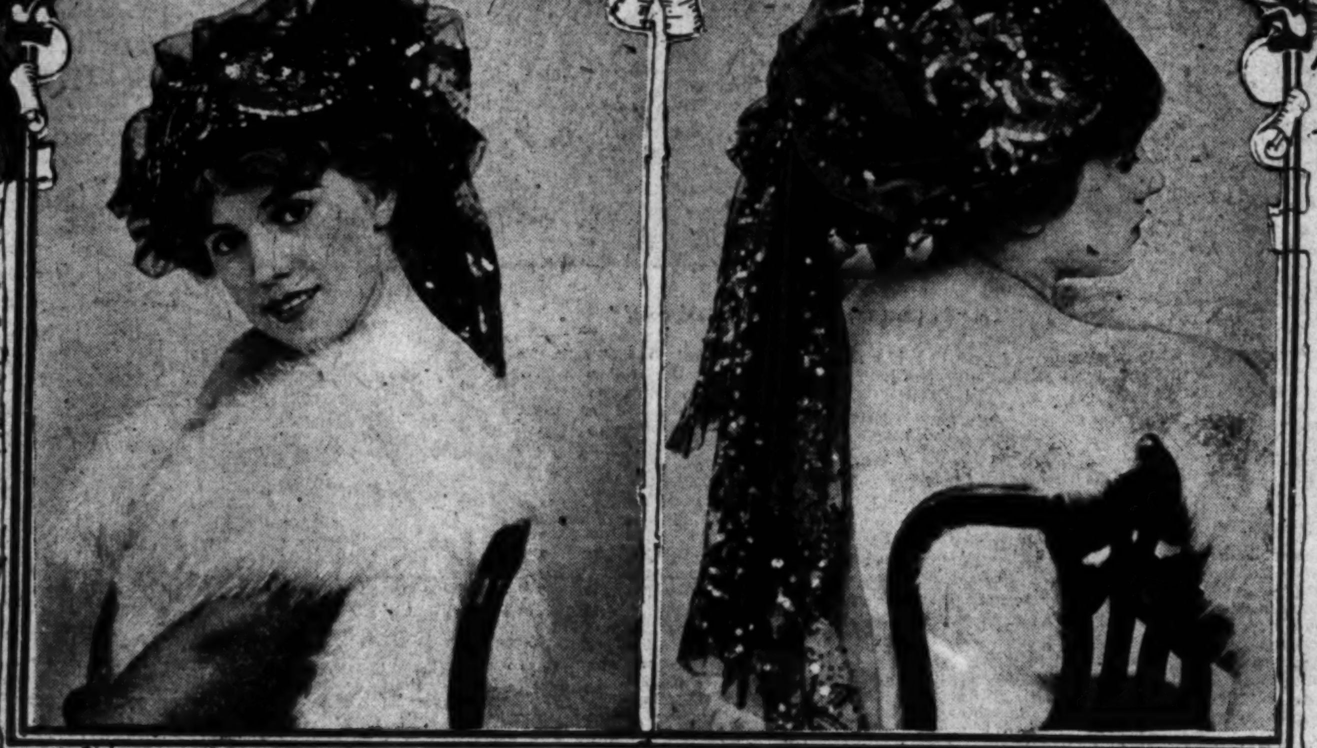
Covering the Evening Coiffure

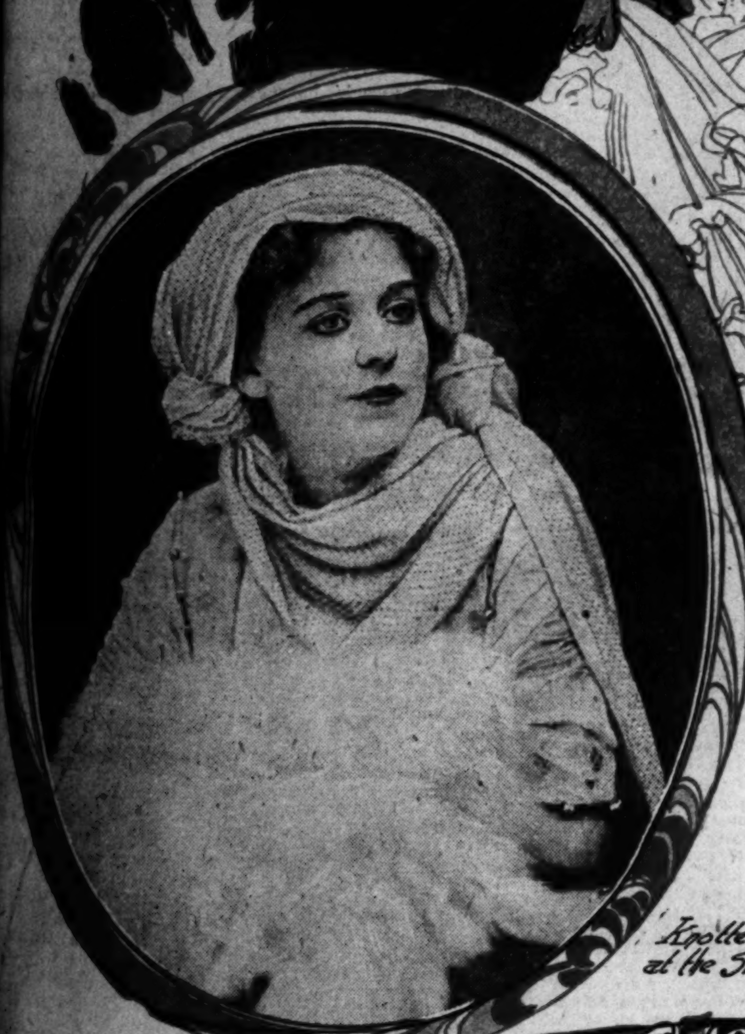




Wrapped in Turban Fashion



Front and Back of a Peacock Scarf



Knotted at the Side

WHEN is a scarf not a scarf? When a clever woman can twist or turn the long lines into a lovely and becoming covering for the head. It matters not what material or style the scarf may be; the fringed edges, beaded centers or embroidered nets can be fashioned into any shape at a moment's notice.

A gold net scarf with long fringed ends is twisted into a heavy rope and gives a head decoration in a little different form from the enveloping caps. The center of the scarf is placed at the back of the head, quite low down. Its length is twisted, crossed in front and each end is turned once under the first coil. Just above the fringe a loose knot is made. This style of headdress was favored by Madame de Stael, that wonderful woman of years ago, and is becoming to most types nowadays.

The beaded marquisette is treated in a simpler form. Its decorative mesh is sufficiently ornate for evening wear, and a protective covering is obtained by curling the central portion of the strip over the head and knotting it at each side.

With a piece of black ribbon the silky fulness of a black fringed shawl can be held in place. It is a simple arrangement; the end is dropped over the hair and a soft ribbon is tied around the neck, the bow and the scarf ends dropping at one side.

A peacock scarf is shown in a wonderful, filmy drapery which hints of the lace headdress of Spain. The embroidered net band is placed over the front of the hair and tied at the back in two large loops. These are pulled toward the front and pinned at each side. The glistening ends are allowed to hang down the back. Surely this piquancy will meet with the approval of American women.

Striped silk or crepe may be wrapped in folds around the head after the manner of eastern turbans, yet with a looseness which will not destroy the arrangement of the hair. The soft layers of silk at each side are pinned in place and fringed ends hang over one shoulder.

Pleating is the fluffy solution of another scarf problem. Silk envelops the head, is knotted at each side and by edging the front with a strip of soft chiffon pleating a capuchon is the charming result.

When burdened with scarfs, either plain or highly decorative, remember that they need not always rest on the shoulders. They can mount to the head and form beautiful and protecting ornaments for evening coiffures.

The general idea of the evening wrap should govern the choosing of the scarf. With a coat of chiffon the net or beaded headdress is becoming. The oriental turban is appropriate for the burnous, and the capuchon is the correct style for fluffy evening wraps. A dignified black coat might have the attractive rope headdress, while the silk shawl is becoming when worn with embroidered silk or satin.

Variety in this collection solves the question of becoming and consistent covering for the heads of beautiful women.

PICKING and STEALING

SOME dictionaries make the two words synonyms. That there is at least a shade of difference between "picking" and downright theft is evident from examples taken from standard English authors.

The Church of England catechism specifies, as part of "thy duty toward thy neighbor," "to keep my hands from picking and stealing."

Webster comes nearer to supplying me with the exact significance of the term I would use in this paper than any other lexicographer:

> PICKING: That which is obtained by petty pilfering; perquisites gotten by means not strictly honest.

I had not room, in the first part of our talk upon "Economy in Hired Labor," to deal with the most grievous leak in the housewife's income consequent upon the employment of irresponsible hirelings—a leak from which the close corporation of mother and daughters is absolutely free. I am painfully aware that I tread upon very thin ice in discussing the evil. Not one mistress in ten is willing to believe that her trusted servant is capable of defrauding her, after years of constant association have proved to the employe the disposition of the master or mistress to be "square" in every transaction and to go beyond the letter of the law in daily acts of kindness and consideration.

My friend Mrs. Blank had a cook who had been her maid-of-all-work before Mr. Blank made his "pile." That was eight years ago. When the pile waxed into a big pyramid and the Blanks moved uptown into a house that accorded with the growth of their income, Katy was cook, with a "gurrel to help" in the kitchen. Still she was Mrs. Blank's confidential and trusted servant. Her wages were high, but the uncovenanted largesses that flowed into her apron from the open hands of her grateful employers amounted in actual value to more than the wage in the course of the year.

SOME OF THE PICKINGS

I well recollect how the indignant blood rushed into the face of my friend when a visitor remarked, philosophically, apropos of "the Greatest Plague of Life," "If the truth were known, we should find that we are all of us partially robbed, and that continually!"

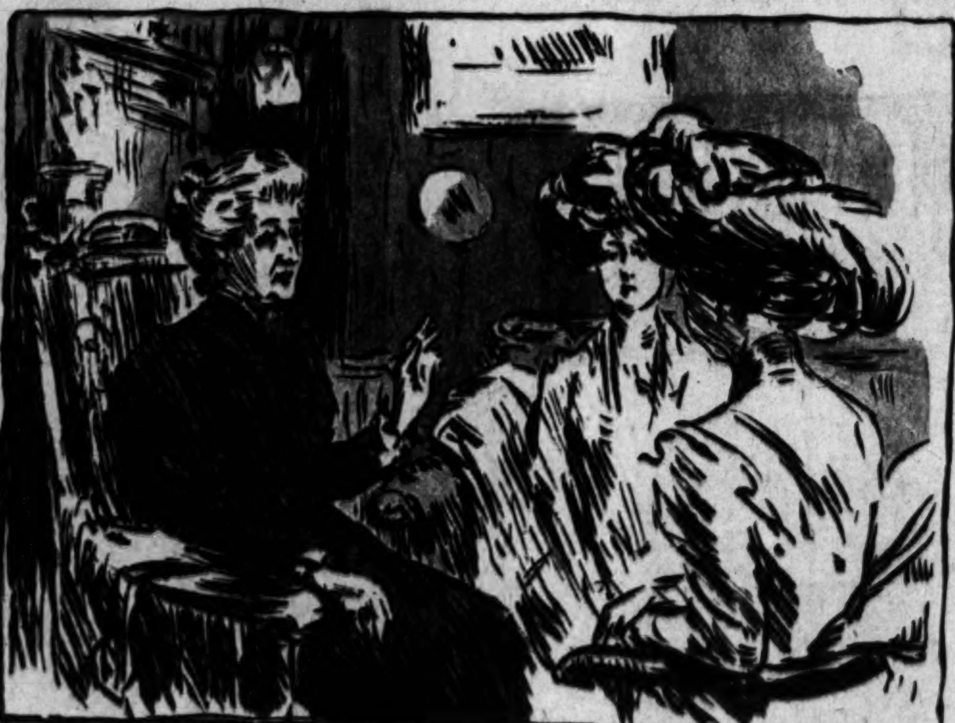
"I would trust my Katy with untold gold!" cried the loyal mistress. "I would wager my life upon her honesty!"

Yet a chain of evidence that began with a kitchen quarrel brought to light, a month thereafter, the horrible truth that Katy had been feeding her old mother and invalid sister upon pickings from the Blank kitchen for all the years of her incumbency. Had she been content, or had her beneficiaries not insisted upon sharing in the rising fortunes of the family, she might have gone on with the pious pickings until the savings invested for his wife's favorite by Mr. Blank justified her in retiring from active service. The abnormally large straw that broke the back of the mistress' blind confidence was the abstraction of a case of champagne, from which but three bottles had been taken, when Katy's sister was married and the supper demanded "a genuine blowout."

Of course, the picker who had developed into a thief was not prosecuted. Did you ever know of a dismissed maid in America who was? I go further and declare that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand mistresses would act as Mrs. Blank comported herself in the true story we have in hand. She gave Katy a certificate to the effect that she had lived in her family for twelve years as general housemaid and then as cook; that she was "willing, neat, respectful and competent, industrious and sober."

"I said nothing of honesty," she told me afterward. "And the lady who called to get particulars as to the girl's fitness for cook's place in her house, to my great satisfaction, did not question me on that head. I should have been sorry to keep the girl out of a place."

"That is another story," so illustrative of the American housewife's methods and morals that I have to hold myself in with bit and bridle to keep from enlarging upon it.



"'I would trust my Katy with untold gold.'"

I have brought forward this incident to define the difference between the "picking" I firmly believe to be the rule and not the exception in a majority of our homes and downright and wholesale "stealing."

Katy is our type. She is an affectionate and, to the best of her lights, a dutiful daughter. Her mother is poor and not strong. The resources of the small family are cruelly strained to provide food and clothing, rent, fuel and light. The invalid sister requires comforts the confessedly poor cannot get. Katy feeds upon the fat of the land by comparison. Her bed is soft; her room is well furnished; privation is as far from her daily life as from Mrs. Blank's self. It is inevitable that her thoughts should turn longingly to the pinching poverty that reigns in the mean dwelling of those dear to her. It is as natural and well-nigh as inevitable that, bit by bit, some of the abundance of her daily fare should find its way to the table and pantry of that home. The "drawing" of tea such as the sister has never tasted before, a couple of rolls, a fresh egg or two, a slice of cake that would dry in the keeping if not used, a chop that was not cooked, a cup of nourishing soup, to say nothing of "left-overs" from the provision cooked for "the family" and sent uneaten from the bountiful board—is it strange that in time all these come to be rated in the kitchen code of morals as "perquisites"?

SOOTHING SALVE

Put yourself in Katy's place. Is your sense of honesty of such tough fiber as to resist the temptation to which she yields gradually? Especially when the aforesaid code is in general operation among the associates of the employed. Is it casuistry or sound reasoning that salves her conscience with the assurance that Mrs. Blank, who is the soul of generosity, would not "mind" if she knew of the tiny leaks from her household stores? She would give Katy twice as much if she knew what are the needs of that poor family in the slums.

"I knew you wouldn't mind!"

That was what Daphne from Dixie said to me when I discovered that she had abstracted six bottles of ginger ale from the storeroom for her private consumption.

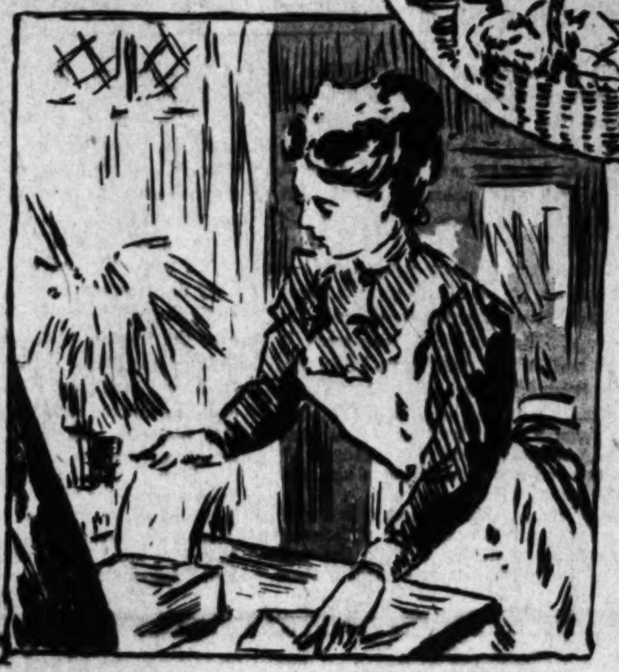
"'Twas while you were out of town, that week, you know, ma'am, and I'm mighty subjec' to win' colic. There's nothin' better for it than ginger. An' I knew you wouldn't min'."

I did mind, and told her so. All the same, I recognized the patent poultice warranted to put scruples to flight and to prevent the recurrence of twinges of conscience.

The rich in this world's goods do not "mind" as do those who calculate expenses by fractions of dollars. I was talking of this very matter to a millionaire not long ago.

"The evil is as old as time," he said, and quoted "honest" Pistol's "The wise 'convey' it call."

"Now, there's James, my butler, who has been with me seventeen years. The fellow knows his business perfectly and he knows his place. In one way, he is faithful to my interests. He would not let a tradesman cheat me of a dollar. He does all manner of things to please and serve me that are not nominated in the bond. Yet I am confidently persuaded that he takes toll of nearly all provisions that are brought to my house. He goes to his own home every night, and never without a satchel. Why do I keep him if I am sure of this? My dear lady! have you forgotten the fable of the deer tangled by the thorns in the thicket and covered with mosquitoes? When a fox peeping over the hedge offered to drive them away, the poor beast answered that if these were beaten off, a swarm of hungrier tormentors would take their places. I know that James pilfers and peculates. I have abundant proof of it. If I discharge him, his successor may be a downright thief. So I put his pickings down to profit and loss. My silver and my gold are safe in his hands. I don't growl if the crumbs he brushes into that satchel—and it bulges with them—are numerous and fat."



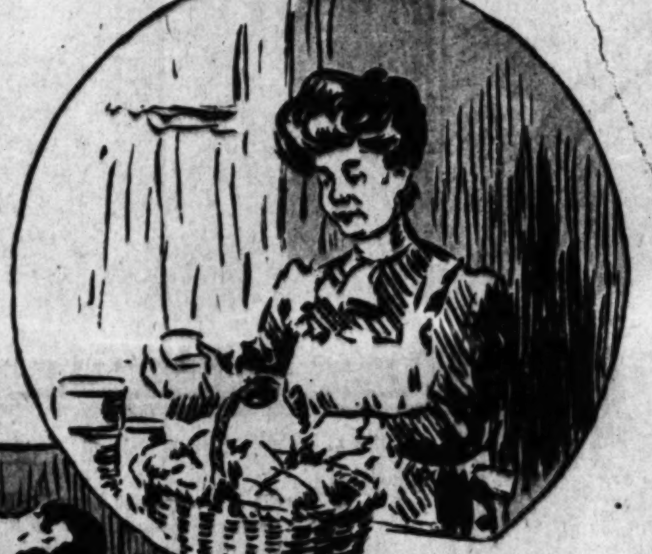
"'No lady would begrudge a sheet of writing paper.'"

THE HALF-WAY POOR

As I said last week, I am not writing for millionaires, or even for women in "easy circumstances." "The half-way poor," to borrow again the apt phrase of an essayist, must "mind" the loss of crumbs. And when the area door is forever ajar, be the crack never so small that lets out food for which we have paid honest money, we have a right to close and lock it.

Forty years ago I issued an edict of exclusion to the "basket beggar." I have my own charities, to which I contribute liberally and intelligently. It is not for Katy to decide in what channel these contributions shall flow. What is bought by me and stored in my house is my lawful property, and mine is the right to dispose of it as I like.

It would be amusing, were it not provoking, to look into the bylaws of the code to which I have referred just now. Certain properties of the employer do not "count" in Katy's inventory of personal belongings. Perfumery, cosmetics, medicines; now and then pocket handkerchiefs; always and everywhere pins and stationery, are reckoned as common property.



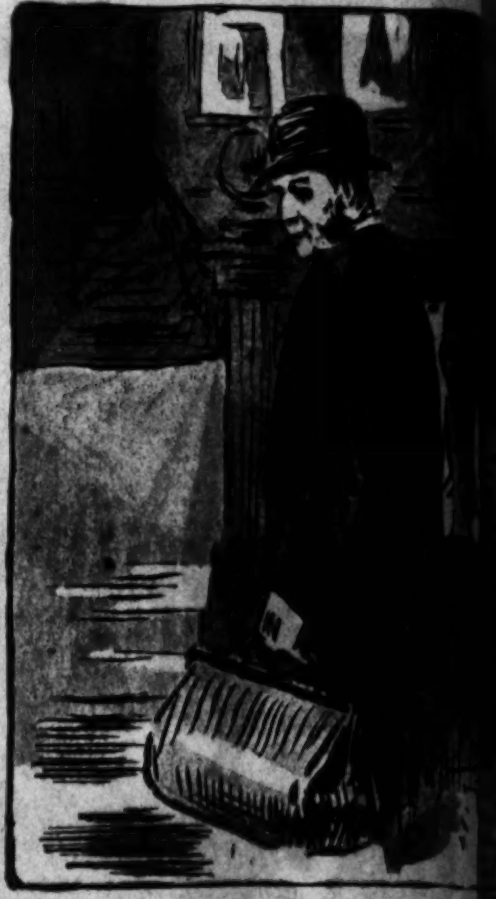
"The pious pickings for Katy's aged mother."

Twenty years ago, in the interregnum dividing the incumbency of regular gardeners, I engaged a "caretaker" for my country home. In the three months of his occupancy of the kitchen-wing of the house the family made away with every whole pot, kettle and pan. After he removed from the premises I wrote to tell him of the theft and to demand an explanation. The letter was answered by himself and by his daughter. Both flatly denied having taken "so much as a pin that did not belong to them," and were virtuously indignant at the charge.

I replied in one sentence: "Kindly tell me, then, how you happen to write to me upon stationery engraved with my name and address, and which was left in my desk drawers."

The girl wrote back hysterically that she "didn't suppose any lady was so mean principled as to grudge a sheet of paper and an envelope to anybody!"

I did not learn then for the first time that I have no prescriptive right to stationery, even when stamped with my own proper name and that of my abiding place.



"'My butler goes to his home every evening, but

In passing, I drop the remark that this bylaw has force in higher places than in the culinary cabinet. I have in mind sundry households, the heads of which are government officials, where all the paper used in the family is openly "brought home from the office." A young newspaper man, on his return from a winter in Washington, presented his fiancee and each of his sisters with beautiful portfolios given to him by a certain senator whose protege and henchman he was.

IN HIGH PLACES

"Government appropriations!" remarked the youth, airily. "Uncle Sam does these things handsomely."

Yet we brand illiterate Katy as a pilferer and intrust our best interests to the congressman!

Return we to our household leaks. I do not assert that they are to be found in every home. On the contrary, I know that honesty of the right type moves some employes as truly as it controls your conduct and mine in the discharge of our duty to our neighbor. I would go to the root of the perversion of this moral principle in so many cases that we are forced to treat it as a rule. It is a hard strain upon human nature to resist the demoralization of the moral sense that grows insensibly upon him or her who habitually handles the property of another as freely as if it were his or her own. "Familiarity breeds contempt" here and fatally. We hear daily the complaint: "She has kept that book so long that she really thinks it is hers." Or that this or that article of furniture stored in a friend's house has become virtually the property of those who have used it for a year. The "contempt" bred is disregard of individual ownership.

The reflection should breed charitable judgment of Katy and her peculations. The lesson I am inculcating now is that if we could restore "the close corporation" to the home this crying evil of our domestic system would be removed—and entirely. I need not explain what was treated fully a week ago as to the "close corporation." I went into the subject almost as fully in the talk upon "Mother and Daughter," published September 26. The imminent importance of the theme is impressed upon me by the events of each passing week.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

A Bachelor Girl's Defense

MY, but you are severe upon us poor bachelor girls! So it is I to the defense.

We girls all know that the modern young man is a pretty fast lot and sows a good-sized crop of wild oats. And we don't condemn him. Ah, no! We marry him. Our mothers know all about that crop of wild oats and they don't interfere. Nay, even, they urge us to marry him.

So we argue, "What matters it if the man be not the first who presses our ruby lips so long as he is the last?" We, too, want to sow our wild oats. The fever is in our blood as well as in our brothers', and we choose our own way of doing it. Summer plantations and moonlit shores. We play love's game to the finish, and we don't squeal if sometimes, perchance, we get hurt. We play the game.

"The young men with whom we play it don't respect us," is the old familiar cry. Maybe they don't. We know we have very little respect for our masculine friends—especially for hypocrites, who urge us on to be "a game sport" and then sit in judgment upon us.

When I cease to sign myself "Bachelor Girl" (which won't be long now, as I am wearing a headlight on my third left) I'm going to have the word "honor" struck out of the marriage service. I can obey and love but "honor"! Not on your life. "He" is only a mortal like myself. A little worse, I confess.

I for one am not ashamed of my past flirtations. Frankly, I enjoyed the excitement they produced. The memories of those days, or rather evenings, cause no blushes to mount to my cheeks. If "the man" wanted to hear of every little naughtiness, I would willingly tell him. But he [illegible] He doesn't. Nor do I care for his past. Our lives began when we met each other.

These are my views, and they are shared by other girls I know. Publish as much of this letter as you like, but only give me leave to defend ourselves.

BACHELOR GIRL (Pontiac, Mich.).

I take you at your word and print every line of the "defense." I am neither a prude nor a duenna, and from the very bottom of my heart I love girls!

So I am anxious to believe that yours were very innocent flirtations. That, for example, you never let a man whom you did not love hold you in his arms, and call you by the dear names that are music in your ears as they fall from the lips of him to whom you have plighted your troth solemnly, a pledge to be confirmed in the sight of God and man when the plain gold ring takes the place of the "headlight." I refuse to believe that you profaned the name and the nature of true love by pretending to feel it for a man you never meant to marry. To be guilty of these things would be to sully your delicacy and blunt your sense of truth and honor.

As to the kind of man who would not care with how many other "fellows" his betrothed wife has played at loving "to the finish" (to borrow your phrase) you are quite right in refusing to honor him. I wonder if he or you can enter into the significance of a little true story that recurred to me in reading your letter?

One of the purest, noblest and most thoroughly brave and honorable men I have ever had the high privilege of knowing, said to another young fellow who was carrying on a lively flirtation with a girl of 18:

"I am not her guardian or your mentor. But I cannot comprehend how a man of common humanity can lead that mere child on to what he knows (and she does not!) will make her bitterly ashamed and remorseful in after life. She will despise herself and hate you. You call it 'fun.' I say it is unmanly and cruel!"

Promiscuous Kissing

A California member has her say upon the same topic:

Regarding your article upon the "Bachelor Girl," let me say that smoking, drinking, betting, late suppers, etc., are wrong, but just as wrong for a man as for a woman. There should not be an excusing of men in these things. They are wrong, while an occasional kiss does not hurt either party. Ask "any true man who reverences too sincerely," etc., if he hasn't kissed girls. Well, the girl has the same right, and if she has happened to kiss gentlemen friends she makes just as good and true a wife—maybe better—for she is not so likely to run off with "affinities."

Of course, the unladylike actions of some educated girls, who have had every chance to learn how to behave, and also their inconsiderateness to others, is not "nice."

A READER OF YOUR PAGE (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I said, in commenting on the first letter printed today, that I am no prude. Perhaps my "Reader" will doubt it when I remark that I do not think it at all "nice" for a girl to kiss a young man who is not a relative, her betrothed or her husband. I should be intensely mortified were a daughter or a ward of mine to fall into the habit of promiscuous kissing which, I am told, prevails among young people of both sexes in some circles. I consider it unrefined and indelicate—sometimes, indecent.

Am I old-fashioned and fastidious in the opinion? Will other girls and the mothers of girls speak up plainly and kindly on this head?

High Prices Again

I have just read a letter in the Exchange concerning cheap living in California. Where, oh, where does the son of that correspondent live?

Eight years ago I used to get some things at quite reasonable prices, and we got on nicely on $10 per week. Of that, $6, $7 or $8 went for groceries a month. Now there are six of us, and our grocery bills amount to $38 a month. This includes fruits. We cannot afford fresh meat. Common round steak is never less than 15 cents per pound. We live as plainly as we can. I have no oven, so the grocer supplies us with bread. Butter is 35 cents and 40 cents a pound, and strong at that. Eggs are now 40 cents, and sometimes 50 cents a dozen. Little, wormeaten ears of corn are 20 cents a dozen.

Oh, no! Living in California is very high. If I could take the climate with me, I'd go home if I had to walk all the way. But I look at the bright sunshine, the gleaming blue skies and the yet bluer sea, the distant hills.

I love the long, rainless summers; and how I have reveled in the springtime in roses, lilies, violets, heliotropes and golden poppies!

Would you like to have a few recipes which I can recommend conscientiously?

Vegetable Plum Pudding.

Half a pound of potatoes, boiled and mashed; quarter of a pound of carrots, boiled, mashed and rubbed through a colander; half pound, each, of cleaned currants and raisins; quarter pound, each, of light-brown sugar and of suet, chopped fine; half pound of flour, two ounces of candied lemon peel, a tablespoonful of molasses and a little grated nutmeg or cinnamon.

Mix all well in a bowl with a wooden spoon. Let it stand all night, covered with a clean cloth. Next day tie it up in a pudding cloth that has been wrung out in hot water, spread out and dredged with flour. Leave room to swell. Boil three or four hours or more.

ONE OF THEM (Redondo, Cal.).

I have not room for all of your letter today. More will follow next week. But let me ask you what raises that very novel pudding? There are neither eggs, yeast nor baking powders. Are you sure that you have named all the ingredients? Does it ferment during the night of waiting? If so, is it not sour when cooked?

This is not criticism, but honest, housewifely curiosity. Let us hear from you again. Even at the prices you enumerate, living is cheaper in your summer land of flowers than at the East. I am paying 38 cents a pound for butter, and it is going up daily. Eggs, it is predicted, will touch 60 cents a dozen in a little while, and the cheapest steak is 20 cents per pound. Is it surprising that economical devices are the order of the day?

Defective Feathers

Can you tell me what to do for comparatively new feathers in a new tick that have a bad odor? The bed has been slept in a part of two winters and it is perfectly clean. It has been sunned and aired for several weeks and still has the bad smell.

The feathers are goose and duck and were bought from a neighbor. I cannot use the bed as it is. Can you or the members of the Exchange help me? E. M. N. (Bluffs, Ill.).

It is a gloomy outlook so late in the season. For the one and only hope of curing the feathers would be to empty the tick, spread the contents upon a sheet and lay this upon the clean earth on dry days, letting the sun and air help the warm, sweet earth in the work of deodorizing. You may try it still on very fine, breezy days. Throw light netting over the feathers to keep them from blowing away, and turn and toss them every hour.

More About Pepper Burns

I read the article about Mrs. Blank and her poor hands, which were so badly burned with green peppers. I have got so much good out of the Exchange that I am glad I can tell you something that may be helpful. If Mrs. Blank had held her hands in vinegar for ten or fifteen minutes it would have taken the burning sensation out.

Will you tell me what makes pickled cucumbers shrivel?

Mrs. H. M. (Fort Wayne, Ind.).

1. Had Mrs. Blank taken care not to touch the seeds of the peppers with her hands she would not have been burned. The peppers should be cut at the stem end, and the seeds and the stem to which they are attached inside of the pepper may be easily drawn out whole, or dug out with a narrow knife blade or small stick.

2. Your cucumbers were not properly soaked in cold brine before they were pickled. That would have made them firm. They should lie in the brine for three days, then for two days in cold fresh water. Next, they are packed in a kettle between vine leaves; alum is sprinkled through the layers, a triple covering of vine leaves laid on the top and the kettle is filled with cold water. This is allowed to heat slowly to the scalding point and held at that for at least two hours. Then the cucumbers are rinsed and transferred to a deep jar, and boiling spiced vinegar is poured over them, covering them completely. The vinegar is drawn off and reheated twice a week for a month, and poured back upon the pickles. Cucumbers and mangoes, put up in this way will never shrivel.

The Guest Room

NATURALLY, you will make your guest room, as well as your whole house, as attractive as possible. But don't crowd too much into it. Heavy draperies are a mistake in bedrooms. Plenty of fresh air and sunshine are needed, and should not be shut out. Don't have furnishings that cannot bear the sun. A fine soft matting, with rugs for bedside, bureau and fireplace, will be much more satisfactory than the most expensive carpet. A well-chosen wall paper, a few pretty pictures—some of the soft photogravures or autotypes, if you cannot afford anything expensive—a few bits of bric-a-brac, a shaded lamp, a stray book or two, a vase of flowers, airy window draperies, and, above all, if it be winter, a bright open fire, will go far toward making a charming room. If it be large, and especially if two persons occupy it, a folding screen is almost a necessity. It may be as inexpensive as you choose, only it should harmonize with the general effect of the room.

White wings fluttering beautiful shoulders, and nestling in his golden curls a diadem of jewels quivered in the sunlight like drops of dew. A delicate, wandlike scepter was held in one rosy hand.

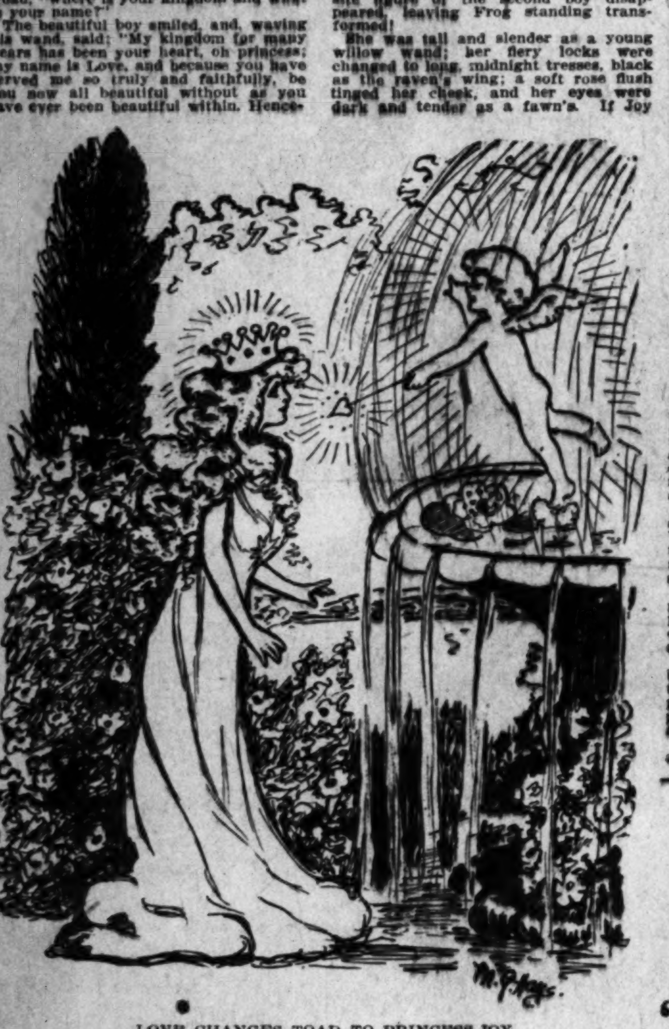
"Advance, princess whom the cruel ones have named Toad," said a voice like the sweetest music.

"I am she, oh beautiful prince!" Toad cried, covering her poor face with her misshapen hand.

"I am no prince," answered the boy, "but a king!"

"If you are a king, fair boy," said Toad, "where is your kingdom and what is your name?"

The beautiful boy smiled, and, waving his wand, said: "My kingdom for many years has been your heart, oh princess; my name is Love, and because you have served me so truly and faithfully, be you now all beautiful without as you have ever been beautiful within. Henceforth be known as Joy."



LOVE CHANGES TOAD TO PRINCESS JOY

So saying, the beautiful boy disappeared and poor Toad stood, "in tall and slender beauty all arrayed." Her green seaweed locks were changed to long ringlets of palest gold and her eyes were as blue and deep and sweet as the sapphire bay which glittered beneath the cliffs whereon was perched her father's castle of gold. And she was the most beautiful princess in the whole wide world.

When Frog and Pollywog saw how beautiful their sister had become they clasped their hands in wonder and delight.

"Oh, dear one," they cried, "do not despise us, and oh! what joy to have so fair a creature not afraid to approach and caress us!"

Joy was about to embrace them both, when another rustling was heard, and there, upon the silver brim of the next fountain, stood another winged, boyish figure, as lovely as the last. "Approach, Princess Frog!" he cried. And then, as Frog came forward tremblingly, he said:

"I, also, am a king; my name is Kindness. Long have I reigned within thy heart, and now I would make thee as beautiful without as thou hast ever been beautiful within. Henceforth thou shalt be known as Peace." And with one wave of his glittering wand the exquisite figure of the second boy disappeared, leaving Frog standing transformed!

She was tall and slender as a young willow wand; her fiery locks were changed to long, midnight tresses, black as the raven's wing; a soft rose flush tinged her cheek, and her eyes were dark and tender as a fawn's. If Joy had not stood by her side, she would have been the most beautiful princess in the whole wide world!

Poor Pollywog, without a thought of self, gazed adoringly at the two radiant creatures, her erstwhile companions, and sighed softly:

"Now, what joy to our poor father, the king, when he sees his two lovely daughters!" Then she felt a light kiss upon her cheek, and turning her poor, twisted body around, she gazed upon the most beautiful boy of all.

"Yes, poor little subject," he said, smilingly; "I, too, am a king; my name is Unselfishness, and thou hast served me so long and so faithfully that I would show the world what a beautiful soul can do for a misshapen body. Henceforth be thou called Beauty." So saying, he touched poor Pollywog with his wand and disappeared.

The other princesses saw with delight Pollywog's deformities vanish. There she stood, swaying in the rose-scented breeze—straight and slender as a silver birch. Thick, curled tresses of burnished copper hung far below her waist, while the long, black lashes of her clear hazel eyes lay on a cheek as white and fragrant as the petals of the orange blossom. And if Joy and Peace had not stood by her side, she would have been the most beautiful princess in all the whole wide world!

Then the three sweet princesses, Joy and Peace and Beauty, left the castle behind the tall hedge of honeysuckle and briar roses and went up to their father, the king, and there was great rejoicing throughout all the kingdom, because at last the three little princesses were fair to look upon, as befitted their station!

For, alas! as long as this silly old world lasts we poor mortals cannot see the beautiful souls trying to look at us through the clay windows of their prison houses, unless they are made clear to us by Love, Kindness and Unselfishness.

A Trick for the Boy Magician

SOME evening, when you are at a loss to know how best to entertain your friends, try the cane trick. It's a bit of mystery that will enliven any gathering.

Tie a piece of black thread from knee to knee, having about twelve inches of space between your legs. Find a thin cane or light walking stick. Then announce your readiness for the performance.

Explain to your audience that, by magnetic force, you are about to make the cane stand by itself upon an end. Step back a few feet, and, avoiding observation, slip the cane between the legs, bringing it forward until it touches the black thread. Standing with the feet a short distance apart, place the cane on the floor in a position as nearly upright as possible, letting it rest gently against the thread.

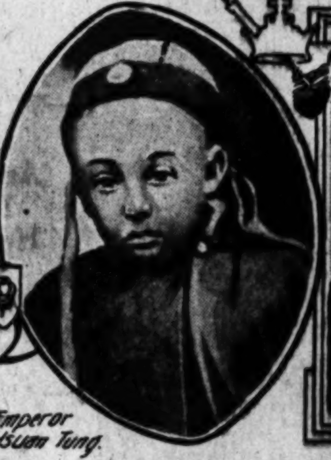
Slowly take your hands from the cane and wave them in a dramatic manner. You will note the looks of surprise upon the faces of your audience as they see the cane standing apparently without support.

Be sure to keep still, else the cane may slip to one side. After you have permitted it to stand for a few seconds, lift up the cane and hand it out among your audience for inspection.

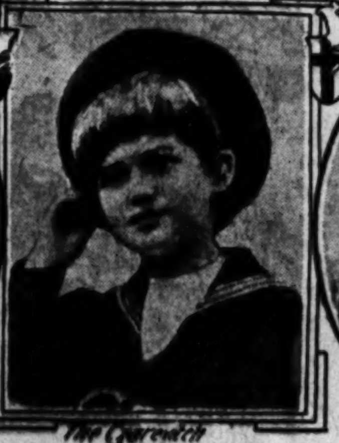
You can easily repeat the trick a number of times with small danger of detection. It may be less difficult for you to perform the trick if you sit upon a chair placed at considerable distance from the audience.

Do this trick the first chance you have, and mystify your friends.

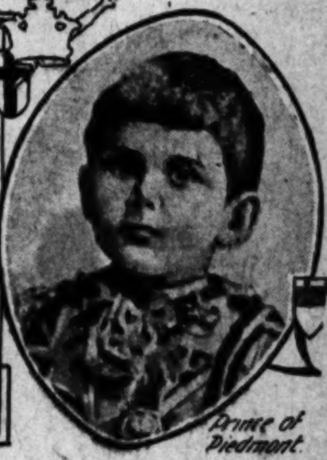
Big Prisons for Little Princes and Princesses



Emperor Hsuan Tung.



The Czarevitch



Prince of Piedmont.

LITTLE PU YI cried when carried into the great throneroom. The noise made by the booming of cannon and firing of guns and bursting of bombs frightened him. Prince Chun, his father, whispered that he would give him a pony if he wouldn't cry. But Pu Yi wasn't comforted, not even when he was placed on a grand throne and two thousand people fell down upon their faces worshiping him and proclaiming him emperor of 400,000,000 subjects.

Today this tiny emperor of China, whose baby name has been changed to the big-sounding one of Hsuan Tung, plays with wonderful Chinese animals of wood, iron, paper and cloth. The four long "pigtails" in which his hair is braided bob over mechanical playthings such as railroad trains, phonographs and electrical car lines. He has no playmate. And because the wise fellow is only 2 years of age, reckoned by our time, he probably doesn't mind so very much. But the day will come, most likely, when he will want to run out where he pleases and share the fun of other Chinese boys. Then he will find that, although an emperor ruling a fourth of all the people in the world, he must stay in the big yellow-roofed building of the Pink Forbidden City of Pekin, nor venture outside the high, well-guarded walls save on rare occasions, and then with strong escort. The 10,000 servants and courtiers who are supposed to dwell in the palace to do his will are in reality placed about him to watch every movement. Little Hsuan Tung is a prisoner.

OTHER LITTLE PRISONERS

And so, unless we except Prince Edward of Wales, nearly all little princes and princesses are prisoners. Big, important persons attend them wherever they go, telling them just what they may and what they may not do. They may have very few boy and girl playmates outside of royalty. Young Prince Edward, however, doesn't find it so hard to be a prince, because he is permitted to swim and dive and engage in field sports with lots of other fellows. For all that, he has kingly ideas. When he was about 9 years old he said to his nurse one night before going to bed: "You know that some day I shall be king. Well, when I am, I shall do three things. First, I shall make a law that no one is to cut off puppies' tails, for that is very cruel. Then I shall make a law that no one is to put bearing reins on horses, for that is another cruel thing. And I shall try to do away with all sin."

Prince of Asturias

A jolly little chap is the Grand Duke Alexis, czarevitch, always wanting to romp with his two elder sisters, the Grand Duchesses Olga and Tatjana, or with his two younger sisters. But a sharp-eyed general is ever at his elbow. The four play in the palace garden, ride their Shetland ponies, build snow forts and slide down hill on their bobsleds. Yet soldiers silently follow them, and the czarevitch is closely guarded from the moment that he rolls from his cot in the morning until he snuggles in bed at nighttime. Grand Duke Alexis doubtless would give much to be like other boys. Although he is already colonel of several regiments in the czar's army (and only 4 years old, mind you!), he is not nearly so proud of this honor as he is of the huge golliwag, dressed in blue and red, which Queen Alexandra sent him from England.

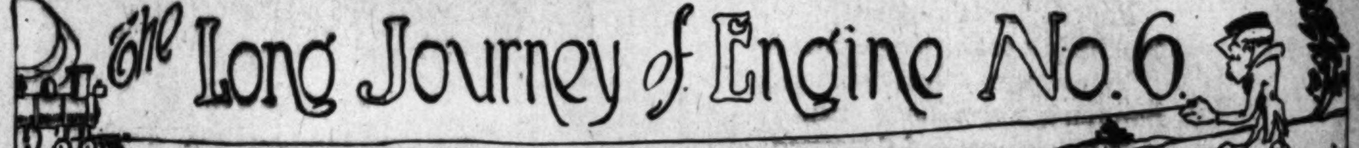
The little prince of the Asturias, who will some day be king of Spain, is the very youngest soldier in the world. On his first birthday he was dressed in the uniform of Infantry Regiment No. 1, of the King's Regiment, and carried to where a celebration was being held in his honor. Whether the prince, who is over 2 years of age, goes for a ride in his donkey carriage in the palace gardens of La Granja, or takes the air with his baby sister, the Princess Beatrice, or romps with a younger brother, Don Jaime, in their own room at the royal palace of Madrid, nurses and military people are always hovering near.

Prince Wilhelm, eldest son of the crown prince of Germany, is a soldier, too. He became a recruit on his second birthday. Wilhelm is almost 3 years old now, and he has great fun playing with his younger brother, Prince Louis Ferdinand, in the grounds about the castle at Potsdam. But soon he will begin a severe training, when, under the closest inspection, he will have little time for play.

HAPPY UMBERTO

Nor must we forget, while speaking of soldier princes, little Umberto, prince of Piedmont, who, at 5, is a well-seasoned officer of the Regiment of Cuirassiers, as well as heir to the crown of Italy. Sometimes King Victor Emmanuel bundles the prince, together with his sisters, Princesses Yolande and Mafalda, and the queen-mother, Helena, into a big automobile. Then away from the royal palace at Rome they whiz, bound for some little cottage hidden in the Albanian hills or the Sabine mountains. Here they spend a happy day in the wood, and come back to their magnificent royal home, the Quirinal, in the evening. The prince and his sisters often play in the sand on the beach of San Rassore, where the king goes with his family when the heat becomes too severe in Rome. In spite of the many things they cannot do, and the friends they are not permitted to make, it must be admitted that these royal children seem unusually happy. A glance at them seated in a comfortable buggy, driving leisurely around the royal park of the Quirinal, would make one believe that the lot of princes and princesses is altogether happy.

But when you think about the words of Princess Marie, who said of her little son, Prince Carol of Roumania, that she would love him if she dared, you will see that royal children belong to their countries and not to their fathers and mothers. These same stern countries are bound to make the little princes and princesses live according to fixed rules. So the royal kiddies don't always have the nicest of times. And, as prisoners, they do not always find their prisons the nicest places in the world.



The Long Journey of Engine No. 6.

"WHAT is all this nonsense about, anyway?" grumbled the mechanical locomotive. "From what I hear, I'm a wedding gift to some little Parsee boy! But who ever heard of little boys marrying! Certainly they don't in the land where I was made, although I suppose I am learning another of the foolish customs of this foolish land of India. Just to think that my own master should have brought me all the way from the toyshop in New York to this hateful city of Bombay and then should part with me!"

The stray grain of rice jumped impatiently within the cab of the locomotive, where it had fallen. Then it said, scornfully:

"You don't know when you are most honored. Let me tell you it is no mean thing to be given away to a wealthy Parsee boy as a wedding present. It shows that your American master must have valued you highly. Altogether, you seem such a stupid fellow that I think I shall instruct you about the customs of this glorious land.

"Little boys and girls DO marry," continued the grain of rice, "because I've seen it happen. I saw your present master, who is only 6 years old, married to a tiny girl 4 years old."

"Pshaw! You can't make me believe that!" the locomotive retorted. "Why, youngsters of that age wouldn't know how to get married."

CHILDREN MARRY IN BOMBAY

"Don't interrupt; listen, and you'll know a whole lot you didn't know before," said the rice, severely. So the toy locomotive remained quiet while his acquaintance told the following story:

"I was among those who waited at the bride's house for the little bridegroom. While bouquets sprinkled with rosewater, areca nuts and dainties of all kinds passed from hand to hand, I heard the guests talking. And they said that the priest had arranged the marriage only a short time ago. This was after the heavens had been examined and the stars of the two little ones discovered favorable one toward the other. So, you see, neither the boy nor the girl had anything to say regarding their marriage.

"Great numbers of people kept arriving, the men clad in robes of dazzling white and the women in flowing gowns, richly embroidered and ornamented with sparkling gems and ornaments of beaten gold. All guests were presented to the little bride by the bridegroom's father.

"Soon there came a splendid procession, with the bridegroom in its midst. There were horses with gorgeous trappings, superb chariots and elephants in magnificent harness. It was a royal parade.

"When the little boy who was to be married stepped over the threshold of his bride's home, he was led to a chair facing the little girl. Then the two were seated side by side, but with a great curtain hung between them and another curtain screening them from the view of the audience.

"Priests now advanced, and, while they chanted short prayers from the Yatha Atau Vaizyo (the Sacred Book), they wound a hempen cord seven times about the girl and boy. Afterward another cord was tied in seven knots around the hands of the couple.

"It was all mighty solemn, I can tell you, until the cords were loosened and the curtains taken away. Then the little girl threw seven grains of rice (of which I made one) and the boy threw a like number. They threw them at each other, and the boy's rice struck the girl before her grains hit him, so it was proved that he had a greater love for her than she for him.

"That was about all of the ceremony. There was much gift-making when you were given away by your American master, and there will be a great deal of feasting in the house of the bride's parents and in that of the parents of the bridegroom. Eighteen or twenty years from now the two again will be married. Until then the little boy and the little girl will live with their parents.

"However, I think you'll like your new master; he seems a nice, kind little fellow," continued the grain of rice.

But the red lettering, "No. 6," painted on the toy locomotive faded dully as the engine said, with a sigh:

"To think of having come on this long, long journey and then to be deserted by my master! How I wish I were back in the American toyshop!"

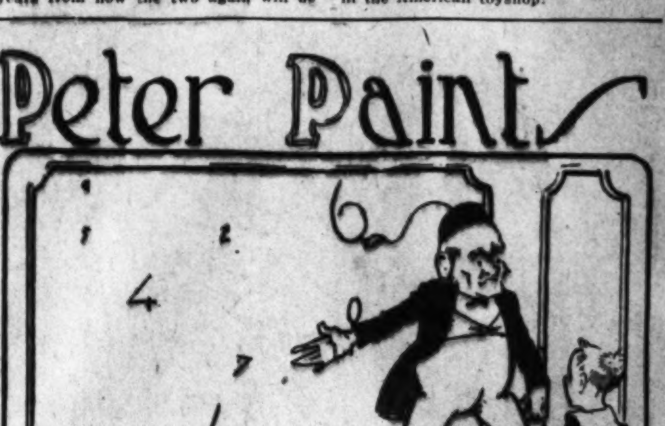
Painter Peter Paint

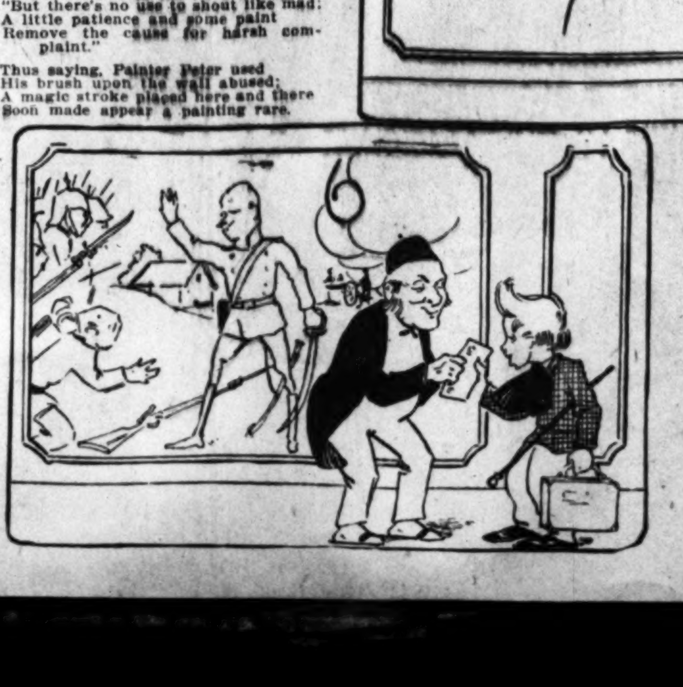
"WHAT naughty boy, with hollow pate,
Has used my panel for a slate;
Has placed an ugly, figured scrawl
Upon my polished, oaken wall?"

With gesture fierce and angry word,
The Rich Man clamored to be heard.
He paused and listened for reply.
None came; there was no person nigh.

"Come, Painter Peter, did you do
This wicked thing, sir, was it you?"
"No, father," said the honest lad;
"But there's no use to shout like mad;
A little patience and some paint
Remove the cause for harsh complaint."

Thus saying, Painter Peter used
His brush upon the wall abused;
A magic stroke placed here and there
Soon made appear a painting rare.





And when the Rich Man came and gazed,
The splendid picture him amazed.
Cried he: "Oh, Peter, you paint well!
And now I'll haste the world to tell
That he who wishes to, may scrawl
Where'er he wills on each bare wall!

Troublesome Etiquette

THE room in which the king sat was made warm by a fire in a big stove, but the heat had become so great that he ordered the fire to be put out.

However, the officer who looked after the stove could not be found, and, although there were dozens of other officers near, not one seemed ready to do so. "There is a gentleman who attends to the stove," said they, "and he should be told about it."

So the king, who was so hedged round with etiquette that he was not supposed to mind such a trifle, had to bear the heat as well as he could.

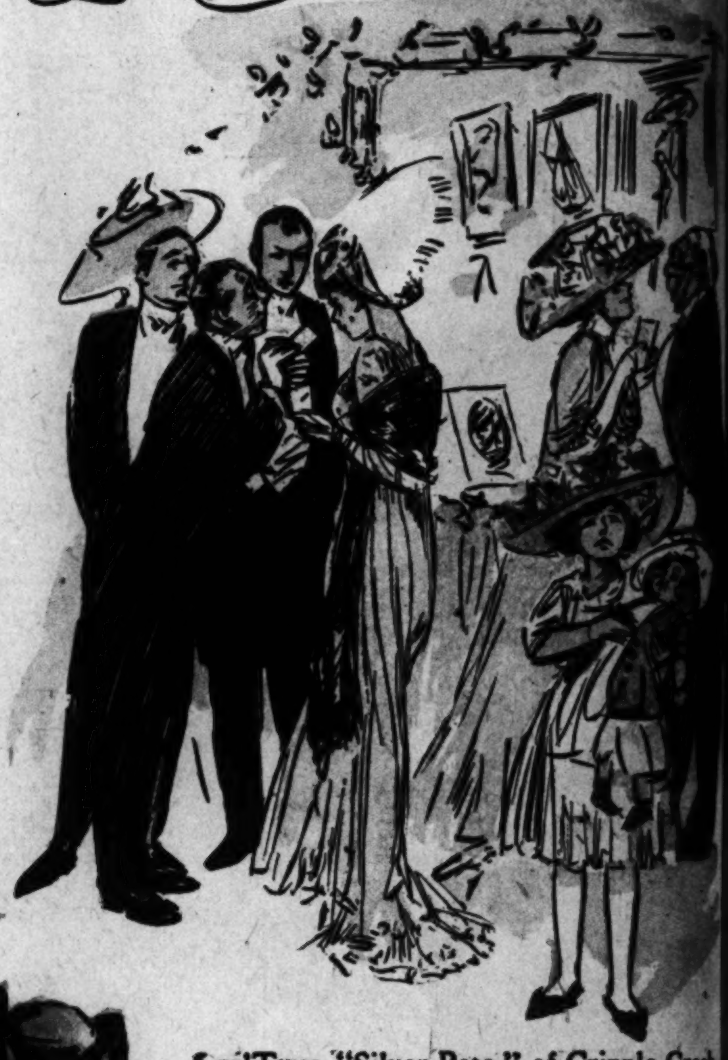
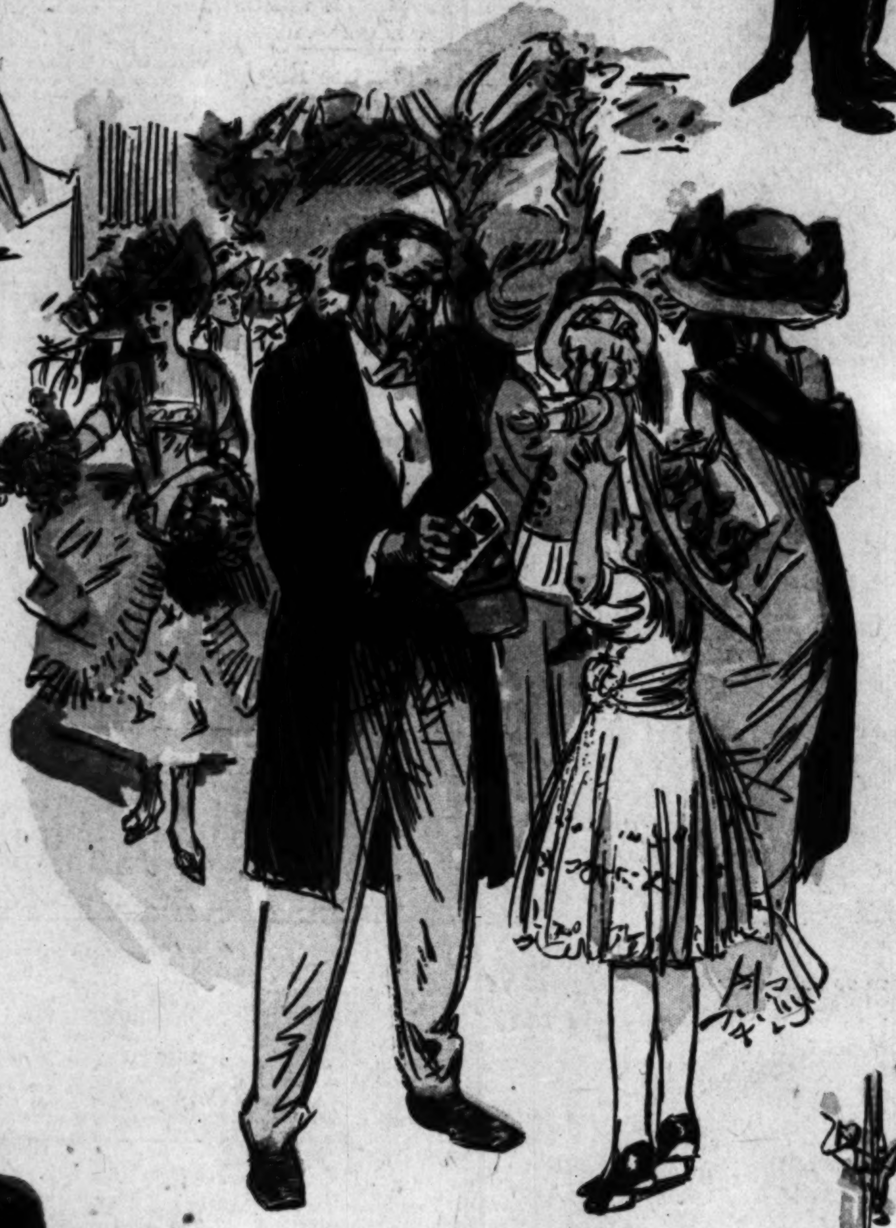
1.—With mass of lights a famous Inn's
Grand ball-room was aflame
And swelldom realized in full
Its hyphenated name.
Here maids and matrons, gaily gowned,
Were plotting to ensnare
The gold from all who came to view
The "Homeless Children's Fair."

2.—About, for raffle and for sale,
Were motor-boats and rugs,
Angora cats with China sets
And hand bepainted jugs;
And from the tissued booth, "Beaux Arts,"
Assailing all they met,
Came Cynthianna's dear mamma
And charming Estherette.



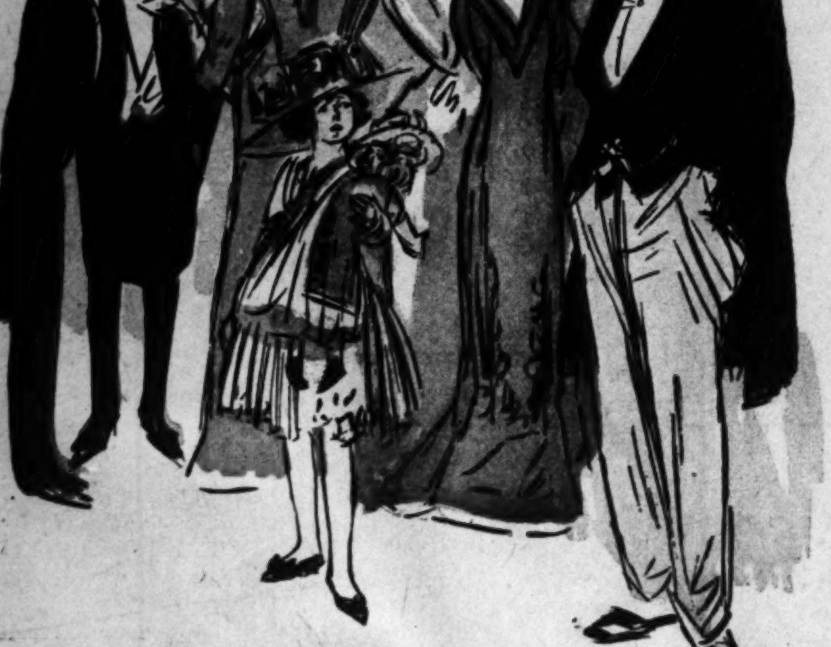
3.—With each poor soul who showed his face
Acquaintanceship they scraped
To fill their books of chances up,
And very few escaped.
As Cynthianna vowed she'd help
They planned to keep her still
By giving her a doll to sell
And little book to fill.

4.—As Esther had the younger men
All trailing at her heels
And elders did not seem to heed
Poor Cynthia's appeals,
She hadn't sold a single chance
When, very much distressed,
She ran across a lonely man,
Who also seemed depressed.



5.—'Twas "Silver Pete," of Cripple Cre
Who out the West had come
To look about the cultured East;
And he was sore and glum.
The ladies all had passed him by
Because his clothes were odd,
Not knowing that inside those clothe
Reposed a lusty "wad."

6.—Then Cynthia asked with feeble word
And most appealing glance,
"Oh! please, sir, won't you on my d
Just kindly take a chance?"
"To ask me, you're the only one,"
Said Peter, with a smile.
"The ladies passed me up because
My clothes are not in style.



7.—"While not in need of playthings, kid,
I'll buy your doll to show
We common folks ain't always pained
When partin' with our dough;
Them sickenin' dudes and women folks
With me produce a chill,
And just because you're different, kid,
Here's a hundred dollar bill."

8.—When Cynthia reached the Beaux Arts booth
And showed the robust note
The palm of "the best seller" was Awarded her by vote.
A rush was made to capture "Pete,"
But he had trailed away
To brood o'er matters Eastern in
The gentlemen's cafe.

The Tiny Tads are very dry, and they must have a drink.

FIELD GOALS ONLY SCORES.

U.S.C. Holds Occidental to Three to Three Tie.

Decius and Wieman Boot the Leather Over Bar.

Good and Bad Football in the "Big Game."

Occidental, 3; University of Southern California, 3.

In a sensational game brilliant with spectacular end runs, terrific line bucks, and wonderful tackling, the fighting eleven of the University of Southern California held the powerful Occidental team to a tie score at Baer Park yesterday afternoon.

Never in the annals of southern intercollegiate football has been such a bewildering assortment of good and bad football. Fumbling, which cost each eleven many yards at the most critical periods of the game, were followed with kaleidescopic rapidity by startling end dashes or smashing locomotive rams through the opposing lines which kept the great crowd in a constant uproar.

Decius for the university and "Ink" Wieman for Occidental won monumental fame with the students and followers of the respective institutions. Decius kicked a beautiful placement from the 45-yard line, scoring the only points for the Methodists six minutes after the initial kick-off. A moment before the stands of human intensity had been stilled as by magic. The kick was the signal for tremendous cheering.

Not a whit less sensational was the place kick of Wieman early in the second half. Following the kick-off by Fred Thomson, Decius returned the ball by brilliant dodging to the center of the field. An exchange of punts followed, Occidental soon getting the chance for the scoring play, when Ickes and Decius missed a wide punt to one side of the field, Ink Wieman falling on the leather on the U.S.C. 45-yard line. In a position slightly to one side of the goal posts, the great Wieman kicked the ball over the bar for Occidental's three and only points. Pandemonium broke loose. The play put wonderful vitality in the tired players.

SOMETHING DOING.

Perhaps in no other game has chance played so great a part. Three minutes from the end of the first period the university had the ball on its own 40-yard line following a long exchange of punts. Selph punted 30 yards to Drury Wieman. The ball slipped between the two eager players, and spun like a top while the two men lunged forward to oppose tackles.

Hill, U.S.C.'s end, saw the fatal mistake, dodged Wieman, and picking up the ball started with a clear field for the Occidental goal line. Then it was that Baer made the greatest run and tackle of the game. Four great strides and Baer lunged to the tackle. Hills dropped, nailed at the knees. Occidental's goal was saved.

Quick to take advantage of the momentary panic in the Presbyterian ranks, the Methodist quarter gave the signal for a fake kick. To Decius flew the ball and he started dodging. Only 40 yards separated him from the coveted goal line. Tackler after tackler missed in terrific plunges to stop the side-stepping sprinter. Ten yards from the Occidental goal Thomson and Collins fell like an avalanche on the runner. Even that terrific impact could not stop him. Stookey and a half-dozen university players dragged their man by the arm for 6 more yards.

With a touch-down within a stride, the supreme efforts of Oxy's heavy line and backs came into play. Selph was hurled into the Orange line for a half yard. Another buck by Decius added another foot. The university's chance to score had come, but the timer's whistle intervened and the half was over. Occidental's goal was again saved. Decius' wonderful run and Hill's quick eye availed nothing. The Tiger took a long breath and retired to its lair, its goal line saved.

HONORS EVEN.

Honors in the first half were with the university. Occidental could buck the university line over almost any line position except Stookey. The giant university tackle rose to the occasion with wonderful power. He spilled play after play, and spoiled many end runs. Stookey tackled too high, it appeared from the sidelines. Twice the officials warned him to be careful.

Drury Wieman and big Smart simply waded through the light Methodists for long gains. Only the good right boot of Decius, the lightning end runs by the same star, and the fickleness of luck kept the ball in mid field until Decius sent over his place kick. Each team fumbled repeatedly. Ickes could not handle the backfield punts, while the Occidental backs dropped the leather several times in scrimmages.

Shortly after the second period opened, Stookey retired with a badly bruised knee. Malcom was shifted to tackle, and Keller put in at guard. Keller, weighing 151 pounds, and Malcom, 168, tried to stem the terrific pounding of Drury Wieman and Collins. The contest was too unequal. Before the substitute got set the Wieman brothers rushed the ball for 35 yards. Five times Thompson and Wieman tried for place kicks, from the 45 to the 20-yard line.

FINE SPIRIT.

It was during the last half that the university eleven, outweighed six pounds to the man, showed a fighting spirit which alone prevented the Tigers from piling up score after score. The spirit of the team was wonderful. Right there the Methodists players backed by the rooters and the yell leaders, put up the most remarkable game ever seen on a local field.

Occidental tried to score by bucking. They could advance the ball by 10 and even 15-yard plunges, but always under the shadow of the university goal the something happened. Twice fumbles gave the ball to the university. Then Occidental tried to punt out a score. Five attempts at place kicks failed. Decius gained on each exchange, and saved the university goal time after time.

Four times Decius, and one time Paulin broke away under the goal posts on fake punts for 20 to 30-yard gains. The onside kick netted many yards, but the forward pass was kept Teams Indulge in Kicking Duel Through Game.

Harvard Beats Cornell and Yale Is Winner.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PRINCETON (N. J.) Nov. 6.—Princeton placed in the field today her strongest team for what was expected to be the hardest football game played by the Orange and Black eleven this season, but could do no better than tie, 6 to 6.

Dartmouth, her opponent, was said to be powerful, and a great game was looked for.

A forward pass from Cunningham to Ballard gave Princeton the ball on the 20-yard line. A moment later Cunningham kicked a field goal from the 35-yard line. Princeton, 3; Dartmouth, 0

After the kick-off, the teams indulged in a kicking duel. Then Reid made a forward pass to Welch, who fumbled the ball, but Princeton recovered it. Read and Cunningham made first downs and then, being unable to gain, Cunningham dropped back to the 30-yard line for a kick. He sent the ball squarely between the posts again. Princeton, 6; Dartmouth, 0.

Sherwin tried a drop-kick from a difficult angle on Princeton's 40-yard line, but the kick went short. Time was called for the first half with the ball on Dartmouth's 23-yard line. Princeton, 6; Dartmouth, 0.

The only change in the Princeton line-up was the placing of Cyrus McCormick, at right guard, in place of Buckingham.

Finally Princeton got the ball and advanced it by a series of line plunges to Dartmouth's 15-yard line, where Princeton was held for downs. Sparks and Hart made some great gains, but were unable to get beyond the 20-yard line for Dartmouth.

Ryan took the ball over in one plunge. Tobin kicked goal. Princeton, 6; Dartmouth, 6.

Princeton fumbled frequently and tried long forward passes to no avail. McCormick punted to Ryan on Dartmouth's 35-yard line and Dartmouth lost the ball on a fumble on her 30-yard line. As there was little time, Bard was sent in for Sparks to try a field goal from the 45-yard line, but he failed. Time was called as Bard's kick failed. Final score: Princeton, 6; Dartmouth, 6. CARL FISHER HERE.

Man Who Sent Stoddard-Dayton Up in a Balloon Comes to See Us, Then Flits Away.

Carl Fisher, of Indianapolis, Stoddard-Dayton agent and head of the Prestolite company, has passed a week in Los Angeles. He left for San Francisco Friday with his wife and brother. He drove a thirty horsepower Stoddard up the coast and is to visit Santa Barbara, Del Monte and other points before reaching the Bay City.

Ten days will be passed in San Francisco and then the tourists are to continue to Seattle. Some time will be passed in the Northwest. The handsome little Stoddard thirty was recently shipped to this city in charge of the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Company here of which Fred Flint is manager.

There is not a more enthusiastic autoist in this country than Fisher. He is interested financially in the Indianapolis speedway and is also one of the well known aeronauts. Fisher is the man who performed the freak stunt of taking an automobile up in a balloon. His Stoddard was attached to a gas bag at Indianapolis and hauled into the air.

Fisher is an aëroplanist who is confident the airships are the coming sport to supersede the automobile. He has invented an aëroplane which he hopes will fly some day.

E. A. Huene is the man who tuned the Corbin for the races at Ascot Park. When Frank Free reached here Friday to drive the car, the Corbin was ready for the races and there was nothing for Free to do but climb into the seat and grasp the wheel.

FINE BUSINESS.

GOOSE EGGS FOR ANGELS.

Quakers Shut Out Locals in Pretty Contest.

Indian Bender Holds Berry's Men to Four Hits.

Beall Has Very Bad Time in Playing First Base.

Philadelphia Americans, 1; Los Angeles, 0.

The fortunes of baseball were amply illustrated yesterday when the Quakers beat the locals in a close game with two scratch hits and while there was another defeat for Los Angeles the fans saw some fine pitching in a fast, snappy game, played in one hour and twenty-five minutes.

While there was nothing particularly startling in the way of sensational fielding the play was above the average with the exception of the work done by Beall at first base. He had three errors, but as luck would have it, none of them figured in the only run of the game that the Quakers made.

Bender, the big Indian chief, pitched elegant ball and such as would beat almost any team. He had everything and made but one mistake in hitting Godwin, but as this happened in an inning when the locals could not get a hit, the accident amounted to nothing. He fanned but four men but he held the locals to four singles and these were distributed in as many innings, the locals getting but one man as far as third base. It is in the pitching department that the Quakers are particularly strong and and they should win all kinds of games with the heavers they have.

The visitors threatened to score in the third inning when with Thomas on third from his own double and a sacrifice, he tried to reach the plate on Strunk's fly to Daley in center but failed, for Daley threw him out at the plate by an extra good peg.

In the fifth, however, they went through with the only run. Home Run Davis, with two strikes on him, tapped the ball over third base without intending to do it and reached second before the pill could be fielded. Heitmuller was passed for some unknown reason, for Heine is no devil with the bat, and then McBride sacrificed, putting Davis on third. Thomas bounded the ball just out of Delmas's reach for a single. Del blocked it in time to keep Heitmuller from reaching third base, but Davis scored. He was the only man to reach third base for Philadelphia, and the locals got but one there and this in the eighth on Jud Smith's single, Delmas's sacrifice and Easterly's out at first.

One pleasing feature of the game was the catching of Ted Easterly for Los Angeles and remembering the last season, none of the Quakers tried very hard to steal second on him. After three of them had made the attempt and had been thrown out a city block the others let this part of the game alone.

Beall had an awful time of it at first base. In the fourth he muffed a throw from Delmas and dropped one from Wheeler in the sixth. In the seventh Heitmuller hit an easy grounder to him and he stood about three feet from the bag while Tozer ran to the base to make the out. With Tozer on the bag Beall held the ball in his hand and allowed Heitmuller to reach first, and after this the fans yelled to have him taken out of the game.

In the last of the seventh, with two out, Wheeler hit a fast grounder to

DRIVING CLUB BUSY.

Big Matinee on Thanksgiving Day May Be Followed by Regular Races Every Week.

After a sleep more or less lengthy, the Los Angeles Driving Club has come to life again and announces a harness horse matinée for Thanksgiving Day and Secretary Delorey states that there will probably be eight races on the programme, which will carry the sport into the darkness. The entry list will close Friday, November 19, and the Speed Committee appointed by President Canfield consists of L. E. McLellan, D. H. Hogan, Frank Williams, R. B. Morehead and Frank Coffman. These men will select the officials and classify the horses.

The programme has only been guessed at up to this time, but it is stated that Margin, a big winner on the Granw Sircuit, and Copa de Oro will surely be among the starters, in addition to others less known. It is the intention to deal the best card possible and as Copa de Oro as stepped a mile in 2:03 during the past week there must ge some good ones secured to make this one go.

There has been some talk of having weekly matinés this winter, but the possibility of these depends upon the success of the first meet on Thanksgiving.

TOURIST FACTORY SUPPLIES SCARCE.

Volney S. Beardsley of the Auto Vehicle Company, returned from the East last week. He had been absent a month. He found it difficult to secure material for the manufacture of Tourist and California cars much more difficult than he had supposed it would be. While the eastern factories are demanding so much raw material Beardsley found himself in a market where supplies are woefully scarce.

On his return a meeting of the directors of the Auto Vehicle Company was called at once to discuss the grave situation. Nothing definite was done. The Selden patent decision and its bearing on the local factory was made the matter of serious consideration.

All factories outside the pale of the big companies working under the Selden patent have found it difficult to secure supplies for the coming year. The great demand for cars has made it almost impossible for factories far removed to secure what they desire. This fact may have a bearing on the future policy of the Auto Vehicle Company.

THEY'RE OFF.

DESERT CARS RIPPING ALONG OVER DREARY MILES OF SAND.

Mecca the Goal of Every Racer on Fast Schedule This Morning—Drivers Are to Change for Sand Battle That Comes Before Colorado Is Reached—Cars Controlled at Ehrenberg.

WHEN Referee John S. Mitchell sent the first car away on the Los Angeles-to-Phoenix race, last night, those who saw the auto threading its way down the street had little idea of what is before the driver and the plucky crew.

Nearly 500 miles of the worst roads in the West must be covered before Phoenix is reached. The cars must plow their way through the deep sands of Chucawalla hollow and across the Blythe ranch to Ehrenberg, must then be ferried over the river on a scow and make a 150-mile drive through Arizona before the goal is reached.

F. C. Fenner, in the Isotta, expects to reach Mecca at 3:45 o'clock this morning. Ralph Hamlin plans to get there at 5 o'clock. The Elmore crew hopes to be there about 4:15 o'clock, but the Pennsylvania men have a schedule that if followed would bring them into Mecca before the Elmore, though they start 15 minutes later than the two-cycle car.

From Los Angeles to San Bernardino the going is over fairly good roads. That is, good roads as compared with the desert sand through which the cars must plod for a day. From San Bernardino to Banning the going is excellent.

Each car must touch Mecca on the way. Crews are to be changed here and the new driver should give the car extra impetus for the sand struggle ahead. The fastest part of the run is from this city to the point at Mecca, where the road leaves the railroad.

BURNING THE BRIDGES.

All communication is cut off after the cars slide out of the desert city. Until Ehrenberg is reached no note of the wanderings of the cars can be obtained. Then the first word must be sent to Phoenix over a wire from Ehrenberg and then to Los Angeles, where hundreds are waiting for the report of the arrival of the cars.

Out at Dos Palmos, one of the loneliest places on the long stretch of sand, is a checker who is waiting this morning for the first car. About 9 o'clock the puff of dust to the westward will tell the watcher the first car is in sight. It will be an audience of one man who is to greet the racers one after another as they toil slowly along the sandy turnpike.

More than fifty miles beyond, and at an even lonelier point—Chucawalla—another checker is watching. He will wait until noon today for the first car. Again it is to be a one-man welcome for the cars. With his book the watcher will demand the signature of every driver before the car is allowed to proceed. In order to win the Phoenix race drivers must have signed at Dos Palmos and Chucawalla.

There is only one road through the Blythe ranch and the cars are to roll through there this afternoon as they are nearing the river. Tonight all cars should be in control on the west side of the Colorado River at Ehrenberg.

There another checker is to be busy tonight taking the official time of the arrival of each car. The machines will then be ferried across the Colorado and put into control on the east side of the river to await the start which is to come at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning.

AT EHRENBERG.

There is to be a chance for the drivers to take some needed sleep at Ehrenberg, as nothing can be done to the cars while in the controls. Fifteen minutes before the new start on the Arizona side a warning is to be given the first car, and the others are to be started in the order of their arrival, with the time allowances to be taken out at the finish.

Representatives of the Maricopa Automobile Club are to be on hand at Ehrenberg to take charge of the cars and see that nothing is done contrary to the rules. Silent the motors must remain until the following morning, as not even gasoline and oil can be put into the tanks while the racers remain at Ehrenberg.

Should any one of the racers have trouble after leaving Mecca the crew can expect no help from the others struggling through the sand. Every driver will be anxious to send his car through as fast as possible. A wrecked auto is his greatest dread.

DANGER LURKS.

Should a car be left on the desert it may be two or three days before relief can be had. For weeks at a time no vehicle of any kind passes over the road. Should mishap come to the racers beyond Chuckawalla, help will have to arrive from the Blythe ranch. This would take at least two days.

The checkers at Dos Palmos and Chuckawalla will not reach Mecca until the result of the race is known. They must drive slowly for three days across the sands. Their job is not inviting or exciting as when the last car chugs away they are left alone on the wide expanse of sand.

From Whitewater to Mecca the natives this morning are watching eagerly for the cars. They have kept tab of the machines on the trial trips, and have a good idea what each car should make in the race. At daylight the roofs of tiny desert houses will be vantage points for excited groups of watchers, who will cheer the cars along.

Great interest is being taken at Indio, where the entire town usually turns out to watch the cars. Light comes quickly on the desert, and the watchers at dawn will strain their eyes for the first glimpse of the big Rushmore lights as the cars come dancing along over the fairly good stretch of road between Palm Springs and the little desert town.

The official route is, after leaving Los Angeles, through San Bernardino, Beaumont and Banning, Whitewater, Palm Springs, Indio, Mecca, Dos Palmos, Chuckawalla Springs, Blythe ranch, Ehrenberg, Quartzsite, Vicksburg and Salome to Phoenix.

FOR FROZEN SOUTH.

Interviews with Lieut. Shackleton, the British explorer, since his return from the South Polar expedition, have revealed his strong belief in the advantages of motor transport for exploration work of this kind. The special car which he took with him did good service, and had the vehicle been of the sledge, instead of the wheel type, it would have been used for the final stages of the journey over the soft snow of the Barrier. The new British Antarctic expedition, in charge of Capt. Scott, will be provided with motor sledges.

AUTO HIGHWAYS.

The British Parliament is considering the advisability of constructing special highways for the use of automobiles, and the British people are said to be much in sympathy with the plan. The measure under consideration proposes that these specially constructed roads be governed by a small board, of which only the chairman or vice-president shall receive a salary.

PACKARD TRUCK HERE.

Western Motor Car Company Receives Handsome Commercial Vehicle Which Has Large Capacity.

The big Packard truck, the largest of the kind ever brought to the city, is on exhibition at the Western Motor Car Company's garage. The truck will carry five pianos at a load and has great hill climbing powers. It looks formidable with its large roomy body.

Built along powerful lines the truck is also graceful. It is finished in black with a white stripe and has the same Packard chassis on which the largest Packard touring car bodies are placed.

It has the regular Packard engine in the hood. The truck is showy in appearance and is easily controlled. It is ideal for use on the busy streets as it can be throttled down to comply with all speed ordinances or can be driven at speed suitable fo about town trips.

Earle C. Anthony has a number of orders for commercial vehicles and it is because of the demand for the trucks that the big Packard was brought out to the coast. Other trucks are being shipped from the factory. The Packard factory is making one truck a day besides its other output.

W. H. Carlson, Jr., the Boy Motorist, who jumped into prominence in his nervy drive at Ascot Park, when he forced Frank Free to break the Southern California track record to defeat him. Carlson is at the wheel of his Winton racer.

BRIGHT SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

An automobile club has been organized at East St. Louis.

A company has been formed at Spokane, Wash., with $100,000 capital stock to manufacture motor trucks.

The records of the Secretary of the State of Washington show that nearly 5000 automobile licenses have been issued.

The Automobile Club of Maryland is acting in co-operation with the Baltimore County Highway Commissioners in placing road signs throughout the county.

The local authorities of Baltimore, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Hartford and Indianapolis have recently contracted for or received motor driven patrol wagons.

The Delaware Automobile Association is having a map of the State prepared, which will show the condition of all the roads. It will appear in the year book for 1910.

Gov. Sanders of Louisiana is making strenuous efforts to have the roads of his State improved, and has started the construction of a model stretch of road between New Orleans and the State capital, Baton Rouge.

A feature of the Madison Square Garden show in New York this year will be a large exhibit of motorcycles. This will be the only one of its kind to be held in New York, and will be several times larger than any previous show of the kind in the metropolis.

Martin Behrman, Mayor of New Orleans, is working for the improvement of his city's streets, and a great deal of money has been appropriated for building boulevards. To assist the work the New Orleans Automobile Club has planned its big two day race meet on November 20 and 21.

The auto buggy has made its first appearance in England. The type is something entirely new to the British motorist, and a great amount of interest is evinced in its construction. It is believed there will be quite a good market for the vehicle.

Motoring no longer means being completely hidden or hideously disguised. Motor fashions are now spoken of in the same breath with beauty. A pretty girl need no longer lose her identity when she dresses for a spin. No longer is the unwritten law of motor attire, "Leave beauty behind, ye who enter this car."

UNIFORM LAWS.

Eighteen nations represented by sixty-three delegates are meeting in Paris for the purpose of making automobile regulations throughout Europe as uniform as possible and thus abolishing the difficulties in the way of international travel. The delegates are not representatives of automobile clubs, but the accredited representatives of their respective government, having in nearly all cases full power to act for them.

HERE'S HIS DEFI.

SWEEPING CHALLENGE ISSUED BY DARING BOY AUTO DRIVER.

WILLIE CARLSON, the boy driver of the Winton six-cylinder, has ambitions to become a great race driver. His work at Ascot Park last Sunday has attracted attention, and as a result he has been backed to race for $500 a side against any driver in Southern California. The Corbin, with Frank Free up, is preferred, as Willie is anxious to meet Free again at Ascot.

This boy is the youngest driver who ever appeared in an automobile race meet at Ascot Park. His work on Sunday, when he handled the Winton like a veteran, proclaims him a coming automobile race driver.

The boy has nerve and skill. He never figured in a big race meet prior to Sunday. He was intensely interested and excited for days before the race. He now is planning to race again in the near future, and is more than anxious that the match be pulled off as speedily as possible.

The Winton car is fast. W. H. Howard, the local agent, is prepared to tune the car to the limit. The Winton which Carlson drove Sunday was one of the first models ever received in Los Angeles. The car has been driven 48,000 miles.

Speaking of the proposed race, Howard said yesterday:

"We have a man who will back young Carlson to the extent of from $500 to $1000 against any other driver in Southern California, Frank Free preferred. We will equip the Winton so that Carlson will not have to stop during his race. We, of course, will need more time to prepare than we had for the last Ascot Park races.

"Young Carlson, to my notion, is one of the best drivers in the South. He is young, but is not reckless. In addition, he knows the car perfectly, and this counts for much. I will pin my faith to the ability of the boy driver every time.

"Before the Winton goes into the race it is to be fully prepared for the contest. This means that we will disassemble it and prepare it carefully for the struggle, as we realize this challenge is sweeping.

"Should this race be arranged it will be one well worth seeing. We prefer to race at Ascot Park, but are willing the contest be pulled off anywhere. The Winton should be ready within a week, and Carlson is anxious to meet all comers."

CIRCULAR SPEED.

GREAT MOTOR RACE MEET AT ASCOT PARK LAST OF MONTH.

ANOTHER circular track meet for November 20 and 21 is the card arranged by the Los Angeles Motor Racing Association. This meet is to be held under the sanction of the Automobile Association of America and at least a dozen fast cars are promised.

The desert race will be over. A suggestion is made that the desert cars be entered in one event, of either twenty-five or fifty miles. This would be spectacular and would give the public a chance to watch the cars in action. The equipment used on the sand-bucking expedition would be left on the cars and the same drivers and mechanicians would be in charge.

One of the events which has been arranged is a 150-mile race Sunday afternoon. A purse of $250 is to be hung up for this event, besides a handsome cup. This seem to be worth striving for and there is a possibility that six or seven cars will start in this race.

Here are the possibilities: The Stearns, the six-cylinder Kisselkar, the Renault, the Palmer-Singer, the Corbin, Pennsylvania and the Winton. This should be a classy field worth watching.

The card for the Saturday races looks good. There will be a two-mile event for electrics, a ten-mile free-for-all, a stock chassis event for cars costing from $851 to $1250, another twenty-five-mile event for cars costing from $1251 to $2000, and a similar event for cars costing from $2001 to $3000. These three races are to be started at the same time and cash prizes are to be given the drivers making the fastest time.

The popularity of the circular track races was attested at the recent meet. The spirit of rivalry is as keen as ever. The public saw a great series of races, though only six cars figured in the several events. This was the only criticism—a lack of cars.

This time it seems there will be plenty of cars. The dealers will not be preparing for the desert race and will have more time to spare. At least a dozen entries are assured. "This is enough for a meet that should be as classy as any ever pulled off in the Southland.

Following this will come the twenty-four-hour meet which Hempel expects to pull off close to the first of the year. Great interest is being taken in the plans for this event.

STEARNS BY EXPRESS.

Slaughter Removes to Handsome New Garage and Arranges for Quick Deliveries.

Coney C. Slaughter is receiving his Stearns cars by express. Delayed shipments are being hastened by the factory because of unfilled orders which the Stearns man must fill or lose sales. The factory is aided by Slaughter in his efforts to avoid canceling contracts.

Shipped in palace freight cars, the machines are being rushed across the country. The first consignment arrived on Thursday, and the cars were boxed and fitted snugly into the coaches when they arrived at the Santa Fé station.

Now that he is housed in his comfortable new garage, Slaughter says business is rushing, and he is prepared to handle it more expeditiously. He has a full sales force, and it is hard to keep cars on the floor, he says.

The new garage has a commodious salesroom, handsomely furnished offices, and a storage room and repair shop which is large enough to accommodate a score of cars.

Slaughter has secured the agency for the Moon line of cars, and expects his demonstrator here within a week. The Moon announcement is interesting, and the line of cars is attractive.

The Corbin Motor Car Company reports the sale of six touring cars to their agent, J. C. Rice and Company, at San Diego. A baby tonneau Corbin was sold to Edward Hoffman of Los Angeles.

BIG MOTOR CAR ROCKS ON WAVES.

POPE-HARTFORD FORDS RIVER IN SMALL SCOW.

Tour of England, Scotland and Wales Said to Be Most Beautiful Trip That Can Be Taken in Motor Car—London Filled With Motor Busses, Say Tourists.

A. M. McAndrews of Pasadena, with his wife and two sons, returned last week after a tour of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland in a Pope-Hartford.

The tour started in June and continued until September. During that time the car traveled several thousand miles over the best roads in the world. The party returned pleased with the scenery and the life of the countries visited and all members say they could think of no more enjoyable trip than a run over the same ground covered on this tour.

The start was from a pretty suburb of London. Good roads were found soon after the start, the route leading north to Scotland. For many miles the highways, constructed hundreds of years ago, were as smooth as glass. The car could be sent along at full speed without any discomfort and the Pope easily hit sixty without more inconvenience than the rush of wind. Runs of 170 miles a day were common and in order to reach a desirable stopping place one night the day's total mileage reached 260 miles.

TAKE RISK.

Crossing one river the party had an interesting experience. The only available ferry was a boat propelled by two husky oarsmen. They at first refused to ferry the machine as the boat was not wide enough to take the wheels. The boat had never been used for anything but passengers. The tourists finally, after much talk, told the ferrymen they would take all the risk and after hours of work the car was finally put on board. The axles rested on the side of the boat with all four wheels hanging out over the water. The least lurch of the boat would have sent the car to the bottom of the river, but the members of the party balancing on the four corners to keep the boat right, and with the oarsmen working vigorously they managed to reach the other side in safety.

In England the Pope-Hartford did not attract much attention as many cars of this make have toured there before, but in Northern Scotland and in Ireland the people looked over this American car with interest and several owners of foreign cars were amazed at the speed and hill-climbing ability of the Pope.

After touring Scotland, visiting most of the principal cities and viewing some of the finest mountain scenery in the world the car was taken to Ireland. The tour of the lakes, the scenery, and the life of the people combined to make a never to be forgotten picture.

From Ireland the car was brought back to Wales and then was driven to London, now a city of automobiles. One sight which attracts a stranger is the bus. There seem to be thousands of these double-deck auto busses running in every direction. A few of these can be seen on Fifth Avenue in New York, but nothing to compare with what can be seen on the streets of London.

LOOKS GOOD.

MOTORCYCLISTS ARE TUNED UP.

Great Races Promised at the Coliseum Today.

Samuelson and De Rosier to Be the Features.

Professionals and Amateurs to Share Prizes.

Motorcycle riders will risk their necks today in a series of hair-raising matches which should bring out the motorcycle fraternity. The board track at the Coliseum, Sixty-third and Main streets, has been put into shape and is ready for the races today. The first race starts this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The match race between De Rosier and T. M. Samuelson for a purse of $500, winner take all, is interesting. This match is not more attractive than any one of three or four other events which have been included on the card.

There are nine different races for the afternoon, ranging from four miles to fifteen miles, each race including some well-known rider who was seen at the Coliseum during last spring's meet, as well as a number of entirely new riders who have never been seen on a local track.

Samuelson says he will defeat De Rosier, and if he does not do so it is probable that Whittler, his Salt Lake training partner, may turn the trick in the open professional events. Both Samuelson and Whittler were on the track Friday.

The professionals are after De Rosier's scalp. They do not like the Frenchman. He has beaten the best of them heretofore and is now riding his own machine, an Indian, which Paul Derkum expected to ride. Lingenfelder has arrived and is ready to challenge the winner of the big match between Samuelson and De Rosier.

CONSIDERABLE CHANGE.

The motorcycle game has undergone a transformation since the last meeting at the Coliseum. More riders and more racing machines are entered, while all the riders who were new in the sport six months ago have long since become thoroughly seasoned. This is equally as true of the amateurs as of the professionals. Graves, Balke and Ward are recognized as the equals of any men in the amateur class.

All these amateurs, together with other local lads, are entered in this afternoon's races and the contests between them are certain to be worth seeing.

List of entries:

Four-mile, amateur, private owners—P. Niederhauser, Frank Hallock, Frank Story, C. E. Anderson, John Farrell, [illegible]chie Holbrook, Joseph Riescar, John Hogan.

First heat, ten-mile professional, $500 match—De Rosier and Samuelson.

Four-mile handicap, amateur, open—Hubert Kittle, Raymond Austin, Erwin Knappe, Frank Loge, M. J. Graves.

Second heat, ten-mile professional, $500 match.

Eight miles, amateur, open, single cylinders—Knappe, Ward, Graves, Blalock, Balke.

Eight-mile, professional, open—Samuelson, De Rosier, Mitchell, Whittler.

Six-mile, amateur, open—Graves, Balke, Ward, Blalock and Loge.

Fifteen-mile professional, open—Samuelson, De Rosier, Mitchell and Whittler.

GREAT MOTORDROME.

Detroit Plans Monster Automobile Speedway to Be Finished by July of Coming Year.

Options have been secured on two sites for the motordrome at Detroit, and the promoters intend to spend $500,000 on the work of construction. The present plans call for a five-mile circuit. Just who is behind the project is not known definitely, but it is said that five automobile manufacturers with plants near Detroit, are interested, as well as a local motorist. It is probable that work will be started on March 1, 1910.

The work of building a motordrome generally takes about four months. The Detroit course could be ready by July 1, 1910. In the event of these plans being followed, auto racing is to be conducted on a large scale in Detroit next summer.

The main course will be paved with brick or creosote blocks, the former now being laid on the Indianapolis course, making it possible to attain a speed bettter than two miles a minute, and with the larger turns on the Detroit course it will be possible to drive just as fast as a motor car can be built to go. The infield will be fitted up for an aviation field.

E. A. Moross, known in Los Angeles, has accepted the position of manager of the Detroit motordrome. Moross has had plenty of experience as manager of the Indianapolis motor speedway which recently pulled off a great motor meet. Moross has resigned as manager at Indianapolis to take charge at Detroit.

LUXURIOUS MOTOR CAR.

Yankee Secures Duplicate of Handsome Limousine Designed for Czar of All the Russias.

What is probably the most luxuriously equipped car in the United States is owned by E. L. Giroux, a wealthy copper magnate of New York City. It was built in France and is practically a duplicate of one made for the Czar of Russia.

The wood finish is said to have many advantages over the old method, in which that part of the interior not upholstered was covered with cloth. The wood finish is preferred by many for its appearance, but is also more easily cleaned and retains longer its freshness. The interior fittings show the designing of an artist of no mean ability. The electric lights are supported on little figures of angels, richly gilded.

The limousine body appears through the open door nearly the size of a small reception room. Five passengers are easily accommodated. The two forward seats in the interior, instead of the usual small and uncomfortable stools, are full-sized revolving armchairs, and the occupants can swing around to face either forward or back without disturbing their companions. The interior woodwork is mahogany and the upholstering silver-grey velours.

AEROPLANES ARE COMPLETED FOR AVIATION WEEK TRIALS.

Los Angeles Builders Preparing to Win Prizes Against Foreign Stars Who Are to Come Here This Winter. Dick Ferris Has Plans About Completed and the Club Members Are Active.

BUILDERS of aëroplanes in Los Angeles are making strenuous efforts to complete their machines and get some practice before the date of the aviation week contests being promoted by Dick Ferris.

Four machines are already completed, with many in process of construction, and the chances are that a dozen aëroplanes designed and constructed in Los Angeles will be in the contests to be held about February.

Most of the owners of these machines are members of the Aëro Club of California, affiliated with the Aëro Club of America, under whose sanction Ferris is to conduct the meet.

The club is preparing a big aërodrome at Chutes Park, where the factory is located, and where six machines are in process of construction, with two more to be started this week. The big barn, 100x60 feet in dimensions, has been turned over to the club by Manager Lehigh of the park, and a large space for preliminary experiments has been provided on the grounds.

Two machines have been completed at the aërodrome. J. S. Zerbe, one of the pioneer aëroplane inventors, has reconstructed his aëroneff, with which he made experiments last winter; and J. H. Klassen has just completed his gyroscope and fitted in the engine for trial this week. W. J. Stevens is building a monoplane on the Bleriot type, modified, as is also Prof. H. LaV. Twining, with whom are associated several other members of the club. In addition the Hicks gyroscope is in process of building, and Prof. Twining's ornithopter is in the experimental stage.

ONE AT ASCOT.

In addition to the machines at Chutes, A. L. Smith, vice-president of the club, has a machine modified on the Wright type, completed at Ascot Park. He tried one engine, and found it unsatisfactory. He has ordered another, and expects it here in two weeks, when he will begin experiments.

Dan Johnson has about completed his second aëroplane, and is ready for actual experiments in flight. He is still working on the finishing stages of his new steam engine. He expects to be ready for flight aviation week. A number of other aëroplanes are about completed.

From now on it is expected that aviation matters will boom. President Courtlandt Field Bishop of the Aëro Club of America is on his way west, and will confer with President Twining, Promoter Ferris, and members of the club in reference to the proposal of the local club to bid for the big international contests next fall. In addition he is to be consulted on the aviation week project. The local club will have scientific charge of the meet, but Dick Ferris will conduct all the business. Ferris has formed a popular stock company to put up the prizes which are expected to total between $50,000 and $100,000, and he has options on various tracts of land on which to conduct the contests.

The Aëro Club will see to it that all the conditions of the Aëro Club of America will be complied with, and will provide judges on contests and the general officials. These conditions are complied with to satisfy the terms of the sanction. The club will handle none of the funds nor take part in none of the business management, and Ferris proposes to have officers of civic bodies act as trustees or directors in awarding the prizes.

Work at Chutes aërodrome is to be boomed in order to give the aviators as much time as possible for practice. Perhaps they will fly, and perhaps they will fail, but every effort is to be made to get off the ground as soon as possible, there are enough types to insure some kind of success, it is believed.

ARE HOLDING OFF.

Individual members of the Aëro Club had proposed preliminary exhibitions before aviation week, arguing that they should have the first chance to reap the rewards of gate receipts rather than pay all the local money to foreign persons, but the club as a whole believes that to insure the success of a big week it would be necessary to bring here as many as possible of those who have made a success of aviation, and make the prizes open to the world.

Dick Ferris has held out a compromise plan to set aside a certain fund to buy engines (which is the principal expense) and loan them to those who have machines for experimental work.

It requires long experimental work to meet success. Former President Zerbe has been working nearly a year and a half. He had certain failures in his first aëroneff, and has rebuilt the machine on the same general plane, but with many changes. The body has been lengthened and the successive planes set back correspondingly. It was found that the weight of the operator and engine was placed too far forward, and the center of gravity was located farther back. One propellor did not distribute the column of air sufficiently, and two smaller propellers replaced the large one. A score of minor changes were made.

J. H. Klassen's gyroscope has never been tried out, but the machinery is to be set in motion this week.

AUTOMATIC BLADES.

Blades which work automatically with a spring action on rotating planes, are the features the monoplane under construction by Klassen. The gyroscopic action, asserts the inventor, insures stability, which is the most difficult puzzle problem of successful aëroplane construction.

Monoplanes like biplanes are subject to two unequal and opposing forces—the air pressure which acts upward and supports the aëroplane in the air flight, and the weight of the parts, which acts downward. If the center of the air pressure happens to shift—and the upward force is bound to do so as the wind is but a succession of puffs—the center of gravity is disturbed and the machine capsizes.

The only way to maintain equilibrium is to bring these two forces together so that they will act through the same point, and this means the aviator has brought the center of air pressure and the center of gravity into coincidence. Klassen claims to have successfully solved the problem of balance by hinging flat surfaces at intervals on the upper surfaces of the horizontal rotating planes, which swing up and down as the needs of balance require.

Two novel shock absorbers are also interesting parts of Klassen's machine, which allow the aviator to bring his monoplane to earth with some assurance that the parts will not be scattered over the whole lot. The truck is constructed on springs located fore and aft of the position of the aviator, which greatly reduces the shock of alighting. Two runners or brakes reaching from the motor to a foot below the carriage wheels further insure easy alighting.

The rotating blade or propellor is located directly in front of the motor, which generates the power to pull the machine ahead. The net weight of the machine, including the motor and excluding the operator, is 340 pounds. The rotating planes, two being twelve feet in diameter in front, and twenty-eight feet in diameter in the rear, have a combined surface of 325 square feet. The propeller is 6-ft. 8-in. in length. A twenty horsepower Curtiss engine is being installed.

AN EARLY TRYOUT.

Klassen expect to give his machine a tryout this week. Yesterday the engine was tested and will be working all right with a few changes in the battery attachments.

The inventor is very confident that his gyrating blades have solved the balance difficulty. He has named the aëroplane "Klassen No. I."

Still another solution for automatic stability is brought forward by A. L. Smith in the placement of fore and aft rudders on a biplane, which in other specifications, meets all the government requirements. The machine is built along proven lines of biplanes successfully operated by the Wright brothers, athough Smith's product is not classed as a Wright machine, and does in no sense infringe on the patents, according to him.

Wright got into trouble in recent flights when his propeller broke, which relieved the pressure of head wind and spilled the aviator. The fore and aft rudders offset any such possible contingency, claims Smith, and the stability is maintained automatically. The combination rudder further simplifies the problem of turning the machine in flight, which is a desirable asset.

The biplanes, as a rule, are more easily controlled than the monoplanes. The biplanes have a larger supporting surface which means a greater lifting capacity. They can be handled almost as easily as a monoplane, and are braced so they can be subjected to strains which would demolish an ordinary monoplane. The monoplane having but one horizontal surface encounters less head-on resistence, but on the other hand it cannot be trussed to withstand shocks.

Smith has designed his machine to travel at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour. The weight of the biplane with one passenger and aviator is about 1000 pounds. The machine will be given a preliminary tryout in a few days to test the gearing. The main lifting surfaces are 7x40 feet each, and carry 560 square feet. The machine is the only one constructed with cast aluminum joints. The engine is a 50-horsepower water cooled Curtiss model.

MONOPLANE BUILT.

William Stevens advances another answer to the probem of stability in a unique controlling arrangement in a monoplane being built at the Chutes aërodrome. The aviator sits at the extreme end of the machine, where the operator can see everything that is going on. The builder claims that through this unique arrangement the control of the machine can be almost perfect.

The monoplane is able to leave the ground in a much shorter space than can the ordinary type of aëroplane, he claims, and further, when in flight, the operator can turn his machine at an acute angle immedia'ely, while the biplane of Curtiss and Wright must advance quite a distance before it is possible to alter the angle of flight.

The aviator seated aft controls the flight of the machine with two auto-steering wheels which have a swing of but three inches each way. The motor is located forward, and the respective positions eliminate the danger of capsizing. By guiding the rotating planes, Stevens claims he can change the angle of incidence in an instant, and maintain stability at all times.

The inventor is at present looking for a satisfactory motor to come up to the original specifications. Stevens is sparing no expense in obtaining the best of materials for the parts. The machine is constructed wholly of steel and wood. Plans call for a 50-60-horsepower motor. The monoplane with aviator will weigh about 800 pounds.

Stevens is secretary of the Aëro Club.

GOOD DIRT ROADS.

South Carolina has been doing wonders during the last few months in improving its dirt roads, which are the prevailing type in that State. The roads are, for the most part, smooth, well-graded and without sharp turns. In dry weather splendid time can be made in crossing the State; in wet weather the tourist had better provide himself with three or four sets of tire chains and postpone his other engagements for a day or two.

NOTHING FOR KLING.

BARRED FOR FOUR YEARS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO Nov. 6.—Regarding the reported plan of the Chicago National League management to turn John Kling over to the Brooklyn club, B. B. Johnson of the National Commission says that in the event Kling was traded the club securing his services would be unable to play the star catcher during a period of four years.

"I don't see how Kling can be turned over to another club," said Mr. Johnson. "Here's a player who violated the terms of his contract by failing to report to the club during an entire season. Toward the latter days of the season he played here with a semi-professional team against the Logan Squares. From the time he refused to report, he laid himself liable to punishment. The commission has discussed Kling's status informally and the rule made last spring will stand. He cannot play under the laws of the organization."

BAD FOR MANAGERS.

BALL LICENSE TO SOAR.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Alderman James Boyler came forward yesterday with a demand that the city exact a license fee of $200 for every day baseball and football grounds, seating 20,000 persons are in use. The suggestion was received favorably by the council committee on license.

If the license fee is fixed at this figure, the National and American League managers each will pay to the city annually $15,400 and the income from Marshall Field at the University of Chicago will bring the total of increased revenue nearly to $35,000. The committee will take up the suggestion for final action next week.

SCHAFER IN FORM.

BEATS SAN BERNARDINO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Six hits, a base on balls, an error and a man hit by the pitcher, all in the second inning, netted the Santa Barbara team of the Winter League six runs against San Bernardino today. The visitors came back with three in the third, their only runs during the game and the locals won 7 to 3.

The locals made eleven hits off Otterman. Schafer held San Bernardino to seven hits. The same teams play tomorrow.

Score by innings:

Santa Barbara ......0 6 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—7
San Bernardino .....0 0 3 0 0 0 0 0 0—3

MINOR GAMES TODAY.

BIG PITCHERS JOIN LEAGUE.

With San Diego in first place as predicted, the second series of games will be played in the California Winter League today. Now that the Coast League season has closed several of the teams will be strengthened by the addition of league players. Pasadena went to San Diego Friday to hook up with the Southern champions in two games. Santa Barbara will play two games with San Bernardino at home.

The McCormicks will play two contests with the Maiers at Vernon this afternoon, first contest to be at 1:30 o'clock.

The Salt Lakes will go to Santa Ana for a double-header with the Orange Belt club today. Andy Briswalter will umpire at Santa Barbara, Goyheneix at Santa Ana, and Fernandez at Vernon.

Final Game Today.

The final game between the Philadelphia Americans and the Los Angeles team will be played this afternoon at Chutes Park, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The batteries will be Thorsen and Orendorff for Los Angeles, and possibly Morgan and Donahue for Philadelphia, although Donahue may not work.

MEET IN TWO WEEKS.

Stanford Athletes Are Preparing for Big Contests to Be Decided in Two Weeks.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 4.—An intercollegiate track meet, the first of the present school year, is to be held November 20. Fall training has been actively followed by thirty or forty athletes, and Capt. Scott, '10, has announced that all men who expect to enter the class meet must begin training not later than next Monday.

The early date set for the track competition means that as soon as the football season is over, the athletic interest of the students will be immediately centered on the intercollegiate track meet.

The track is being repaired and a new coat of cinders will be applied, so that the men will have every opportunity to make a creditable showing in their first appearance of the year. All the distance events probably will be shortened in order not to subject the men to too severe a strain.

The freshman material, although it has not been carefully scrutinized by "Dad" Moulton, is said to be above the average. Among the new men are Argabrite of Ventura, the high jumper; Kern of Pasadena, hurdler, and several other athletes with high school "reps."

GAMBLERS NERVOUS.

Decide Not to Continue the Game in the East, Owing to Effect on Public Opinion.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Jockey Club has decided that racing in the east will terminate for this season on next Monday, the last day at both Aqueduct and Baltimore.

Horsemen had raised a $10,000 fund to induce the Aqueduct track to fill the dates for the two weeks following Monday which were abandoned by the Empire City track, but the Jockey Club considered this would be bad policy and denied the permission.

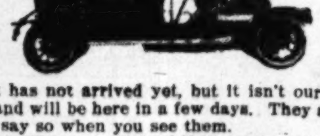
RENAULT

The Car Guaranteed for Life



The Renault has not arrived yet, but it isn't our fault. The cars are on the way, and will be here in a few days. They are worth waiting for and you will say so when you see them.

The Renault is "Guaranteed for Life," and is especially constructed to meet the requirements of American roads. Put these two things together and add the peculiar excellencies of this wonderful car as to speed, durability, and easy riding qualities—well there's nothing in the automobile line equal to it—except another Renault.

The consignment now due includes the 35-45 h.p. model, the 20-30 close-coupled Roadster, and a 15 h. p. town car, with Rothschild landaulet body. The next shipment will include a 50-60 h.p., six-cylinder car.

We shall also carry a full line of Renault commercial cars. This will be one of our strongest features.

DOUBLE-HEADER.

REDLANDS TIES POLY FIFTEEN.

Los Angeles High Defeats Harvard Easily.

Ball Within Few Inches of the Goal Line Twice.

Pierce Star of the Day and Geissler Does Well.

Redlands High, 0; Polytechnic, 0.
L. A. High, 23; Harvard, 0.

Redlands played the big Polytechnic Rugby aggregation to a standstill at Fiesta Park yesterday afternoon, in the most bitterly-contested match that has been seen this season.

Los Angeles High won from Harvard School in the other half of the double-header, adding another "skiddoo" to her long list of the season's twenty-threes.

Three times during the Redlands-Polytechnic game the ball was within inches of a score. During the first minutes of play Polytechnic was close to the Redlands line, but could not do better than a minor.

Excitement came to its height at the beginning of the second period, when the local fifteen again swarmed close to the Redlands goal. It was evident that a single score would probably win the game for either side, and the Polytechnic rooters went wild as the home team struggled for three successive scrums within inches of a try.

Five minutes later the tables were reversed and Redlands was close to Poly's last chalk-mark. Twice the visiting Blue and White was driven back, only to get the ball prettily to touch close to the corner of the field. The chance to score was thrown away by attempted passing, when the halves might have made sure gains by straight plunging, as Redlands had shown herself capable of heeling-out from Poly consistently.

The two teams were evenly matched, and struggled back and forth across the field without advantage on either side. Polytechnic played rather as an aggregation of individual stars than as a well-rounded team, allowing the Redlands team work to hold down Poly's superior individual play. Redlands was minus her captain, Hassan, who was ruled out by the A.A.W., on alleged baseball professionalism a few days ago.

PIERCE THE STAR.

Monk Pierce at full-back was the one man largely responsible for the fact that the game resulted in no score. Redlands would heel out, and Bennett would make a pretty kick to touch from the middle of the scrimmage for a safe gain. The play would be repeated until the ball was in Polytechnic territory; then Bennett's kick would fail to find touch, and Pierce would boot it clear back down the field toward the Redlands 25-yard line. Practically every time that the ball went clear of the scrimmagers into Poly's backfield, Pierce had it down the field for a Polytechnic gain. Hendrichsen also was good in the same way. Except for these two stars and their play, Polytechnic was unable to gain consistently.

Redlands also was unable to gain steadily except for Bennett's pretty short kicking to touch. At full-back Redlands was slow; Cowgill gave place to W. Hentschke, who did a little better. Hentschke used his head well, but was slow with his hands. Redlands had no punter in the class of either Pierce or Hendrichsen.

Rowell and Heney played well for Polytechnic in the half positions. Manning, who went in the second half, was plainly out of condition and not up to his mark.

SKIDDOO SCORE.

In the L. A. High-Harvard game the High School had things pretty much their own way. Eighteen points were scored in the first half, and five more added in the second period. During the second half Harvard put up a stronger fight than at the first of the game, but the L. A. men should have scored more than their single goal.

The L. A. score in the second half came after the prettiest passing rush of the day. From midfield L. A. High carried the ball to the corner of the field, the leather traveling straight down the wing with pretty passes and fast rushes. Wills got his man finally inside the five-yard line, and after a couple of scrimmages Geissler went over for the score. Geissler was again the grand stand man for High School, with Harrigan running second.

L. A. High was the only one of the four teams playing that did good gaining with pretty Rugby passing in the backfield. Redlands worked hard with good passing, but Polytechnic was too fast so that the best the visitors could do was to send the ball straight across the field in relays. Harvard's back-field plays were all broken up by L. A. before they got well under way, and Polytechnic threw away her opportunities by ragged passing and fumbling.

Line-up:

"COUNTESS" DYING.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—"Countess" Leona Brooks who came into notoriety several years ago through her relations with Edward J. Smith, the absconder, is dying of tuberculosis at the French Hospital here. Her friends of the old days have made her last illness comfortable.

The "Countess" stood guard over the tax collector on his flight from this city with $165,000. She joined him in Los Angeles and went with him to St. Louis, where he was arrested. She refused to tell the grand jury what he did with the money.

OCCIDENTAL—U.S.C.

under cover. The university could not follow up their advantage, and held for downs, the university was forced to punt. Mishaps in the backfield were costly and five times in that last half Occidental started the procession for a goal.

The last fifteen minutes was played in the darkening shadows, which made each punt more difficult to handle. Long after the sun had dipped behind the Occidental hills, the players, fighting for every inch, sought to decide by luck or fluke the winning points. It became so dark that auto lamps were lighted, and the white glare of the lamps sent numerous searchlights across the field of battle.

GATHERING GLOOM.

Two minutes before the close of the game Occidental, after losing many yards in exchange of punts, crouched on their own 40-yard line. Fred Thomson signaled for a punt, but did not kick. The powerful punter, taking advantage of the falling darkness and the excitement of the players, dashed through the opposing line for 30 yards. Decius returned a fake 15 yards. Again Thomson punted and in the scramble for the catch Jim Smart recovered.

Drury Wieman was given the ball on the next play, the whistle blew but the plunging backs did not hear it. Drury rushed untackled over the line, apparently for a touchdown. The university players had stopped at the whistle.

A heated wrangle followed, the referee declared the touchdown void. After the game he asserted he was undecided about the play. The question may be brought before the college conference for settlement.

In line-bucking Occidental greatly outplayed the 'varsity. In punting fake plays and brilliant end runs the university easily carried off the honors. Every march of the Tigers toward the university goal was blocked at the critical moment. Occidental could gain but could not score. This tells the story of the second half.

Drury and Ink Wieman in the backfield, the Smart brothers in the line, starred conspicuously for the Tigers. Drury plunged with terrific force, and with wagon road opened by the big tackles passage always netted big gains. Baer was surer in the backfield than Ickes, but was out-generaled.

Decius was the biggest player the university has had since Shutz starred. The shifty back dodged like a jackrabbit, tackled like a demon, and with Selph bore the brunt of the terrific bucking. Stookey redeemed himself in the line. Malcom played against great odds and deserves much credit. Allan went into the game, playing through the whole game.

The line-up:

U.S.C.		Occidental
Wirsching	R.E.L.	Hopkins
Cochran	R.T.L.	Landreth
Allan	R.G.L.	Thomson
Bunker.	C.	Patterson
Malcom-Keller	L.G.R.	W. Smart
Stookey-Malcom	L.T.R.	J. Smart

Ickes	Q.	Baer-Johnson
Decius	R.H.L.	D. Wieman
Paulin	L.H.R.	Collins (c)
Selph	F.	E. Wieman

Referee, Paul Rader; umpire, G. Haines; field judge, Rheinhardt; head linesman, Reynolds. Time of halves, 35 minutes.

BLEACHERS FULL.

MANY OF BRIGHT FACES.

A full hour before the game first whistle, the big bleachers and grand stands began to fill up. Occidental's rooters were early on the stands. They occupied the east end of the stands. It was 3 o'clock, however, before the late comers had reached the field. The university enthusiasts filled the west section, and by the time the game was called the crowd welled over into the field on both sides of the stands. About 2000 persons filled the stands. Another 500 rooters crowded for vantage points on the sides of the stands.

Parked along the north side of the field scores of autos poked their hoods close to the sidelines. Two university tallyhos, each alive with gaily dressed co-eds sought admission at the west gate. The low top bar of the gate would not allow the rigs to carry the eager spectators onto the field. The girls scrambled down, and gaining their seats within the grounds were dashed away to the reserved parking.

Before the teams appeared the rooters were quiet. The university eleven trotted out first and was greeted with round after round of yelling. Scarcely a minute later the Tigers, resplendent in new black and orange and black jerseys, came filing from the training quarters. It was the signal for tremendous cheering.

The university rooters wore new toboggan caps, the hood of deep cardinal, the topnot of gold tassle.

NOTES OF GAME.

Stookey put up a wonderful defense at left guard. His great size and strength made him invincible and he tore through the line for many long gains.

Capt. Paulin got away with several spectacular end runs. His fast work in the open field was especially good.

Baer played a fast, heady game. He was rather nervous in the first half, and because of overeagerness missed several punts, but steadied down later.

Landreth and Smart played in hard, smashing style. Landreth is in better condition than he was in the law school game. His work is faster and he hit the line harder.

Prexy Baer's speed prevented U.S.C. from scoring five additional points at the end of the first half. Hill, U.S.C. right end, secured the ball on a fumble by Drury Wieman, and started toward the goal with an open field before him. Baer sprinted after him and downed him on the 35-yard line with a long diving tackle from the rear. A minute later, with the ball on Occidental's 5-yard line, the half ended.

Decius gained more ground than any other man on the field. On the Occidental kick-off in the second half, he almost got away for a touchdown, but was downed by Baer, after he had broken through the rest of the team.

"Ink" Wieman's magnificent 43-yard goal kick from placement was the feature of the game.

Drury Wieman had a little the worst of the punting duel against Decius.

Ickes, U.S.C.'s fast quarter, stuck bravely to his position throughout the game, in spite of a bad ankle.

Hopkins got down the field very fast and several times made big gains by downing the ball on fumbles by U.S.C.

George Baer proves the nerviest man on the field. Although fagged out long before the game was over, his will power kept him in until the last minute of play when Johnson went to quarter.

Selp of U.S.C. plunged through the line for long gains. His aggressive work won many yards.

Fred Thompson put in some magnificent work in the last minutes of play. His terrific line smashing was very effective.

Capt. Collins's work was hard and consistent. His long circling end runs were a feature.

U.S.C. used a fake kick play very effectively.

Both teams were penalized rather severely for off-side plays, and Occidental lost considerable ground on fumbles at critical times.

Neither team used the forward pass.

STATISTICS OF GAME.

Occidental punted the ball 23 times, with an average of 25 yards to a punt. The total number of yards gained on punts was 625. U.S.C. punted 25 times, averaging 31 yards to a kick, with a total of 785 yards gained.

Occidental bucked 33 times, averaging 5 yards a buck, with a total of 163 yards. U.S.C. bucked 13 times averaging 4 yards a buck, totaling 57 yards.

U.S.C. was penalized four times for 15 yards and twice for 10 yards, making a total of 70 yards.

Occidental was penalized three times for 15 yards and three times for 5 yards; in all 60 yards penalty.

EASY FOR PASADENA.

WHITTIER FAILS TO SCORE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WHITTIER, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Whittier High School lost its grip on the championship rag today when Coach Wilson's colts from Pasadena High won by a score of 16 to 0.

The local lads were badly crippled by the absence of Left-half Mann, and numerous substitutions, owing to injuries, also weakened the Quakers. Only bad fumbles and misjudgment of punts on the part of Pasadena kept the score down.

Whittier came near scoring twice, once when it held Pasadena for downs on the 20-yard line, and again when Donoghue recovered a forward pass and made a 45-yard run before he was downed. Ballard made some spectacular end runs, but was unable to get loose for any big gains.

The Pasadena ends were faster than Whittier, and got down on punts in great style. Siefert, left half for Pasadena, played a fine game, securing one of the touchdowns, after bucking the line for a 12-yard gain. Hayes secured another touchdown on a fake double pass from Glass.

The only touchdown made on straight football was after Pasadena had recovered a punt on the Whittier 20-yard line. From there the ball was put over in four straight bucks.

POMONA BEATEN.

THROOP SPRINGS SURPRISE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pomona had a surprise sprung on them when they met the Throop team this afternoon, losing by a score of 3 to 0.

The Claremonters had expected an easy game and were without some of their best men, but the light boys from the Crown city took them right off their feet in the first part of the play.

The only score was made early in the first half when Throop made a place kick from the twenty yard line. Not once in the game did Pomona get her offense to working and Throop goal was never in danger. In the second half Pomona tried the forward pass continually but it was seldom successful.

Throop put up a fine hard game and deserved its victory. Brown was the special star. The Pomona team lacked snap and consistency throughout. Shutt, left half, and Davis, center, did not appear at all in the game.

Neuls replaced Valle at quarter early in the game and both the ends were changed between halves.

DRAW COLOR LINE.

NEGRO CAUSES TROUBLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dissension in the ranks because a negro boy was put in as captain in the place of a white boy, was one of the reasons the Whittier State School football team went down to defeat before the Santa Ana High School today, score 11 to 0.

Bailes (white) was acting captain of the State team before the game began. For some uunexplained reason the school authorities deposed Bailes and put Kyle (colored) in command. Bailes quit the gridiron, and was followed by two or three other white players.

While the trouble in the ranks counted considerably against Whittier, Santa Ana earned her victory, and had there been no mutiny, doubtless Whittier would have been beaten. The local team put ginger into its work, and by clever forward passes, good punting by Tedford, and hard tackling on defense, kept the ball in Whittier territory. Both Santa Ana's touchdowns were made on forward passes, first Reeves to Tedford and second Pumphrey to Lantz.

Whittier was weak in the backfield on defense. Twice Whittier, losing the ball on downs, on a quick punt Tedford shot the ball over the State's team. Line-up:

the Stadium on Soldiers' Field. Harvard won, 18 to 0.

Harvard was held to a single score in the first half. Cornell successfully carried out one of the most spectacular forward passes ever seen, in which the ball was hurled 30 yards to a player, who made 20 yards more before he was thrown.

In the second half neither side gained much advantage until Frothingham made a dash of 25 yards, the last 10 of which he was dragged along by fellow-players. Seven rushes carried the ball over, Frothingham making the touchdown, the goal following. Harvard, 12; Cornell, 0.

Rushing by the Harvard backs and a forward pass carried the ball to the 11-yard line, and there Rogers came over and made a touchdown. Goal was kicked. Harvard, 18; Cornell, 0.

When the game was called the ball was in the hands of the Crimson players on their own 30-yard line.

NEVADA ROADS MERGE.

Traffic of State to Be Consolidated in Hope of Effecting Saving of Operation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arrangements have about been concluded for the practical merging of the traffic of Southern Nevada by placing the Tonopah and Tidewater, Las Vegas and Tonopah, and Tonopah and Goldfield railroads under one management with joint shops in Goldfield. The action is due to the decline in tonnage owing to the many mills that are operating and using ore that formerly furnished the profitable tonnage out of the camps.

Two ticket offices will be cosed and two passenger and freight depots centering the traffic at new terminals up town for which the right of way has been acquired. It is said that construction will begin about the first of the year when the new arrangement takes effect. The shops of Tonopah and Goldfield at Tonopah were destroyed by fire last August and reconstruction has been postponed until it was learned if the deal would be consummated.

Heavyweight Boxers on the card Tuesday night. On the left is Fritz Frey. The other is Joe Willis.

PUNCHERS ANXIOUS.

MORE HEAVIES ON NEXT CARD.

BIG PUGS ARE TO FINISH THEIR HARD WORK TODAY.

Joe Willis, Scheduled for the Main Event, Hopes to Make Good in His First Battle in the South—Go Between Reardon and Frey Looks Promising—Jimmy Austin in Shape.

The local fight bugs will have another chance to look at the big pugs Tuesday night at the Naud Junction fight barn in the ten-round match between Joe Wills and Jack Geyer and the scrap should be interesting as a slugging affair, as fights between big men generally are.

The work of Willis in particular will be watched rather closely as he is a big fighter who has done some fair work in San Francisco. He thinks he has some easy game in sight in this end of the State but still he has not neglected his training for he does not know just what Geyer may be. He did the usual amount of road work yesterday, exercised in the gym and also include in boxing with Fritz Frey. Willis weighs about 180 pounds and says he is ready to fight. All of the pugs on the card will do their last hard work today.

Jack Geyer did his usual road work at Venice yesterday and after the morning stunt entered the gymnasium and played with the medicine ball, skipped the rope, did shadow work, and boxed with Tad Reardon.

Gene McGovern boxed four rounds with Dougherty, getting ready for his six-round contest with Young Pico. Pico and Billy Cappelle are training at San Pedro. Pico i sa rough and ready fighter who has made a good impression at the harbor fights and his contest with McGovern will be his initial appearance at Naud. Cappelle is on with Joe Livermore and if the San Pedro boy wins this fight he will be matched with Frankie Sullivan for November 16.

Jimmy Austin and Young Miller are doing all they can to get in condition for their six-round bout. Miller was defeated by Jimmy when they hooked up before but this time he will have had more experience and as he will outweigh Austin by six or seven pounds he believes he will make a much better showing than he did before.

The semi-windup between Tad Reardon and Fritz Frey should be a whirlwind affair. Battling Johnson acknowledged that Frey was his superior and with Reardon in good shape the fans should seen one of the toughest bouts of the evening.

OKLAHOMA AWAKE.

WANTS BIG HEAVY FIGHT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Tom Sharkey has received from Joe Miller of Ponco, Okla., a telegram declaring that Gov. Haskell has sanctioned the proposition to hold the Jeffries-Johnson fight in that State for any number of rounds.

Miller submitted a bid of $65,000 for the fight some time ago, but it was not considered seriously because of the belief that the contest could not be held in that State.

The message from Miller, which also includes the information that he will be here next week to post a forfeit, has changed the general opinion and Oklahoma may be an active bidder.

Jeffries, who had returned to gymnasium and road training after two days of deep-sea fishing, has assured Sheriff Foley, who is an old friend of his, that he will knock out Johnson inside of ten rounds and has advised the sheriff to "bet the limit on him."

Match for Wolgast.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 6.—Ad Wolgast has been matched with Henri Piet, the Parisian, before the West Side Athletic Club of New Orleans. The bout which is scheduled to go fifteen rounds, will be held November 14. The weight will be 133 pounds ringside

GORE INELIGIBLE.

Pomona Player on Stanford Squad Is Barred from Playing Through Residence Clause.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 5.—The name of T. Gore, '11, which appeared on the list of players eligible to participate in the intercollegiate game, has been withdrawn, as the fact that he transferred from Pomona College this year and is therefore ineligible was overlooked.

The fall baseball practice was brought to an end yesterday. The original intention was to continue the work until December 1, but as the diamond has to undergo repairs that will occupy about two weeks, it was decided to have the work done while the weather is favorable. The next appearance of the squad will be in January, when the regular season will open.

The freshman class, which annually has in charge the bonfire for the rally before the intercollegiate game, has announced that a tower forty feet high with a base fifteen feet square, filled in with barrels and lumber, will be constructed to furnish the blaze. An effort will be made to beat all Stanford records for bonfires.

OLDS IN NEW HOME.

Woolwine Motor Car Company Removes to Larger Olive-Street Quarters.

Woods R. Woolwine has removed to the new garage of the Woolwine Motor Car Company on Olive street, near Eleventh. The handsomely appointed showroom has been fitted up with a tile floor, and is especially decorated. Oldsmobiles, Cartercars and the Rapid power wagons are to be given place on the floor.

There is not a more commodious garage in the city than that prepared for the Oldsmobile and Cartercar lines. The showroom is large enough to accommodate four cars comfortably and from seven to nine if the cars are crowded. It is not the purpose of the concern to keep more than the demonstrator of each line on the floor at once. The Olds Motor Works has promised deliveries as rapidly as possible.

Rapid strides into prominence in the automobile industry has marked the career of Woolwine, who started as a partner of the Big Four Auto Company. Later Woolwine removed to Olive street and secured the Olds agency for Southern California.

W. A. Evans, agent for the Waverley electric, reports the delivery of cars to Louis Isaacs and Mrs. L. W. Foster A carload of Waverley cars is expected this week. Among the shipment are three Victorias, one of two-passenger model and two of four-passenger type.

PERTINENT COMMENT ON SPORTS.

THE WEEK'S EVENTS.

Amateur Professionals.

In late years there has risen into prominence a new type of athlete who is doing much for amateur sports, yet who is classed in the professional ranks of the A.A.U.—the coach. Formerly the coach was an out-and-out professional, or he was a rank amateur. The professional coach made a business of it and shaped his ends to win at all hazards. The professional tramp athlete resulted. In the smaller schools teachers were employed who could coach and these in a way retained their amateur standing, receiving nothing for their services as coach. Neither of these classes was satisfactory, and a mean was struck, in theory at least. It is the purpose to make the ideal coach a man of high character, who will teach the theory of true sportsmanship as well as the practice of muscular exertion. These men are amateurs at heart and receive money as a means of livelihood so they may devote their time and energies to the development of physical character as well as physical prowess. It is their life-work—not because it will make them rich, but because they consider it a profession to be proud of by which they can accomplish something for the good of humanity. "Physical excellence" is the cry of the modern coach; not "win at all hazards." By physical excellence is not meant sheer brute strength but mental control of good muscles, forming a combination of winning poise. These amateur professionals should be given the assistance of all true sportsmen, and they should be provided with a way to get in closer touch with all forms of athletics.

Professional Amateurs.

The professional amateur is the man against whom all amateur interests are guarding. Usually these men are nothing more than healthy youths who love sport for sport's sake. They are too lazy mentally to study hard and too irresponsible to go to work. They have their physical excellencies which find an outlet in college or athletic club sport. They accept tuition or board, or both, for playing at school; they take their "cuts" out of receipts of semi-professional ball games; they accept engagements for various athletic contests at nominal compensation just to play the game. There are so many of these men that if they were permitted to remain long in athletics they would professionalize many amateur sports, besides crowding out those athletes who play only in their school days, with limitations. The "tramp" athlete has been the bane of the "pure sport" exponents. There are many men in football today whose playing days should be over. Were scholarship attainments strictly adhered to many of these boys would be dropped, but the greed for free advertising has turned the heads of many college presidents and players are allowed certain leniencies. The most frequent offender is the baseball player. Schoolboys play ball in the summer season with business houses which are after the advertising. They receive free suits, expenses, and a percentage of the gate receipts. Sometimes they get a job on the strength of their playing ability. Look out for these fellows as amateurs.

Professionals.

The A.A.U. defines as professionals all such persons as fail to come up to its requirements. If one man on a team happens to do an overt act, it is frequently the case that the whole team is suspended by the A.A.U. or declared professional. Of course it can be seen readily that such persons are no more professionals than any other amateurs, and that the term necessarily must be technical only. A professional is a person who makes a profession of a certain line of work, in the strict sense; but it would not be amiss to stretch the term in sports by classing also as a professional he who accepts money as an extra compensation above his expenses. A real professional makes his living at the business, whether by playing baseball, by boxing, or by wrestling. For purposes of demarkation, any person who receives money must be termed a professional, to protect the amateurs, but that is as far as the term "professional" goes. The A.A.U. further classes a man who is professional in one sport as professional in all. As an actual fact a professional ball player may be an amateur boxer or wrestler if he never received pay in those lines, but the A.A.U. apparently presumes that if a person takes money in one line of sport he is likely to do so in another and that the mere fact that he is a professional in any kind of a sport unfits him for amateur work in any other.

Amateurs.

Primarily an amateur is a sportsman who takes part in contests or other forms of recreation purely for the love of the sport. He receives no money for playing, pays all his own expenses, and does not care whether he has a crowd looking on or not. In recent years the amateur has degenerated into an advertising medium for colleges or athletic clubs. College or club spirit is the cause given for playing the game, and many a man is dragged from his study to don a football suit, not because he wants to play the game, but because he is strong and husky, and his college "needs" him. Half the athletes contesting today would not do so if they could not appear before cheering crowds and be made heroes. The training season of a football team is one hard round of work, and many players would quit the game if they were allowed to choose for themselves, and if they were not afraid of the jibes of classmates. Such persons are not pure amateur sportsmen. The ideal man takes work or play in sports as part of the game, and does either with equal pleasure. Many ball players take part in summer games, and say they play because they like to, but they are always there for the "split" of the gate receipts, no matter how small the amount. There appear to be all kinds of "amateurs."

Barnstorming Trips.

Big league players who make barnstorming trips, show up very poorly in comparison with their form in the championship race. Although the Philadelphia Athletics have done fairly well here, they have been disappointing to many who read of their wonderful performances toward the close of the season. Eddie Collins is batting away down, and the visitors have made mistakes of play like any minor league team, and it makes little difference to them what the result so long as the "gate" is satisfactory. What the fans want to see is a team that will show up the local bunch, not to make the locals out as a lot of dubs.

Season Too Long.

The fact that none of the regular Pacific Coast League players batted in the .300 class seems to indicate that the season is too long for good work with the stick. The unofficial averages, compiled by a representative of the Los Angeles team, and submitted on honor for publication on Sunday only, show that either the pitchers must be exceptionally good, or the men are worn out by the long grind. It looks as though the season ought to be cut in half, with a week's vacation in between for recreation.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Norman Church, Coast representative for the Stoddard-Dayton, is in Seattle.

A. M. Young, of Birele and Young, who enter the Columbia, is at Whitewater watching the progress of the race.

Ralph Hamlin has wagered $1000 that his car will win the Phoenix race.

MAKES LONG TOUR.

Davidson Buys Stoddard-Dayton at Factory, Travels Three Thousand Miles and Car Looks Fine.

A. N. Davidson of this city has made a long round trip in a new Stoddard-Dayton, which was delivered to him at the factory in Dayton, O. He covered 3000 miles in the new thirty-horse-power roadster without any trouble of any kind. He drove to Chicago, from there to Detroit, and then to Cleveland. After brief rests, he continued on to Buffalo, visiting Niagara Falls.

From Buffalo he drove to New York, and then journeyed into New England, visiting Boston. This was a pleasant part of the long tour. He passed some time at the Atlantic seacoast resorts. The little Stoddard averaged 200 miles a day.

After the New England trip, the Stoddard was turned south to New York again, and later Philadelphia was visited, as also was Baltimore and other towns along the coast. The car was shipped home to Los Angeles last week, and is to be used on long tours in Southern California. Davidson says his Stoddard looks as good as new.

RACY AMERICAN SIMPLEX.

Milo Bekins Wants to Enter Two-Cycle Car in Mile High Hill Climb at Redlands.

Milo W. Bekins has a desire to enter the Redland shill climb. He made the run over the Mile High course last week in his American Simplex and as a result he has planned to enter an American Simplex roadster in the climb if he can get a car from the factory in time.

The big two-cylinder cars have shown speed and hill climbing powers on local hills. Bekins recently took the car up the Altadena and Lookout Mountain climbs in great shape. Newhall was also made with apparent ease. The car has never been in competition with four-cycle cars of its class.

The Redlands climb is a test for any car. The Bekins-Corey Company expects to enter a demonstrator which has been making good in the East where the car has been tested.

The machine works well on the high gear, going up steep grades and showing pulling power. Bekins is enthusiastic over the work done by his car and is anxious to see it in competition.

GRAND PRIX AND AEROPLANES.

Automobile Club of France to Hold Great Race, But Has Not Chosen Course for Motor Classic.

In addition to its automobile Grand Prix, the Automobile Club of France will undertake the organization of aëroplane races next year. The races will extend over one week and will commence immediately after the great national horse race at Longchamps, marking the height of the fashionable Paris season. It is not yet known where the aërodrome will be located, but a site near Paris is most probable.

It is not yet known where the next Grand Prix will be held. Anjou was promised the race this year, and is still prepared to offer its roads in 1910, together with a subsidy of $20,000 to the club. Dieppe, which had the race in 1907 and 1908, has also come forward with an offer of the same course. Other courses are not lacking, and it may be a month before the Racing Board makes a selection.

As outlined, the Grand Prix will be the longest road race ever run, the distance being not less than 500 miles, all of which must be run in one day. The bars as to car size have been dropped also, and there will be no limitations. This practically means a return to the Bennett Cup days.

VANDERBILT CUP RACER.

Atlas Car, Which Finished Fifth, Was in Racing Game for First Time.

One of the five cars that finished the recent Vanderbilt Cup race was the 60-horse-power Atlas, entered by the Atlas Motor Car Company. The car was never before known in the racing field and made a good impression during its run with the seventeen high power machines in the race.

The Atlas showed wonderful speed and was only beaten by cars of higher price and greater horse-power. It was equipped for the race at the factory but is a stock car such as is being sold by the factory every day.

The Bekins-Corey Motor Car Company handles the Atlas here. It expects to have an Atlas roadster shipped here for stunt work and will enter it in local race meets. Great claims are made for the Atlas and from the specifications the roadster looks fit for any test.

BASEBALL.

Oldring at third who dodged to one side to get it, but the ball made a bad bound and went to the other side of him. He shifted his position with lightning-like speed and got the ball in time to throw the runner out at first, the play being classy.

While the fans did not see Los Angeles win, the witnessed some beautiful ball and that is what they paid their money for. Outside of Beall's bad work the game was a fine one and provided all the excitement necessary.

NEVADA DEFEATED.

Loses One-Sided Game to California After Scaring the Native Sons in the First Half.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERKELEY, Nov. 6.—The University of California defeated the University of Nevada today in one of the most exciting Rugby football games played on California field this season, the score being 24 to 8.

A protest on the part of Nevada may lead to the changing of this score to 19 to 8, as Nevada, under a misconception of the rules, ceased playing when the pistol was fired, and permitted California to make the final try without opposition. According to the protest Nevada has been playing under the rule which declares the ball dead when the pistol ends the game, but California has been observing the regulation, which allows a score to be made after the shot is fired if the ball is in movement at the time.

The first score was made by California after a long passing rush, and this was followed by a try, made by Nevada after the ball had been dribbled almost the entire length of the field. California scored again shortly afterward, but the remainder of the half was fought in California territory.

Nevada rushed the California players off their feet at the beginning of the second half, and the local collegians were so badly outplayed for a time that it looked as if the visitors would win, but California inaugurated several passing rushes near the end of the game that turned the tide of victory in their favor.

YALE'S GOOD FORM.

BROWN ALSO SKIDOOED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Nov. 6.—Yale's form for the championship series was shown when she beat Brown 23 to 0, on Yale Field, today. No difficulty was experienced in defeating Brown, although Yale did not start with her strongest combination in the back field.

One touchdown was made in the first half.

When the second half opened Logan replaced Vaughan at Yale's right end. Coy took the ball for a 40-yard run around right end. Philbin went in half-back for Savage and Coy at full-back. Four rushes took the ball over and Hobbs kicked goal. Yale, 12; Brown, 0.

After Brown's next kickoff, Coy made a 15-yard run, Philbin one of 10, and then Coy 15 more, bringing the ball to midfield. In a line play, there was holding and Yale was penalized fifteen yards. Coy kicked to Brown's 10-yard line where Logan nailed the runner. Brown kicked to Corey who signaled for a fair catch at Brown's 45-yard line. Brown was penalized and then Coy went through center to the 10-yard line. Another plunge took him five yards. Coy then went over for Yale's third touchdown. Hobbs failed to kick goal. Yale, 17; Brown, 0.

When the ball reached Philbin on the 35-yard line, he ran seventy yards for a touchdown. Hobbs kicked goal. Yale, 23; Brown, 0.

Philbin was replaced by Taylor when the teams lined up again. Coy failed on a try at goal from the 35-yard line, and the game ended there.

BAR DAYLIGHT SPOONING.

NEW ORLEANS (La.) Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That nurses shamefully neglect their infant charges in Audubon Park, the great playground of New Orleans, in order to fill clandestine appointments with their lovers, was the statement made yesterday at a meeting of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. As a result a movement was started to organize a protective organization to keep the girls on their jobs and force their ardent admirers to make love indoors. The police squad at Audubon Park will, in the future, draw a line at daylight spooning.

Society Woman Refuses to Be Living "Before and After Taking" Card for Beauty Doctor.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Ella Houghton, a rich widow living at the Hotel Ansonia, is complainant in a police court against a woman beauty doctor. Mrs. Houghton's face presents a strange sight. One half is as clear of wrinkles as that of a young girl. The other as Mrs. Houghton told the court, is marked with crows feet. The beauty doctor according to Mrs. Hougton, had refused to complete the job of rejuvenating her complexion unless she would agree to attend a reception at the Ansonia with her face in its present condition, as a "before and after" advertisement. The beauty doctor said in her defence that Mrs. Houghton had agreed to her terms when she began to treat her, which Mrs. Houghton denied.

Women's Temperance Union Joins Campaign Being Waged by White Cross on Chicago Dives.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following conferences yesterday, it was announced that the Women's Christian Temperance Union and other big organizations would combine with the White Cross Midnight Mission in its war on the redlight district.

It is desired to enlist at least 10,000 active workers in the cause. Mothers and wives will be delegated to blockade the doors of the redlight resorts. Squads of women will guard all approaches to the district so that men will not dare enter. The mission workers have been carrying on the work with their limited forces for some time, but claim the police use them roughly, as the resort keepers admit no one will enter the houses with two or three mission workers haunting the doorways.

GAYNOR ROOSEVELTIAN.

Mayor-Elect Spends First Day of Rest After Campaign Walking Twenty Miles

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—William J. Gaynor who will become Mayor of New York City on January 1, spent his first day of rest after the election, by taking a twenty-mile walk on the roads near his Long Island farm, and then by donning overalls and assisting his farm hands to husk the fall gathering of corn. Mr. Gaynor expects to devote the next three weeks to hard work as a farmer on his place. He will build a shelter for his hogs, make an addition to the barn and lay a cinder path from the house to the cistern. He says he will see no politicians.

The Standard Oil Company yesterday in New York announced a 10-cent reduction in refined oil, as follows: Refined in cases, $10.45; in tanks, $4.55; standard white, $8.05. The company also reduced the price of crude oil 5 points to 1.48

FIRST AND SECOND PLACE Two six-cylinder, 50-horse power LOZIER Briarcliff model stock cars won first and second places in the great 24-hour race at Brighton Beach October 15-16, 1909.

WORLD'S RECORD The winning LOZIER car traveled 1196 miles, breaking the former world's record.

LAST HOUR FASTEST TIME PRIZE A special prize of $200 was offered to the car making the greatest mileage during the last hour. To emphasize its victory, the winning LOZIER car No. 3 won this prize by making 51½ miles, notwithstanding the fact that two cars hopelessly beaten for place had made special effort to win this prize. The fact that the LOZIER car made more miles in the last hour than any other car, and exceeded the hourly average for the race, indicates the perfect condition of the car at the finish.

TROPHY FOR 1909 MILEAGE The winning LOZIER car No. 3 also won the Sewall & Alden trophy offered to the car making the greatest mileage in any 24-hour race during the season of 1909.

TWO LOZIERS BROKE WORLD'S RECORD Both LOZIER cars No. 3 and 4 broke the world's continuous 24-hour record, car No. 3 making 1196 miles and car No. 4 1169 miles. The former non-stop record, 1050 miles, was made by the Renault car on the same track, August 27-28, 1909. The winning LOZIER cars therefore, made respectively 146 and 119 miles more than were ever made by any car in a continuous 24-hour race.

VICTORY DECISIVE LOZIER Car No. 3 defeated the nearest competitor by eighty-one miles, scoring the most decisive victory ever achieved by any car in a twenty-four-hour race.

NO MECHANICAL TROUBLES During the entire 24 hours the bonnet of the winning car was never raised. Not a single adjustment or repair of any kind was made to the car other than tire replacement—a record never equaled by any car in a 24-hour race.

LAST YEAR'S GREAT DOUBLE VICTORY IS TURNED AGAIN In September, 1908, two LOZIER cars won first and second prizes in the 24-hour race at Brighton Beach, breaking the existing world's record. It was stated that such a decisive victory had never been achieved by any make of car in the history of long-distance racing, and would probably never be duplicated. The LOZIER cars, by again winning a double victory in better than world's record time, have proved that the former achievement was not the result of luck are made against the church as , if the criticism is from within, from a particularly good example to the rest, the strictures bear no taint of superior in tone, then all others who in church work must bow their head in say: "Have mercy on me." But when , with a triumphant air of greater sanc- of disdain at the churches and in cries out: "See how lax my brethren are," then the churches have the right of reply and may do so in all freedom though with becoming humility. The Times holds no brief from any church, but as a public print set on the walls of the world, if not on those of Zion, to keep a lookout on events, may (indeed should) take cognizance of disputes like this and see that fair play is done to all interested.

Thus as a watchman surveying current events, we look out here over our own part of the world and ask how much truth there may be in Miss Booth's criticism of the churches. First, we note three conceptions of what churches should do. There is the rather stale notion that the church is a praying church. This is a notion held by many estimable people, somewhat slow, old-fashioned, perhaps some of them indolent, at least lacking in energy. Others look upon the church as a teaching church. This is a phase of ecclesiastical effort much emphasized at the time of the great Protestant "Reformation" and still clung to by ministers who are good declaimers at least, at best eloquent orators. We are all given to magnifying our office. Last, are those who look upon the church as a working church. This is Miss Booth's main conception, and this is where she aims her fault finding against the churches.

Now we think in our humble capacity of publicist that the true church is all these. Certainly the churches as a rule have a very good supply of prayer in their efforts to save souls. Here in Los Angeles there is no lack of Sons of Thunder who in eloquent strains cry to the sinner to forsake his ways. But how far is this young woman from London correct in her argument that the church is not a working church? We are speaking of what we see right here near home.

Here then we find the church (or the churches, as you will) engaged in the work of conducting elaborate and successful courses of study, maintaining and managing schools from the kindergarten grade to the university, with all its allied colleges where all professions may be prepared for. We note that side by side with these the churches maintain hospitals where the sick are treated and healed, and on the other side we note orphan asylums where the castaways of society are given the best of care and brought up in such a way as to fit them for useful places in the world. The churches also maintain "Doors of Hope" and such like asylums to which the weary and heavy-laden with the most degrading sins may betake themselves and learn to forsake their evil ways. These outcasts are sought after and led to come in where they will hear. The churches minister to the temporal and spiritual needs of the prisoners in the jails and of the indigent in the county institutions. One church is just now erecting a rest room, a retreat, and a reading-room near the County Hospital to which the inmates of that lazar-house may resort. To tell of all the activities of the working churches in Los Angeles in detail would fill a book.

And all this is absolutely "without money and without price." Those who are unable to pay may come and drink freely of all these fountains of refreshment, of all these waters of life. These working churches are educating those who cannot pay, nursing, feeding, giving medical treatment to those who cannot pay, taking the waifs from the gutter who have not a friend on earth and giving them care superior to what children have in some homes. Books, periodicals, papers are supplied free of all cost to those on whom time lies heavily.

Are these things not so, Miss Booth? You are a Christian woman. Your aim in life is presumed to be high and noble. Do you not belong to some church yourself? Is it not unfair for you to let it be surmised that you think the churches are so very lax? If you did not mean to be understood as you are, should you not be more circumspect in the use of language? In fine, would you not do more good by warning your own people not to let beams remain unmolested in their own eyes rather than look so microscopically for the motes in the eyes of the churches?

We would not like to seem too severe upon this sweet Salvation Army lassie by calling her personal attention to the story of the good man who crowded so close up to the altar of the temple and made his prayer thuswise: "I thank thee that I am not as other people are."

Life's Measure.

The sun is life-giving, and large and warm,
He shatters the rain cloud and withers the storm.
Like a god does he reign on land and sea—
But you are greater than sun to me.

The moon is soul-quieting, restful and calm,
Sweet mother of peace—tranquil donor of balm,
Sending surcease of sorrow to bound or free—
Yet you are sweeter than moon to me.

The ocean is charity—shelter to all;
Constant ever to torrent, to stream, and to fall,
For he gathers each one to his heart in the sea—
Yet you are kinder than ocean to me.

Only you are my sun, my moon and my tide,
Only you and my God fill the universe wide.
Sun darkened, moon vanished, and tide set free,
You still would be my world to me.

The Common Things

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun.—[Ecclesiastes xi, 7.

The sunshine and the gentle rain,
  The clear bird song that hails the morn,
The meadow land with flower stain,
  The swaying banners of the corn,
The breeze that whispers to the trees—
  What common, common things are these!

The broad, blue mirror of the lake
  That smiles back at the sleeping sky;
The billows, too, that leap and break
  And fling their foamy jewels high;
The silver clouds that one by one
  Toss back the lances of the sun;

The stars that blaze as jewels blaze,
  And make the world-old mystery,
While they, on their appointed ways,
  Go speeding through eternity
Across unfathomed seas of space
  On paths that we but dimly trace—

All these are common—brook and bird,
  And rose of red, and meadow green;
So common that they seem unheard,
  So common that they seem unseen,
And yet there is no day or night
  But borrows all of their delight.

No common thing is held apart
  From us, or pent with lock and key,
But in the goodness of His heart
  They all are made for you and me.
It always seems God loves the best
  The things He makes the commonest.

Fourteen Mistakes of Life.

Judge Rentoul, in an amusing speech to members of the Bartholomew Club at Anderton's Hotel last night, gave the following list of the "fourteen mistakes of life"—remarking that he had committed every one of them again and again:

To attempt to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and expect everybody to conform to it.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to alleviate if we can all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality when it is that within which makes the man.—[London Leader.

Dakota Distances.

I was talking with a Dakotan the other day. "Speaking of farms," he said, "we have some sizeable farms out in Dakota. Yes, sir, I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow till fall. Then he turned around and harvested back."

"Wonderful!" said I.

"On our Dakota farms," he went on, "it's the usual thing to send young married couples out to milk the cows. Their children bring back the milk."

"Wonderful!" I repeated.

"Once," he said, "I saw a Dakota farmer's family prostrated with grief. The women were weeping, the dogs were barking, the children were squalling and the tears ran down the farmer's cheeks as he hitched up his twenty-mule tehm and drove off."

"Where was he going?" said I.

"He was going half-way across the farm to feed the pigs."

"Did he ever get back?" I asked.

"It isn't time for him yet," was the reply.—[Housekeeper.

China's New Constitution. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE CELESTIALS.

HOW THEY ARE PREPARING TO GOVERN THEMSELVES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PEKING.—Wonder of wonders! The despotic empire of China is to become a constitutional monarchy. It is to have a national parliament and provincial assemblies—its people are to make their own laws and to learn to govern themselves. The edicts to this effect were sent forth more than a year ago by the great Empress Dowager. Before that, Yuan Shih Kai was brought to Peking to aid in the movement, and Tuan Fang and other eminent Chinese officials were sent to Europe to study modern methods of government and to prepare an up-to-date scheme for China. In August, 1908, upon the basis of their report, an edict was published outlining the plan by which China might have a new constitution and a national parliament eight years from now.

Three of China's constitutional reformers, Li Hung Chang, Chang-Chi-Tung and Yuan Shih-Kai.

Chinese college students. Officials of the future

Undesirable citizens.

Since then, the Chinese have been studying parliamentary law and preparing themselves for self-government. They have organized debating societies in every part of the empire, and they are now discussing the chief features of western civilization. Many of the governors have established schools for this purpose and are educating their subjects along constitutional lines. The viceroy of Nanking, who rules about 100,000,000 on the lower Yang-tse-Kiang, has appointed lecturers, who are giving nightly talks on modern constitutional government, and many of the cities of his dominion have assemblies where the people come together every week to discuss what they shall do when allowed to vote.

The same movement is going on here in North China. Tientsin has its constitutional debating societies. It has organized municipal councils and the city fathers are attending night schools. The same is true of Hankow and other places farther west, as well as of Canton and the other big centers of the south. Indeed, this whole nation is in the throes of an intellectual and social revolution; and that mighty body politic, which we know as the Celestial Kingdom is rejuvenating its soul.

But let me tell you about this constitutional movement. There is nothing like it in history. The rulers of one-fourth of the world suddenly resolve to give up their power and allow their subjects to govern themselves. They lay out the scheme in cold blood and inaugurate it without a revolution. It is not a spasmodic effort, but a progressive movement which will take almost a decade. It is to be started at once in every part of the empire, and is so systematically planned that it will fit these 400 almond-eyed millions to make their own laws and to practically control their own government.

The story of the movement is interesting. It began during the war with Japan, when the giant of modern progress, in the person of the Mikado, drew back his mailed fist and swatted the sleeping nation in the eye. It grew as the European powers stole piece after piece of Chinese property along the seacoast, and it was already strong when the Boxers rose in rebellion, and the armies of the west caused the flight of the Empress Dowager from Peking. The humiliation of China in being forced to kotow to Germany for the killing of Baron Ketteler was a strong push toward its modernization. The victory of the Japanese over the Russians was another, and now the common people, the gentry and the officials are awake to the need of a change. The yellow giantess is sleeping no longer. She has pulled her dry bones together and has sprung from her couch with her almond eyes open. She is thoroughly aroused, and, with her great soul—for great the soul of China really is—she is casting about to find "where she is at," and how she shall take her mighty part in the work of the world.

The Constitutional Programme.

The plan for the reorganization of China was discussed in connection with Li Hung Chang before his death. It was finally laid out by the great Dowager, assisted by Yuan Shih Kai, Chang Chi Tung and other leading officials. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, had to do with it, and nearly every governor and viceroy sent in suggestions and advice in the form of memorials. The plans brought back by Tuan Fang and his associates from Europe were thoroughly studied, and a scheme of local, provincial and national government was laid out. This was first put forth in the edicts of the Empress Dowager in August, 1908, and the people at once began to put them into action. The work was proceeding in every province at the time of the deaths of the great Dowager and Emperor last November, and one of the first proclamations of the new administration was that these constitutional reforms should be still carried on. The Prince Regent has announced himself in favor of them, and is most active in their support.

The programme now in force extends over nine years. The first year is devoted to the preparation of the people for the provincial assemblies by viceroys and governors, including the opening of schools for the studying of self-government in the cities, market towns and villages.

During the second year, members are to be elected to the provincial assemblies, and in the third they are to be organized and in working order.

By the fourth year there will be a new code of laws and new courts, and in the fifth a new system of taxation will be enforced.

The sixth year continues the preparation of the people for the national parliament, and during the seventh the reorganization of the government revenues and expenditures will be taken up.

The year following, the officials will begin to consider the imperial household expenses; they will establish a judicial bureau and will begin to issue certificates.

In the ninth year the imperial finally enforced and the imperial session here at Peking.

The New China.

This is the bare outline of but a few provisions. The scheme is elaborate for a thorough reorganization There is one great branch devoted to the courts, and this includes the schools in every great city and at all itals.

Another branch is devoted to the ern army, the steps of growth going year, and a third deals with education organization of a system of schools compulsory.

It is the same with the changes nues and taxation. Everything is end China will be as far advanced will have all the government advan tions.

The Schools and the Constitution.

Take, for instance, the plan laid school system. The year 1908 was the composition of easy text-books This year the text-books are being laws have gone forth that they schools. At the same time, modern started in all the large cities. Next gramme is to be pushed, and by 1912 will be a public school in every town. Today the proportion of Chinese and write is exceedingly low. Who May Vote in China.

The new constitution is rigid as to of voters. All elections are to be by rality shall elect. All voters must trict for more than one year. They read and write, and must have their blemished. The franchise is not given character nor to opium users. It is and criminals, and there are certain whose members will not be allowed polls. In general, any Chinese will franchise, provided he has the and any boy may hope to become a ment and to have part in the government

From these provisions it would parliament would have little real be remembered that in both Germany force of public opinion is such that to follow it. This will be the same new constitution. A Mender of Saints.

LADISLADO MEZA, QUAINT WOOD-CARVER OF SAN LUIS REY.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN I first saw him, he was leaning lazily against a crumbling pillar at the far end of the arched cloister, his arms folded, the brim of his sombrero dipped over his eyes. Like the old Mission and the valley deep in the hush of the golden afternoon, he seemed to be asleep. But I was glad to see him. At least, he was alive. Nothing else was. Once a cowled friar had flitted out from the shadows into the sunlight. But he had shuffled with sandaled feet quickly across the road to disappear beyond the garden wall. At 3, an unseen monk tolled a bell. Some children came by twos and threes over the yellow stubble fields dotted with golden heaps of barley hay, let themselves through the wicket by the corner of the graveyard, and went in to receive instructions for first communion—odd little folk with olive skin and big, submissive, trustful Spanish eyes. A lone meadow lark quit her joyous tune down by the ruined gateway. And the Mission, the valley, all the world, fell fast asleep. So I was glad to see the dozing figure under the cloister arch, when I came from a curious contemplation of the graves of many little children close to the wicket—infancy sleeping in the cradle of antiquity. Time seemed to have tucked away this exquisite forgotten corner of the world under the dreamy folds of eternity. Sight of a living being broke the spell.

MEZA AT WORK.

He proved to be a handsome fellow somewhere along in the thirties. Latin to the tips of his sensitive yellow fingers and the ends of his jet-black hair. Also about the mobile responsive face lurked the traces of romance and visions. His white teeth gleamed as he gave me the smile of childlike salutation. And ah, yes, he could tell me much about the Mission, he declared proudly, about all the missions, in fact, since he had worked for the monks for fourteen years.

"Worked at what?" I asked, warming to him and greatly delighting him by speaking in Spanish.

"Mending the poor saints—restoring the statues," he replied. And I warmed to him still more, an artist and with a metier so quaint. I looked at him. The mender of saints struck me as a pathetic anachronism in these iconoclastic days. Nor without a certain note of something touchingly fine—this young wood carver's effort to revamp the fading faith of his fathers. And goodness knows the shrines of such faith as had these brave old padres need now to be refurbished.

"If you have the time," pleaded he, now no longer asleep, but awake at the urge of his art, "I'd like to show you some of my work."

Time? Just then I had nothing but time. A long afternoon passed amid the shadows of these old missions tends to impress one with the belief that hurry is blasphemy. Of eternity alone do the mission bells speak. So I followed him hungrily to his little vine-clad hut, a flimsy modern lean-to nestled against the ancient solidity of an adobe wall.

"And your name?" inquired I when he began to rummage among the litter on the floor for specimens of his work.

"Meza—Ladislado Meza," he answered; "and I am own brother to one of the monks here at San Luis Rey, a priest, too, and no mere friar!" Then he showed me a crucifix upon which he was at work. The face of the dying Savior was wonderfully well done; a miracle of patient suffering, of triumphant love and pity. But what impressed me most was the anatomical realism of the Figure. Even the back, which of course would not be seen once the Corpus was fastened to the cross, betrayed remarkable fidelity to the human form—every muscle of the emaciated pain-racked form was perfectly portrayed—no less than the scrupulous care of the young sculptor.

"Ah," he exclaimed when I mentioned this fact, "I spent four years in an academy of art."

After showing me a number of unfinished studies—one of these a beautiful head of a San Luis Rey girl—Meza turned the talk from his own original work to that which evidently interests him much more—the restoration of the statues of the saints at the missions.

"You know," he began as I looked over his collection of photographs, "that after our missions were secularized, the Catalan priests did not bestow upon them the care that the padres always had. Things began to fall into decay. But it was not until the terrible times during the war with Mexico that actual ruin fell upon us."

"Yes, I know," I replied sympathetically and failing not to note how his "us" identified the mender of the poor, dilapidated saints with the pious padres who had known them in all their pristine splendor a century before. "And soldiers visited San Luis Rey, did they not, along about the time of Fremont?" I asked, to draw him out.

"Visited the Mission?" cried Ladislado. "Why, my good friend, troops were quartered here in our cloisters for over two months. The fellows amused themselves by making targets of my poor saints. That's why you'll find Saint Anthony wanting a nose, Saint Joseph minus a hand, and even Saint Louis himself with his left eye gone! That's what has kept me busy going from one mission to another for all these years—restoring the saints. And there's no end of mending to be done yet. I'm only just come from San Juan Capistrano and now they are after me to go up to San Gabriel. Devils those soldiers!"

"The statues were originally brought from Spain or Mexico, I suppose?" asked I.

"Not at all!" retorted Meza emphatically. "The books say so, but the books are wrong, as I shall prove to you." He dived down into the pile of odds and ends and fished out a bit of wood discolored by age. "See this," he said. "I cut it out of the body of San Antonio, at Capistrano. It is a piece of our native California savino wood or enebro. Smell it." He took up a carver's gouge from the table and hollowed out a shaving from the heart of the little block of wood. The odor was pungent, resinous, piney, for all the hundred years and more since it was hewn from the tree on the slopes of some California sierra.

"All the mission saints are carved from this same savino," went on Ladislado; "so they must have been done right here by some skillful lay brother. From Spain? No! No!"

"And this savino—just what sort of tree is it?" I inquired.

"Ah, that is the mystery," he sighed wistfully. "It is a kind of pine which used to grow abundantly on our mountains. But now, though I have sought for it everywhere, I can find no more. So I'm obliged to mend my poor saints with inferior woods."

"But surely," I ventured to object impiously, "there must be some explanation of this miraculous disappearance of the savino trees? Perhaps you do not know where to look."

"As to that," replied Meza convincingly, "what are we to say to explain the similar disappearance of the great quarry near Capistrano?"

"Did a stone quarry disappear, too?" I asked, trying not to seem skeptical.

"Assuredly it did," answered he. "The history tells us that the fine stone of which San Juan Capistrano—unlike most of the others, which are of adobe brick—was built came from a quarry some two leagues north of the Mission. Today no such quarry is to be seen anywhere within many leagues. These miracles often attended the labors of the padres."

It had been profanation for me to have suggested a doubt; so I let him run on with his quaint talk of the old days and of his beloved lifework of defying the ravages of time. When, at last, I had to trudge my way back to the hurry and the noise of the railway, I stopped for a wistful moment at the top of the Emich grade to get a last glimpse of the Mission. The shadows were lengthening sleepily across the valley. Far away to the eastward the mighty masses of Palomar Mountain bulked mystic and vague, while nearer and to the left the rugged skyline of Mesa Grande fretted the upper amethyst with its own nameless blue. The wheels of a hay wagon far down on the valley high road complained to the still evening of their golden burden, and as I turned to go on, three silvery taps of the Mission bell began the angelus. I could think then only of the dream of good Padre Salvierderra, in "Ramona," and of how young Ladislado Meza was doing his best to have the dream come true.

HOW THE NATION'S TREASURER INVENTED FOOTBALL HAIR.

By a Special Contributor.

LEE M'CLUNG, who entered upon his duties as United States Treasurer on the first day of November, is a young man of great promise, but his most noteworthy claim to fame, from a purely popular viewpoint, is the invention of the football hair. It was he, in fact, who first wore it.

Many remarkable achievements in this world are brought about by accident, and so it was in this instance. At about the time when the new Treasurer was an undergraduate in Yale College, the game of football, in which he earned such great distinction, began to tend toward "mass plays," which often made it necessary for players to throw themselves into the rush line head foremost. Sometimes the impact was pretty severe; and it struck McClung as a good idea to grow his hair long on the top of his head, in order that it might serve as a cushion. Others imitated him, and thus what came to be known as "football hair" took its start—though the development of long locks around the ears was a later stage of the fashion, meant to invite the attention of the gallery.

McClung was the most famous football player that ever came out of Yale. He got his training at the Exeter Academy, in New Hampshire, where he was easily the leader of the school, not only distinguishing himself at baseball and football, but also winning the championship of the academy at lawn tennis.

Later on, he was captain of one of the most successful football teams in the history of Yale. He also played on the Yale baseball team, and in his senior year was elected captain of it also. The football team included the great Heffelfinger and some other star players, but its efficiency on the field was due chiefly to McClung's abilitiy as a leader. He had a wonderful faculty for organizing and developing teamwork, bringing out all there was in every man.

One of his classmates said, the other day: "He played half-back, and was one of the most difficult men to tackle that I ever saw, wriggling through the line in a marvelous way. But his greatest feat was running in the open field—thanks mainly to his remarkable faculty for quick dodging. He had the trick of suddenly increasing his speed just as his opponent was about to tackle him, and also a way of swinging his body to one side just out of reach. I have seen many a man land on his face when he thought he had him sure, or just barely touch him with the end of his fingers. In recent years, Tad Jones came nearer McClung in this sort of cleverness than any one else I have ever known, but he did not equal him."

In his senior year at Yale, McClung was just about as fine a specimen of youthful manhood, physically speaking, as could be found. He was graduated in 1892, and is not yet 40 years of age. Hardly necessary is it to say that he is the youngest Treasurer that Uncle Sam has ever had. He is a bachelor, a man of some private fortune, very handsome, and quite as popular nowadays as when he was in college.

The new Treasurer is from Tennessee, and was born in Knoxville, his family being one of the oldest and most prominent in that city. He is a jolly sort of man, and everybody likes him. At Yale, he was chairman of the Junior Promenade Committee—which may be said to be the greatest purely social distinction attainable in the university. Incidentally, he secured the much-valued prize of election to the Skull and Bones Society, of which President Taft is a member.

After graduation from college, McClung entered the service of the St. Paul and Duluth Railroad. Five years later, he was appointed assistant to the second vice-president, with headquarters in Washington; and in March, 1902, he became assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Railroad, at Louisville. This position he resigned in December, 1904, to become Treasurer of Yale University.

During four years of his service with the St. Paul Railroad, he had worked in the accounting department, thus acquiring a pretty thorough knowledge of business finance. He was able to turn it to profitable account at Yale, where he reorganized the financial system from top to bottom, placing the whole establishment on a solid basis. His work has contributed immensely to the welfare and progress of the university during the last few years.

About two years ago, McClung traveled extensively in South America, and since then has given many lectures on that part of the world. His appointment as Treasurer of the United States came to him as a great surprise. As treasurer of Yale, he was one of the committee which received President Taft on a recent occasion when the latter paid a visit to New Haven; and, for the further reason that both were members of Skull and Bones, the two men were thrown together somewhat. Mr. Taft could not help hearing something of what Mr. McClung had done for Yale in the way of managing and reorganizing its finances, and thus undoubtedly the idea suggested itself that the former football player might make a good Treasurer of the United States.

It is the business of the United States Treasurer to take charge of all moneys belonging to the government. He receives and disburses all funds. The part of the Treasury Department of which he is chief is, as might be supposed, a very extensive business establishment in itself, so that the management of it is a problem of no small complexity. The Treasurer has charge of the Bureau of Engraving, where all the paper money is printed; the redemption of all currency is under his control; he attends to all dealings with the national banks all over the country, and all the sub-treasuries look to him for orders.

Mr. McClung's work is mainly administrative routine. He has a multitude of things to look after, in order to be sure that the machinery of the department works smoothly. From time to time, the Secretary of the Treasury calls him into consulta

I find that you need a friend, and I want you to know that you have a friend in me. God has given me many opportunities to help others, but no occasion has brought me greater happiness than this opportunity to come to your aid, when you need a friend."

Then, at the solicitation of Maj. McKinley and of the Secretary, Nathaniel Williams narrated numerous petty persecutions to which he had been subjected by the captain of the watch; among other things, the fact that he had been kept on duty all day long, the past week, on two occasions, and then required to remain on duty all night. On both of those occasions, the old man had fallen asleep on duty, and been reported for inefficiency. He was being crowded to the wall, and was friendless. He told of the loss of his fortune, and of his struggles to support his aged, invalid wife. He had begged the captain of the watch to be lenient with him, but received neither sympathy nor humane treatment.

While Mr. Williams remained there in the office of the Secretary, orders were issued for the transfer of the captain of the watch to other duty. He would have been discharged but for the fact that Mr. Williams pleaded for him, because of his wife and children who were dependent upon the brutal taskmaster. Mr. Williams also heard issued an order for a special examination, in order that he might be transferred to a clerical position. He was given a week of leave of absence in order to recruit his strength. Then, with the kindly assurance of the friendship of the Secretary and of Maj. McKinley, he bowed himself out of the office with courtly grace.

Within a week, Mr. Williams passed that special examination, was transferred to a clerkship, was advanced to a position as chief of a division, so that he was not required to do clerical work, and his salary was increased to $2000 per annum, whereas, as watchman, it had been only $720 per annum, and he would even have lost that in a very little while. He regained his health and lived ten years afterward, in comparative ease and comfort with his worthy wife. When she was called hence, he failed rapidly, and soon joined the invisible army of buried heroes of the republic. His last words were:

"God bless Maj. McKinley!"

Weeding Out Snorers.

In the long dormitories of the Stepney Union Workhouse all the pauper inmates now sleep with their heads beneath their bed clothes. It is for fear they should be caught snoring.

The Stepney guardians have ruled that a sleep disturber is a man apart, and at the workhouse the process of dividing the inmates into classes for snorers and non-snorers is now in progress. Owing to the complaints of certain inmates made to the ladies' visiting committee that some of their fellows snored in such a way as to disturb whole dormitories, it has been decided that the snorers shall be weeded out and made to sleep with deaf paupers.

An official of the institution explained yesterday how the snorers are traced. "If," he said, "an inmate complains that he cannot get his proper rest because of the snores of another, questions are asked of other inmates in that particular ward and the night attendants may be asked to keep an ear open. Should it be found that the complaint is justified, that the snorer is no mere hard breather, but a stalwart performer, he is moved to a ward where we have one or two deaf people.

"The men are the worst snorers; we have no complaints about the women. Certainly some of the old men are very noisy in their sleep, but we should not think of moving a snorer on the unconfirmed complaint of a single individual."

But the really remarkable part about the new scheme is this: though detailed evidence has been gathered about the nocturnal noises made by some inmates, each convicted snorer declares that there is some terrible mistake—since he was a baby in the cradle he has never been known to snore. There have been suggestions of a letter to the papers signed "Falsely Accused Snorers" or an appeal to Mr. John Burns.—[London Daily Mail.

Chinese Emperor's Funeral.

Father Gorio, an Italian missionary in China, contributes to the Review of Catholic Missions an article describing the funeral of the Emperor of China. The funeral lasted five days, during which the cortège covered a distance of forty-three miles from Peking to Si-Ling.

The body was inclosed in ten caskets of precious wood and carried by 120 men. It was surrounded by all the high dignitaries of the empire and followed by 5000 soldiers in red robes, who carried banners, standards, fans and other emblems. Then followed a long line of camels and white horses covered with yellow cloths, the imperial color, and finally a multitude of officials.

The cortège proceeded in silence. The priests recited prayers in a whisper and scattered with both hands disks of white silk paper, a symbol of the money used by the deceased in heaven, which gave the impression of falling snow. Two palanquins loaded with caskets of gold containing the Emperor's clothes and jewels, which were to be burned on the grave, closed the procession, which, Father Gorio says, was witnessed by 500,000 persons.

PIES FOR PROFIT.

HOW ONE FACTORY, BY IMPROVED METHODS, SOLVED THE PROBLEM OF BAKERS.

Not long ago the bakers of this country had a convention at which the subject of one of the many edifying papers read wis "Piemaking for Prof ." It was delivered by no less a personage than the president of the bakers' association—for the simple reason that he couldn't get anybody else to do it.

He declared that he had sent an urgent invitation to pretty nearly all the pie bakers in the United States to tackle the subject, but every one of them had replied that as he didn't know how to make a profit at pie baking, he must respectfully decline the invitation.

President Hubig—that is his name—thereupon decided to find a profit in pies somewhere. He started his hunt in the East, but was disappointed. He found pies made there as they were fifteen years ago.

"Then," said he to the bakers, according to the Baker's Weekly, "we came to a modern bakery in the West! There we saw machines that wash 2500 plates in a jiffy, sterilize and dry them before sending them down to be used gain. We go to the apple-paring room. Clean, white-gowned women paring, slicing and quartering the apples by machinery. Two women pare as high as twelve to fourteen bushels a day, sometimes twenty bushels, which under the old method would take twelve or fifteen women.

"Further along, we see shining copper kettles heated by steam from the boilers to stew the fruit. At the first bakery they did not stew the fruit. In this modern bakery they stew it and then add water, 50 per cent. as much water as fruit. They take at least 75 per cent. as much sugar as fruit, and in this way they cannot help making money.

"Next we go into the sifting-room and flour-blending-room. This is all done by machinery of course. From there we go into the bake shop. You see moving machinery there, continually moving machinery, with pies on every cup passed before you, the bakers simply directing the efforts of the machines to make these pies.

"Every baker gowned in white, white cap, white coat and white trousers, absolutely clean. The place was well lighted—you could see to read a newspaper in any corner. The floors were swept and scrubbed clean, and everything as bright and clean as it possibly could be. The sanitary conditions were absolutely perfect.

"They were making about thirty-one pies a minute. The proprietor told me that to make the same number of pies before he had these machines would have required from eighty to a hundred bakers, and every one of them would have to be an expert at rolling, as all the rolling was necessarily done by hand. He said it would take something like sixteen or eighteen men to turn out one-tenth as many pies as they were making then.

"There is one machine there about five feet long that the proprietor told me put eighteen men that formerly trimmed off pies out of work. I asked him how much he paid these men, and he said $14 a week. We pass from the manufacturing end of this shop to the baking end, where we find a rotary oven that one man with experience can operate.

"These ovens have a capacity of 1000 pies an hour. The rotary oven of the newer type, compared with the old patent oven, has four times the capacity. We passed to the shipping-room, where the pies are pushed upon trucks and distributed. Two men handle at least 30,000 pies every night, distributing them for the wagons.

"We go from there to see the toilet-rooms and dressing-rooms for the employés. Everything is white enamel. Every baker, every driver, every employé of the firm has his own double locker, one for his street clothes and the other for his working clothes. They have their shower baths, tub baths and everything necessary. The proprietor tells me his place is always open for visitors, who will be shown through by a guide."

Our Time of Peace.

My Nancy, you are never still,
  Your little tongue keeps chattering,
Your little laugh rings clear and shrill,
  Your little feet go pattering;
That with the noise, my dearest heart,
I think my head will split apart.

Soon, since I'm one who, dear, on you
  But not on noise and panic dotes,
I take you up to hear untrue,
  But tranquilizing anecdotes—
Then what a magic world and sweet,
Through which we pass with lingering feet!

Pink dromedaries play with kings,
  And dragons of the fiery sort
Cleave through the air on brazen wings,
  Or to the palace spire resort
With flaming maws to terrify,
As dragons will, the passers-by.

How gallant is Prince Fortunate,
  How terrible the ogre is,
How just the end decreed by fate
  For all his crimes and rogueries,
And oh! the nameless joy to stand
Within the bounds of fairyland!

What revels as the fairies come!
  The gnomes and elves play many tricks;
In listening rapture you are dumb;
  And, as for your progenitrix,
She blesses my inventive skill
That keeps our little Nancy still.

Women in Limelight.

POLITICS THE CRAZE OF ENGLISH SOCIETY LADIES.

By a Special Contributor.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Throughout the United Kingdom politics are at the moment the absorbing attraction, and to women they mean as much, if not more, than to men. That element of intrigue which they promise goes straight to the heart of ambitious women.

It has been said by a cynic with some truth that it is not patriotism which inspires in women this enthusiasm for the country's welfare. Their enemies insist it is the love of power and position which the modern woman craves before all things. A political position, be it merely that of a county councillor, pushes a man into the public eye and incidentally his wife. Women, whether they be English or Americans, adore a man who is discussed by the public. The political man in England has in recent years cut out absolutely the soldier the adored of the past, the professional man and the man of letters; as well as the knight errant and the genius.

Besides, it is the fashion to be brainy. And the woman who takes an active interest in politics is supposed to be brainy.

Wherever British and Anglo-American women of the smart set are this autumn, they are planning and plotting directly or indirectly in the interests of some man who means to be to the fore when the dissolution of Parliament takes place. They are preparing speeches to be used in his cause, or designing frocks wherewith to cajole the elector. In their enthusiasm they are undergoing "rest" cures, taking sun baths and swallowing unpleasant mineral waters; they are requisitioning the beauty specialist and the masseuse so that when the day of battle comes they may go forth in all their war paint glorified and resplendent.

If the Liberal party is to return to power, it will be due to the exertions of the extraordinarily large number of beautiful and clever American women who are the wives of its leaders. In years gone by, this party used to be as noted for the dowdiness of its womankind as it is framed today for their brilliancy. Mrs. "Lulu" Harcourt is one of those who is determined to enter into the fight with enthusiasm. Every one knows that she has done much to "make" Lulu. She has sworn to keep the Liberals in power, and as she has good looks, exquisite frocks and that most essential of all elements for electioneering purposes, money, to back her, she is in a position to do much.

More enthusiastic still in the interests of the present government is Lady Granard, whose Lavender League will shortly be formed. This league is to be based on the same lines as the Primrose League, which works in the cause of the Conservatives. The Countess, who has had a series of lessons in elocution, is a bright and humorous speaker, though so far her platform experiences have been confined to the opening of bazaars and charity fetes. But she is badly bitten with the desire to shine in oratory, and before all she is looking forward to her experiences as a canvasser.

It would pay any government to give Mrs. George Cornwallis West a permanent income to become its professional advocate. She has been known to turn rabid Tories into warm Whigs, rampant Unionists into genial Home Rulers. Several of the present ministers are imploring Mrs. West not to leave England for her much-discussed lecturing tour in the States until the fate of the present government is decided. The story goes that Lloyd George has threatened to pass a special law compelling her not to desert England until next spring. "We should be lost, Mrs. West—simply lost without you," he is reported to have said.

Mrs. West has trained and found an apt pupil in her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Winston Churchill. That lady threatens to outrival her preceptress. She has a strong individuality and the power of making herself felt almost before she opens her lips. Mrs. Churchill intends to give a succession of political "at homes" at her house in Eccleston Square, directly society returns to town before Christmas. Winston wants to be Prime Minister some day, and his mother and his wife will, if he succeeds, have as much to do with the achievement as himself. These two women understand him perfectly. They know that if they want to make him perfectly happy, he must be made to feel that he is the greatest man of the age. And they impress it upon him for all they are worth. It is said they and that Mrs. Winston has made all the great statesmen of the pa in her husband all the best chanc

A Week in Virginia.

Visit at a Country House in the Old Dominion.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was 7 o'clock when the long orange-colored train whisked into Z—— and we were met on the platform by Mr. and Mrs. T., the latter carrying her snowy pet dog, almost invisible in the folds of her white coat. Behind them were servants, who quickly loaded our luggage in a cart, while my nurse and children were put in a smart little surrey and our host drove his wife and me in a delightful open trap. Five miles thus in the dark, until we sighted the lighted oval-topped door of Hillhurst, out of which poured a perfect avalanche of people, colored servants and dogs! There was G., looking charming in his riding clothes; William, the young son of the house and his friend Fitzhugh; Mrs. C., J.'s delightful mother, and Senator and Mrs. B. from Washington, a smart young married couple. The heartiest among the hearty welcomes came from "Uncle Willis," a dear old bearded darky of the ante-bellum school.

We were shown our rooms, and after getting rid of the habitual traveler's dust, there was served a most delicious hot Southern supper, one dish being sorers, a little bird soft and luscious, which is eaten entirely, bones and all. It tastes like teal duck, living on the same food, and coming from the marshes around Southern Virginia. After dinner, in the flower-scented drawing-room, we had reminiscences of the many jolly times we had had together, and then some songs by L., her ever-lovely, clear voice having grown more beautiful—so deep and rich.

This house is about a century old, and was designed by Thomas Jefferson. It is quite a perfect example of the early colonial, of red brick with four massive Corinthian stone pillars in front, from base to roof. The high unbalustraded front porch is guarded straight across by a box hedge, eight feet high by eight broad, and opening in the center for the paved walk, which is bordered on either side by another hedge, only a little less high. This extends about thirty feet from the porch, and from either end of the porch the hedge branches off into semi-circles, one toward the rear of the house, and the other to the front lawn. There, beautiful trees and grass, and beyond the gate, glimpses of alternating woods and fields, ascending to the blue mountains—oh, the mysterious depths of this Blue Ridge, sunk in the clouds!

Inside the house the first impressions are chintz, flowers and delightful white woodwork, a wide hall in the center with two rooms on either side. The hall is painted to represent marble, the old English cool idea. The drawing-room is calsomined in a very soft faded pink, with a plaster centerpiece, with cupids, and round the cornice, plaster fruit and flower festoons. Against these walls, which seem to breathe forth an old-world atmosphere, the gilt oval-framed pictures, the teakwood and chintz-covered furniture, a pair of gracefully-shaped black iron appliques, are all most enchanting. Back of this room is the library, lined with white open bookshelves, and charming old colored prints.

Opposite the drawing-room is the dining-room, with hand-carved oak furniture, and prints of hunting scenes. Behind this is the gun room, with large photographic copies of Greek athletic statues on the walls, also some yachting scenes, red and blue ribbons won by our host's horses and ponies. In this room are guns, tennis rackets, boots, cigars, and all sorts of sporting and mannish things. Upstairs are prettily-arranged bedrooms and comfortable baths.

After a good night's rest, we awoke to a bright Sunday morning. Having finished a late breakfast with such delicious hot breads, etc., we all drove to see the colored baptizing. In an open field, about eighty darkies, quiet, respectable and rather pathetic in appearance, were gathered around a concrete tank built in a stream. A hymn was started by a sad-toned tenor, then the thin voices of the chorus were almost like "crooning." The old minister made a sort of exhortation, and at the "I baptize thee," etc., his two assistants would plunge the fully-dressed trembling man or woman into the tank for a moment, then assist him out, all emu amid the bursting forth of another hymn. Thomas, one of the T.s' servants, would conduct the neophyte through the little group, on the edge of which waited friends with a bag of dry clothes. There was perfect reverence all through—not a critical smile from even the young men of the group, and such kindly feeling shown for one another. It was really impressive. One woman shouted: "No, I won't!" in a tragic manner. The spirit was evidently suggesting something which her weak flesh resisted. A friend fanned her, and she became calm. One or two, after the immersion, sang "Hallelujah," but we failed to see any wild emotion, such as negroes often show when they "get religion."

We white women were all touched. I doubt if the men were, and an interesting study apart from the negro one, was the English coachman. L., in her pious way, tried to draw him a little moral, but Shipway said he had "seen the same sort of 'effecting' things at Coney Island!" Our host jokingly remarked that the only things moving him were qualms for his poultry, but I am sure that the generous greenback he gave to the deacon made the colored folk hesitate about molesting the barnyard. As we drove off, the bell of the little church close by was ringing, and it seems that after the service there the negroes have a grand feast, and I fear that by midnight, the ecstatic feelings have worn away, and that some chickens and mint juleps have adorned their board.

We had a cold luncheon served after a manner by the French maid, as all but the white servants had been given holiday. Afterward we walked to the adjoining lands, where the T.s are building a large colonial house on the mountainside. The view of the valley is like Switzerland, peaceful crazy-quilted fields with grazing sheep, and beyond the glorious mountains. Back of the new house are groves of pines and then a virgin forest, with immense trees and full of game. This latter is to be kept as a preserve. The environs of the house are to be made very beautiful, and there will be a tea house among the pines, a tennis court, etc. The stables and kitchen gardens are to be at the foot of the mountain, quite far from the house. In the forest is a wonderful spring, the water of which the T.s intend to have bottled and put on the market.

Poor J. had to leave at 4 the next morning for a business engagement in Washington. L., the devoted little wife she is, got up and attended herself to his breakfast. It poured all day, but who cares in a house of these resources! I spent part of the morning in my room, directing the arrangement of my own traveling lares and penates, wrote some letters, and after the big 2-o'clock dinner, we women read and gossiped until tea-time.

We had some fresh figs from the garden, and "Uncle Willis," when he brought in an armful of wood for the cosy fire, told us the drawing-room was "full of blooms" (we being the blooms.) In the evening, we had bridge and the phonograph—but not together! Tuesday dawned crisp and autumny, and the air continued so during the rest of my visit. The week sped quickly, with quiet walks in the morning, with many dogs stirring up an occasional rabbit or partridge, through the daisy-spotted fields, past the gurgling brooks; or horseback rides on the thoroughbred hunters through the autumn woods, and nut gatherings, tennis or target shooting.

Afternoons, if we were not kept at home by callers we drove to the neighboring places to call, and such beautiful homes they are, and so smartly kept!

At dusk, the bull bats would come sweeping over the lawn, and J. made every shot good, and the birds simply hailed on the ground. He is a splendid shot, and also little William, aged 14, made a lot of them fall.

One evening, the L.s came, and we had a coon hunt. At 9 o'clock, three white men, with two hounds leashed together, an ax and a horn, all the men carrying lanterns, led the way over the fields into the forest on the T.s' mountain. When we reached the woods, the dogs were let loose, and we followed their trail. Finding a hole in the ground, they scratched and barked furiously. The guides put a stick into it, and finding some hair on the tip of the stick, knew that a raccoon or an opossum was there. Not succeeding in getting the animal out, the dogs were started on another trail. They found a young opossum in a tree. Then furious barking, and the poor little beast suspended itself by its tail to the end of a limb, where Charlie L. caught it. The dogs leaped, and nearly tore his hand, but he deftly popped the animal into a bag. We found a "coon" further on, in a huge chestnut, but G. would not allow the huntsman to hew the tree in order to get it. These men's shrill whoop, the blowing of the horn, and the thick, dark woods, with moonlight showing only occasionally, made the scene weird, but it was full of charm, and I wished I had been born an Indian who lives always in such a sylvan spot. It was very rough walking and arduous work pushing our way through the underbrush, and we women suggested going back home. The men looked disappointed, but were self-sacrificing, and turned back. Our occasional rest on a fallen tree was delightful. One got very warm in the woods, though it had been quite cold on starting out. Emerging from the forest, we found the moon had set, but the starlit dome was beautiful. The grass was wet in the fields, and when we reached the house at 12:30 a.m., it was most pleasant to find a huge crackling fire in the drawing-room, with the home dogs lying near the hearth, and L. in a graceful tea gown ready to preside over a table groaning under sandwiches, mint juleps, etc.

Some evenings we would take moonlight rides. This is a great hunting country, the home of a noted hunting club, but it was not yet the season, the underbrush being still too high. Everybody keeps thoroughbreds, and many of the women are expert riders.

Sunday, the last evening of our visit, was not the least enjoyable, when hymns were sung, L. leading in her exquisite voice. The next day I left for St. Louis, made rested and happier by this charming glimpse of "ole Virginia."

KATHARINE CLEMENS.

The Swallows.

Morning by morning from my bed
  I've lain and loved your flash of wing,
Or watched your younglings overhead
  By hundreds on the long wires swing.

Seen 'neath my eaves small clinging feet,
  Bright heads turned charmingly aside,
And heard nest twitterings clear and sweet;
  Or, suddenly, you've circled wide,

As from the village lane below
  A lad flung up his cap at you,
And off with small bright cries you'd go,
  Round elms and spire to wheel anew.

But, wakening with this morning's sun,
  Slowly I missed a something, till,
Heartsick, I knew the songs were done;
  The little street was strangely still.

Summer and you were gone, and I—
  A moment's mist before my pane—
Wished you Goodspeed, and gratefully
  Prayed I might greet your wings again.

EXPLORERS WHO HAVE WON MOUNTAIN-CLIMBING LAURELS.

By a Special Contributor.

TO the perilous art of mountain climbing public interest is now drawn by the Cook-Barrill dispute over Mount McKinley and the new world record of 24,600 feet just attained by the Duke of the Abruzzi.

Alpinism was still an unknown art at the close of our revolution, for it did not have its birth until 1786, when Balmat and Paccard stirred Europe by scaling the top of Mont Blanc, the loftiest of the Alps. But this first record ascent appears small alongside the heights attained by later cragsmen. And the extent to which interest in this class of exploration has spread may be measured by the membership of the mountain-climbing clubs, which in Europe alone amounts to over 100,000 men and women. In our own country there are several thousand enrolled in similar organizations, notably the American Alpine Club, Philadelphia; the Appalachian Mountain Club, Boston; the Sierra Club, San Francisco; the Mount Whitney Club of California, and the Mazamas of Portland, Or. Our northern neighbor also has its Canadian Alpine Club. All of these societies, here and abroad, contain expert climbers.

The New "Farthest Up."

The new "farthest up" record, just earned by the Duke of the Abruzzi is a tremendous honor, and whoever is awarded the laurels for arctic glory—Cook or Peary—must vie with this royal Italian for rank as the chief explorer of our generation. The altitude of 24,600 feet which he has just attained in the Himalayas means a height of four and two-thirds miles, whereas Mont Blanc reaches to less than three. The mountain upon which the new record was made is Bride Peak, one of the northwestern Himalayas, in the neighborhood of Mount Godwin-Austin, which latter is the second highest summit of the world. The region is remote and imperfectly surveyed, and the difficulties of approach must be added to those of ascent. It was Abruzzi who held the North American record, which Dr. Cook claims to have broken by climbing Mount McKinley two years ago. This the Duke earned in 1897 by climbing to the summit of our Mount St. Elias, in Alaska, which reaches 18,024 feet. Four unsuccessful attempts had been made to scale this summit before Abruzzi attempted it. To reach it he had to penetrate a sub-arctic waste far from civilization, and he found its entire altitude practically above the snow line. Upon its slopes the Duke received the training which enabled him to attain his "farthest north" a few years later. Again, in 1906, Abruzzi added to his laurels by ascending fourteen of the highest summits of the Ruwenzori, that snowy source of the Nile which stands almost upon the equator. The highest of these peaks climbed by Abruzzi is about 16,815 feet, or about 1000 feet loftier than Mont Blanc. To reach the summits the Duke led an army of 220 native porters and other assistants from Victoria Nyanza 218 miles to Fort Portal, Uganda, the very end of civilization. Then he climbed the slippery hills through jungles of wild beasts to a foggy spot 12,350 feet up, where he exchanged his porters for a hardier lot. After ascending all of the higher peaks, he named the two loftiest Margherita and Alexandra, in honor of his Queen and that of England. The expedition covered four months, and no lives were lost.

Does a Woman Rank Next?

As to who held the record which Abruzzi has just broken has been a matter of controversy even more complicated than the Peary-Cook imbroglio, and the Duke has clarified the atmosphere by taking the bone of contention away from the other disputants. The last claimant before him has been an American woman, Miss Annie Smith Peck of Providence, R. I., a graduate of the University of Michigan, who, after studying music and German in the fatherland, became the first woman student at the American school at Athens, and returned to the United States to lecture and to hold professorships in several colleges, including Smith. This indefatigable woman climbed the Matterhorn in 1895, and two years later Popocatepetl, Mexico, and Orizaba, in South America, she being the first woman to ascend the latter. After other practice climbs in the Alps, she attempted the summit of Mount Sorata, in the Andes. This was in 1903, and she took two Swiss guides with her, but the party failed to reach the top. She returned in 1904, and accompanied only by a man of limited mountain-climbing experience, reached approximately 20,500 feet, or within 600 to 800 feet of the summit. After this, she decided that a still taller Andean giant was Mount Huascaran, in Peru, and she attempted it without guides in 1906, but failed. Then last year she tried the great Huascaran again, and reached the summit, which she estimated to touch an altitude of "23,800-24,000 feet, and perhaps higher," thus giving her, she claims, "nearly or quite the world's record."

"If as seems probable, the height is 24,000 feet, I have the honor of breaking the world's record for men as well as women," adds Miss Peck, "the greatest height previously claimed being 23,800 feet, attained some years ago by W. W. Graham, in the Himalayas." But to this claim, Prof. Charles E. A Queer Old Colony.

PASSING OF AMERICA'S LARGEST SHAKER VILLAGE.

By a Special Contributor.

JUST the other day word came from Lebanon, O., that by the resignation of James Fennessey, trustee of the property owned by the little colony of Shakers at Union Village, six miles east of there, the colony will probably be abandoned and the occupants transferred to the Methodist home at Norwood, Mass.

Mr. Fennessey, word comes, is the last of the original band which settled here in 1810, and ill health causes his action. There was a movement among the members for some time past to give up the prosperous farms and the buildings, as the majority of these folk are now old and feeble. As they are not allowed to marry, the only children are those which have been adopted.

The holdings of the band are worth nearly $1,000,000. Several large buildings in the village are included. A woman appointed by the head colony at Mount Lebanon, N. Y., will take up the burden dropped by Fennessey. Her name is not known at the present time by the members here. It is said to be her intention to conform to the views of the members and abandon the colony.

Work of Anne Lee.

The Shaker society, it may need be explained in connection with this passing of the largest Shaker village in the country—and perhaps in the world—was organized by a certain Anne Lee of Manchester, who was born February 29, 1736. It is related of her that after a quiet visionary childhood she joined the so-called French Prophets, at the age of 22. These, then under the leadership of a certain Jane Wardly, trembled and shook when under the influence of religious emotion. In 1762 Anne Lee married a blacksmith, a character of no great repute. Later she secured separation from him, and, profiting by the usual marital experience, she joined the Shaker band, preaching celibacy to it, and, since its members believed that the returning Christ would be a woman, soon becoming their leader.

As is usual with new forms of religion, persecution grew apace, and the Shakers emigrated to America, landing August 1, 1774, and settling near Waterville, N. Y., where for some time they were under suspicion of being revolutionists, and consequently held in great disfavor.

Anne Lee's death on September 8, 1780, put one James Whitaker in the lead, and he held the place until 1788, when Joseph Meacham became the head. It was through him, then, that the Shakers adopted the communistic plan.

By 1870 there had come to be eighteen Shaker communities in the country, owning property assessed at $86,900. The meeting-houses of the sect already then would have held about 9000 people.

Shaker Tenets Are Interesting.

The faith and principles of the society are: (1.) A life of innocence, strict temperance and virgin purity. (2.) Love, for a consecrated and free people can have no other bonds of union. (3.) Peace, which requires all to abstain from bloodshed; from all acts of violence toward our fellow-men, from all the party contentions and politics of the world and from all the pursuits of pride and worldly ambitions. (4.) Justice to discharge all duties and equitable claims as effectually as possible. (5.) Holiness, hence the doctrine of dedicating persons, services and property to sacred uses. (6.) Goodness, by administering acts of charity and kindness and promoting light and truth among mankind. (7.) Truth, which implies fidelity, reality, sincerity and punctuality.

Of the Quaker society, of which Anne Lee was leader, it was said that "it practiced no forms and adopted no creed as rules of faith and worship," but gave itself up "to be guided entirely by the operation of the spirit of God." At times it was "exercised with singing, shouting and leaping for joy at the near prospect of salvation," and was often "agitated to shaking, running, walking the floor, members passing and repassing each other." This brought it the appellation of "Shaker."

In 1779 a peculiar religious revival at Lebanon, N. Y., gave occasion for more converts. A Kentucky revival resulted in more accessions.

Then Mother Lee's three missionaries crossed over into Ohio, arriving at Turtle Creek, near Lebanon, on March 22, 1805, where they were "spiritually led" to the home of one Malcham Worle, whose family proved their first converts in the State, and through whom the faith spread across this State and Indiana, until by the census of 1890 there came to be 2800 Shakers in the country.

Of all the settlements, however, Union Village was the largest. To visit it, one goes preferably by way of Cincinnati, a train leaving for this point at 7:40 in the morning. It is a ride of thirty miles.

Ride from Lebanon.

From Lebanon the visitor has the choice of hiring a vehicle or awaiting the bus which plies between Lebanon and Red Lion. Four miles, per mile post, from the starting point, the green turrets and white tanks and orange-hued barns of Shakertown are to be seen among the leafless trees.

Corn fields and peach orchards line the Red Lion road, where one descends this. Then there is a gray little storehouse on the left which serves as outpost of Shakertown. This is filled to overflowing with corn and grain from the near-by fields. Only a short distance from this there is a similar frame building of a dull orange color, with windows many parted as they were in the olden time. On the left looms a modern green-painted building, surmounted with a conical tower, in the center and at either end, a portico at its front, and the general outline resembling some military institute. This is known officially as the "office." A three-story white house above is the "dwelling-house" of the settlement.

Along these and on through Shakertown the road is wide and shady. A strip of lawn and a hedge of the dwarfed arbor-vitae separate the street from the cement pavement, and everywhere well-kept grass plots stretch between the various barns and houses.

Come to the office, you are admitted by a kindly sister, in hood and Shaker shawl, who ushers you into the parlor, there to await the elder of the family. Moquette carpet, upright piano, tasty scarfs and well-chosen etchings, cosy chairs and tables, book-laden; potted plants thriving under the mildness of steam-heated atmosphere, walls which rival the whitest snow-bank; these and other things give the lie to the rumors that the Shakers are poor, that communism is a failure, that the effects of civilization are thwarted by the system. One can phone from here to any part of the country, by the instruments in the hall. And there a floor of marble and carved balustrades lead to the floor above.

Own Much Land.

Round about again stretches the land of the Shakers. The Shakers themselves farm and raise the stock, but lease the greater part of the 4500-acre estate to so-called renters, who farm the land on shares. When the band first came here, a hundred years ago, log cabins were erected about which the remodelings and reconstructions have taken place. The office still has within its walls frameworks set up in 1810, while the laundry across the road rests upon timbers hewn eighty-eight years ago. Over the highway there lies also the old meeting-house, now unused, and a tiny white schoolhouse, in which a district teacher bends the Shaker twig into the way it should incline.

The local estate is in charge of elders, appointed by the Rev. Joseph R. Stingerband, with the advice of Eldress Mary Gas and Elizabeth Dowinger and in conjunction with the eastern ministry, whose headquarters is in the Empire State.

Two of the four trustees are always women, and the quartette deals with all the temporal business of the clan.

Ever and always it looks to maintaining the basic principles, celibacy and communism.

To city visitors the gentle yea and nay of the Shaker are sweet music. The population of the town is necessarily transient, the novitiates now having no stated term of probation, but being asked to sign the covenant when deemed worthy thereof. Religious services are held on Sundays, national and ecclesiastical holidays and at Yuletide a Christmas tree is decked for the little ones.

Machinery Outstrides Weavers.

Modern machinery has caused the Shakers to close their woolen mills, and the once famous Shaker blankets, yarns and clothing are a thing of the past.

The women of the community perform all the household work, no hired help being engaged inside the dwellings, and in the laundry-house there are mechanical washers and wringers, dozens of the most modern clothes driers, vats of soft soap and a varied accumulations of flat irons. The water used in the settlement is obtained from cisterns.

In the course of our visit to Shakertown we were introduced to one Leo Goepper, a kindly old man who has been a Shaker for twenty-five years, and spent an hour in his company, gathering the following interesting data from his talk:

Something like forty years ago there were 200 people in this settlement, but today the population is between thirty and forty. The men in the community keep the place in repair and perform the grosser work.

The community rises at 5 in the morning, prepares its respective room and assembles for breakfast at 6; the men and the women eating in the same room, but at separate tables. During the morning, each person has his particular duties, the women caring for the sick and preparing the food. Dinner is ready at noon, and prior thereto the Shakers formerly knelt in prayer, but this custom has since been abolished.

Elders Given Lead.

The elders enter first, the others following in point of age. At the close of the meal, the assemblage kneels, then steps aside to allow the elders to pass out, after which they follow. The afternoon is spent in performing chores, reading and the like until 6 (or 5:30 in the winter,) when supper is served. At 8 o'clock the curfew rings, and, while they need not necessarily retire, all good Shakers are then due in their separate chambers.

Service is held on Sundays at 9:30, there being no fixed minister, and each person is supposed to tell his religious experiences as moved by the spirit to do so.

Most of the buildings, with the exception of the office, were built by the Shakers themselves. When Mr. Goepper came here, Isaac Beal was the elder, and later one Joseph Yusington, who was also deacon—that is, the person who assigns to individuals their respective duties and furnishes their quota of clothing and necessities—succeeding to that dignity. The elders hold office as long as warranted by comfort and ability, and are annually visited by the New York ministry.

The village was formed by a donation of property by Lebanon revivalists in 1799, and since then much has been purchased.

In the Shaker graveyard there are no monuments, each mound being numbered and a record kept of it, with ivy and evergreen to cover the departed.

At the bier of the deceased, there are songs and eulogies by his friends, the cortege winds to the burying-ground, and when the grave is all but filled in, the parting benediction is given.

FELIX J. KOCH.

Metchnikoff's Monkeys.

THE EXPENSIVE COLONY KEPT BY PASTEUR INSTITUTE.

By a Special Contributor.

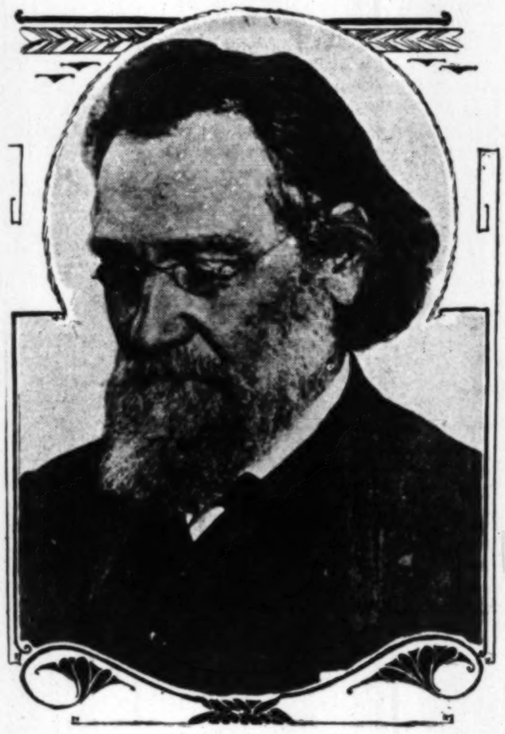
ON a bright Sunday morning of last August, the Vaugirard quarter of Paris was astonished by a big, handsome, well-fed and phenomenally intelligent young ape, careering through the trees of the Avenue and dashing down in short excursions to the sidewalk.

At the Brewery of Hope, she swiped the sandwich of a cattle broker; at the Patisserie of the Future, she got two cream puffs and the lady cashier's lace handkerchief; and at the Café of Commerce she began gobbling the kidneys-and-mushrooms of an engaged couple—amid apologetic jibberings, as if to say:

"I really needed a change of diet!"

A respectable old gentleman puffed in. "Ten francs to catch me that young anthropoid!" A handsome matron pushed past him. "Twenty francs for that chimpanzee!" Behind them the crowd surged. "I saw it first!" "A young orang-outang!" "Let the poor thing be!" "She's hunting a new home!" "Silence! We'll see which of us she'll come to!"

So they wrangled, Parisians being crazy for pets, and monkeys running loose being legally "wild animals," the property of who can catch them. So no one saw two men in linen dusters who pushed toward the table; but the monkey saw them, squawking angry. "Poor thing! I'll protect you," said the engaged girl; but just as she reached out, a voice cried:



ELIE METCHNIKOFF.

"Do not touch that monkey. It is loaded!"

At the same instant, one of the men of the linen dusters deftly threw a net over Melanie and the kidneys and fried potatoes, now become a frantic mix-up, and explaining:

"It is cholera! Tuberculosis! Pest! The monk is full of microbes from the Pasteur Institute——!"

The crowd dashed into the street, upsetting tables, smashing crockery; the engaged girl let out a scream and fainted; the café proprietor and waiters disappeared, and the Pasteur man, as he helped bring the girl to, explained: "I'll pay your bill. Have no fear. I exaggerated, to get hold of Melanie, who is superbly healthy, free from any taint, and, just because of that, worth $10,000 to the institute, as the bud—if not the flower—of a great experiment!"

Yes, it was Melanie, sister of Hippolyte and Arthur, lucky members of the extraordinary monkey colony of Metchnikoff, at the Pasteur Institute; but if the Vaugirard crowd scattered at a word, it was not without reason; instead of Melanie, it might easily have been a cousin full of vicious microbes, of whom Vaugirard knows vaguely, ignorantly fearing! Really, it is astonishing that the crowd did not suspect the institute, the moment it saw a stray monkey.

World's Most Precious Monks.

Yet, as the man in the duster said, they are, one and all, the most precious monks in the world. During the past fifteen years, and particularly since the magnificent Osiris bequest of 11,000,000 francs, Prof. Metchnikoff and Roux have maintained at the institute the most expensive anthropoid menagerie it is possible to imagine. Wild-animal dealers from Hamburg to Batavia have a standing order for vigorous and healthy chimpanzees, orang-outangs and young gorillas; and these not sufficing, the institute has its agents in many an obscure port of Borneo, Sumatra and the Congo. It has even sent out expeditions of its own to gather up the precious apes, whose blood globules are the same as those of man.

In a section of the Pasteur Institute to which outsiders never penetrate, there is a veritable jungle under glass. In a tepid atmosphere, heavy with the rank vegetation of palms, reeds and mosses, amid the perfume of jungle flowers and under blue-green glass to cast a tropical shade, a hundred anthropoids who are "not working" live in luxury and pleasure.

Fifty wired-off jungle sections maintain the illusion of society and congenial surroundings for the "workers." Even when plumb-full of microbes, they are innocently, ignorantly happy. They do not reflect that they are struggling with man's most vile blood disease, or with tuberculosis. It is even part of their "work" to know family joys, to revel in gregarious delights. They have swings and see-saws. They build their playhouses in dark corners. They delight in tropical fruits, intensive feeding to keep up their fat and tone, cooked meats with sauces, cakes and biscuits, puddings—even puddings!

This secret jungle, hidden in mid-Paris, is a microcosmos. As in the great world, many are called, but few are chosen; there are lucky and unlucky monkeys in the Metchnikoff menagerie. While from the nature of the investigations, vivisection does not come their way, their lots in life are varied.

Last of His Family.

Let me introduce you to Arthur.

This amiable young chimpanzee, who gets his serum-hypodermic regularly, has a deplorable family history. His grandparents, parents, brothers, sisters and cousins all died from tuberculosis: because phthisis makes veritable hecatombs in the world of monkeys, as in that of men. Arthur alone remains.

And Arthur is superb. His appetite is voracious, his forces marvelous. He is a hickey monk. All the young lady chimpanzees are wild over him; and it is a shame the way he keeps them guessing. He is so flirtatious with the fair and pugnacious with the brave that he is often isolated—until isolation makes him so furious that his life is endangered. He throws himself against his bars, bangs his head upon the floor—and even bluffs at suicide by refusing food!

Arthur's magnificent condition is entirely due to the injection of a tuberculosis serum prepared by Profs. Vallée and Roux. Vallée, of the veterinary school of Alfort, was the first to insist that tuberculosis is born on the intestines and not the lungs. The serum that he and Prof. Roux are working on is still a secret.

In this realm, Arthur is a triumph against tuberculosis. By rights, he ought to be dead of it long ago. His family history is deplorable. His resistance ought to be nil. He must have taken in the toxine with his mother's milk. Yet here he is, the huskiest of anthropoids!

Hippolyte, his cousin, is similarly a near-triumph over that "blood disease" whose name is not mentioned in polite society. Hippolyte is supposed to be immune, perhaps much more. It may be that his blood contains the secret of man's liberation from the hateful malady. Another set of interesting personalities are being experimented on in connection with him—Ludovic II, Berthe III, Paulus, Georgette, their actual condition being kept a mystery.

They are man's poor relations; and this is the secret of their high place in the Pasteur Institute. Guinea pigs and rats are good for certain experiments, even as high as the investigation of cancer. So tiny a beast as the meat maggot is good for studying the action of microbes on nutrition. Horses and calves make nearly perfect cultivators of vaccines and serums. But these monkeys have what no other animal possesses—the blood globules of man.

Indentification of Blood.

It is part of a great discovery—whose complications I omit; suffice to say this is how they distinguish whether a dry bloodstain is human or not. They inject human blood into a living horse, dog or sheep. Some time after, they bleed the animal, and prepare a serum, clear, limpid, free from blood globules. Then they drop into this serum a very few drops of human serum. If it immediately forms a precipitate, they know that their test serum is sufficiently active. It is ready.

Have you a stain of dry blood on a knife handle? Carefully dissolve it in physiological water and pour it into a tube containing the test serum. If it forms a precipitate, the stain is really human blood. Apart from its police value—which is merely secondary—the discovery is far-reaching beyond anything I can tell you. Among other things, it reveals the relationship between species. Test serum prepared for chickens gives a precipitate with pigeon blood also; but test serum prepared for cows refuses a precipitate with the blood of sheep or deer.

How, now, does test serum prepared for man act when you add the blood of other animals? Not one gives a precipitate—except the single group of anthropoid apes! When Gruenbaum of Liverpool made the first discovery of this extraordinary fact, he devised a proof test. Instead of a test serum for man, he made three different test serums, for chimpanzees, orang-outangs and gorillas. Interchangeably, their blood gave the precipitates. And the blood of man gave precipitates in all three!

In all this, you have the secret of the monkey jungle of the Pasteur Institute. Take the physical fact of the identity of the blood serums. Evidently, for the last investigations, the blood of the live monkey is the only substitute for the blood of the living man.

"Pathological Old Age."

Metchnikoff has never given up his pet theory of "pathological old age," in spite of absurd exaggerations in the press of the world. According to Metchnikoff the Old Testament patriarchs who died specifically "full of years" were always over 125. It may mean that they were "glad to go," having developed a comfortable "instinct of death" which ought to become as strong as the earlier instinct of living; but he kind in general evolved too brusquely to attain it.

It matters little that monkeys but such accidents are catastrophes his great worrying intellect and tim of a lot of "disharmonies"—of the great intestine.

Diabetes, gout and artero-scerosis glands getting poisoned and allowing and phenols to irrupt into the blood occasion in the great intestine— even, had not begun to get rid of, only to the digestion of grass—and long it takes evolution, normally, to organs is seen in the vermiform appen to all animals this side of the rabbit! tine is quite sufficient for our digestion.

The great intestine, from birth, ing microbes; and their toxines, gans, cause all these man-killing tive changes.

Here is, perhaps, the greatest study Metchnikoff's monkeys play a great nie, Suzette and Alphonse will never or diabetes. Their mission is to on the homestretch of the long hardening and similar degeneracies "pathological old age" for man.

To Defer Old Age.

In spite of all the exaggerations they have cost him, Metchnikoff upon his lactic microbes as the best man—and even lends his name to certain tions of them in tabloid form. Can you he must have a strong philanthropic has the millions of the Pasteur Institute ery need?

While the problem is not solved, it is Coli bacillus, for example, produces the chiefly cause the breaking-down of the mature old age;" that the Coli bacillus ery human intestine; and that the lactic unable to kill it, positively puts a stop tion of phenols.

But this is only an example. You must on faith. one-third of the necessary amount. I found it difficult to keep our secret. Our plans were entirely unknown to him. He merely knew we had kept the table well supplied.

Coming home to the evening meal, my husband remarked about our smiling faces and mysterious manner, as we looked at each other, but we had decided to finish the meal before we made any revelations. Finally, at a signal from me, Ada left the table and brought forth the bank and handed it with the key to her father. "Papa," said she, "here is our economy money; please open and count it." "Bless the child, what does she mean?" said her father. Thinking it something to please her, he took the bank and opened it. We almost held our breath as he counted it—$217.35. Two hundred dollars with what we had saved would be sufficient. "Where did this money come from?" asked my husband, not understanding in the least. We were all so eager to talk that I don't know how he ever got an explanation. We finally quieted down and answered his questions. "You may thank your children for this," I said, "as it was their suggestions and their work mainly that has made this possible. "This place shall never be sold now," said my husband when he could speak. "I got it as a speculation, but it shall always be the children's home."

We were indeed a happy family then. We knew that by a certain amount of extra work with a little sacrifice of unnecessary articles, we could do in the future as we had in the past. It gave us a wonderful feeling of independence. The property has been paid for long since and we have had many opportunities to dispose of it since the financial flurry passed away, but we could not be induced to part with it now, as it is OUR HOME.

A Ghost Story.

NOT FICTION, BUT THE REPORT OF ACTUAL EXPERIENCES.

By a Special Contributor.

THOSE who have read Bulwer Lytton's "Strange Story," and are familiar with Scandinavian ghost lore, will no doubt remember the weird "Scin Laeca," the "shining corpse" or "luminous shadow" which so persistently haunted Allen Fenwick, and probably most of those who read it put it down as a fiction from the brain of this most illustrious occult author. So thought I at one time years ago, and in the pride of my skepticism would have laughed to scorn any pretense as to its truth. But not now—for many strange experiences have come and gone since then, which have radically changed my opinion.

All fiction is based on truth, and I here take the bold stand that the truth has always corroborated fiction, however absurd the paradox may seem. In this age of progress and science, why should we use such a word as supernatural? How about Bacon? Agrippa? and Shakespeare? Did they not see that there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy? Is it not said "there are sermons in stones, books in running brooks, tongues in trees, and good in everything?" What I here relate I solemnly assert is not a fiction, but a truth, and an actual experience; and I submit its explanation to those who may be better versed than I in spiritual dynamics.

Before commencing this strange happening, I may as well say that I cannot for many reasons make known the name of the person concerned herein. I will say, however, that the only witness except myself died in Mississippi some years ago.

Poor fellow! I have often wondered why he should have been chosen to see such uncanny things. He was a perfect specimen of health and like a child in his simplicity, and as he informed me, had never given metaphysics a thought.

On a morning in 18—, I arose quite early, one of the many beautiful mornings in Los Angeles, went out on the porch, and glancing at the Los Angeles Times, I was shocked to learn that an intimate friend had suddenly died on the night preceding. The paper stated that he had been visiting friends in his neighborhood that evening, and in coming home about 10:50 p.m., suddenly fell down and expired. He died on Thursday night, and his funeral was announced to be on the next Saturday at 11 a.m.

He was very popular, and his funeral was largely attended. At the church, before taking the body to its final resting-place, friends passed around, as is customary, to take a last look. It was remarked by more than one that his face was remarkably life-like in appearance. We then drove out to the cemetery, where the interment took place with the usual sad ceremonies.

. . . .

Some six months afterward, a letter of introduction was presented to me by a talented musician, a graduate of the Dublin University, who came to Los Angeles more for health than otherwise. His musical genius and social qualities were soon recognized, and he was installed as the director of the choir in one of the principal churches. We met frequently, and our future relations became very cordial and friendly. After he was installed as director of the choir, and one evening when he was visiting me (one of his off evenings,) we were looking over some photographs in my album. He at last came to a picture of my late friend, taken shortly before his death. No sooner did he see it than he started back, turned pale, and exclaimed: "My God! Why, that is the man I have seen in the church!"

Bacon, in his "Discursive Speculations on Nature," says: "There be things, some of them inanimate, that operate upon the spirits of men by secret sympathy." To these he gave the quaint name of "Imaginants;" so I thought to myself; but felt a delicacy in expressing such thoughts to my friend, and there the matter rested for the time.

Some days afterward, I rallied him on the subject, when he seriously related to me a phenomenon which had frequently occurred on his opening and lighting the church on an evening preparatory for practice by the choir, as it was his duty to be first present and light the gas (which, by the way, was the church where the funeral was held.)

The first appearance, he told me, was upon a dark, rainy night (not such as we usually have here, but an equinoctial rain, with thunder and lightning.) He had just gone into the church alone, and was searching for a match, when, glancing around, he saw on the wall about midway between the front and back of the chancel, the luminous face and bust of a man as if cast from a magic lantern. It was first stationary, at a height of about twelve feet from the floor. Then it began to float along and around the wall to where he was. Startled and frightened, he ran out and made his way to the front of the church, at the same time calling for help! As it happened, some one was passing in a buggy, who stopped and inquired what was the trouble. It proved to be a doctor, who was an acquaintance of my friend and myself, and after an explanation, the doctor tied up his horse, went into the church by the back door and investigated, but found no ghost, and as a parting injunction advised the musician not to drink too much wine at dinner (which I knew he never did.)

This happened some months previous, and ever after when he had gone to the church, the same thing had occurred. He said he was ashamed to tell any one about it, and while in a way he had become accustomed to it, it caused his blood to run cold every time he had to go to the church.

He had exacted a promise from the doctor to keep silent, and had never mentioned it to any one but myself. It is needless to say that I was very much worked up and interested in this matter. So I proposed to accompany him some evening to the church in order to verify, if possible, with my own senses so strange a circumstance. So shortly thereafter, on a dark, rainy night in January (I remember well it was one of the worst storms we had had for many years, and the lightning was flashing and the thunder rolling. We arrived at the back door of the church, and striking a match, I saw it was 7:45. He opened the door, and we went in, closing it after me. I, not being familiar with the place, held his hand as he advanced to the front of the pulpit, where we stood for a moment. All was dark except the fitful glare of a gaslight on the outside, and there was not a sound except the dripping of the water from the eaves and the whistle of a distant locomotive.

"I see nothing unusual," I said.

The words were scarcely spoken, when on the right-hand side of the wall, from where we were standing, about twelve feet from the floor, and about midway of the building, there appeared in a flash of light a luminous shadow of the bust of my friend. I felt that I was being drawn toward him, but I held firmly to the hand of my guide. I remembered that I had come for a purpose, and was determined, if possible, to solve it. Slowly the shade floated toward us, but always along the wall, until it reached where we were standing, lowering near my left shoulder—so lifelike that I spoke aloud:

"My dear friend, what can I do for you? What is the matter?" And I entreated earnestly to know what was wrong. We stood breathlessly waiting, when the response came as from a long, long distance, but very plain: "Buried alive! Buried alive!" Then the luminous shadow gradually faded away, and as it finally disappeared, I heard again, as a faint echo: "Buried alive! Buried alive!"

Exactly how long we stood there, I cannot say, but we finally groped our way out and locked the door. The musician was never the same man afterwarl. He soon resigned his position, and left Los Angeles, and, as I have said, died in Mississippi.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have learned that he did not die in Mississippi, but left there in very bad health for his native home in Ireland, where he finally recovered his health, was left a comfortable fortune by a deceased aunt, and spends his leisure hours in the study of music and travel in Italy and the south of France.

Bishop Stayed, Gambler Went.

The bishop of a southern diocese was once making a missionary journey through Arkansas and Indian Territory, and on his arrival at Natchez he said to the landlord of a hotel: "I have been traveling for a week, day and night, in a small wagon, and I want a comfortable room."

"Sorry," said the landlord, "but I don't believe there's a vacant room in Natchez; there's a horse race, a Methodist conference and a political convention in the city, and every house is full up. The only thing I can give you is a shake-down." Then, observing the bishop's tired face, he added: "The best room in my house is rented to a noted gambler who usually remains out all night and seldom gets in before breakfast. If you will take the risk, you shall have his room; but if he should come in, there'll be a row, I'll promise you that."

The bishop decided to take the risk. About 4 o'clock in the morning the gambler returned and promptly shook the bishop by the arm.

"Get out of here, or I'll put you out," he shouted.

The bishop, the gentlest of men, raised himself on one elbow, so that it brought the muscles of his arm into full relief.

"My friend," he began quietly, "before you put me out, will you have the kindness to feel my arm?"

The gambler put his hand on the bishop's arm.

"Stranger," he then said, respectfully, "you can stay."

Old Roughneck.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE WITH A GRIZZLY BEAR.

By a Special Contributor.

"SEEING I was born and raised in the mountains, you might suppose I was immune from the fear of wild animals, but I'm not. Ever since that tussle with Old Roughneck, I've had a proper respect for wild beasts, especially grizzlies," observed Aleck Tucker, who had come over from Sulphur Gulch for a burro-load of provisions.

"Aleck," put in Mull Davis, one of the old-timers who made their headquarters in Butch Ballard's store at Walkover, "shake hands with George here, my grandson. He's my daughter Nellie's boy, and this is his first trip to the West."

Young Tucker grasped the youth's hand warmly. "Haven't killed any bears yet, have you?" he inquired.

"No, sir, but I'd like to," replied George eagerly.

"Mebbe you wouldn't be so anxious if you'd been in the scrapes Aleck here has," said Mull, who then added, turning to Tucker: "Aleck, I would like for you to tell my grandson about that little entertainment you had with Old Roughneck."

"Certainly," said Aleck. "That happened twelve years ago, when I wasn't much older than George, I reckon—I was about 15. It was up at North Forks, where my dad was running a sawmill. North Forks was pretty wild country at that time, and forty miles from a railroad. Game was plenty, and it seemed like the place was a regular summer resort for bears."

"Was Old Roughneck a bear?" interrupted George.

"He certainly was," resumed Aleck, "and about the orneriest, ugliest old grizzly you ever saw. He was so shaggy-haired and made so much trouble around camp that we nicknamed him Old Roughneck. He deserved the name, let me tell you, and he cured me of the ambition to be a great hunter. Before I got acquainted with this old gentleman I had shot seven or eight black bears and I thought I knew how to take care of myself with a grizzly, but I was badly mistaken. There are bears and bears! While a black bear is almost sure to run away when you go after him—unless it's a mother with cubs—a grizzly isn't built that way. He's a gentleman who attends strictly to his own business if you attend to yours, but if you go overstepping the bounds of bear etiquette, he is very likely to resent it and stir up more mischief, in a shorter time, than a bee under a woman's bonnet.

"Of course, a grizzly, like anybody else, is apt to have peculiar ideas as to what constitutes his own business, and Old Roughneck was no exception. His business was, as we soon found out, to break into the cook shack and steal bacon, ham, sugar and other things to eat. A bear is certainly fond of smoked meats and sweet stuff. He also thought it part of his business to scare the logging teams, or maybe he didn't give them any thought, for a horse has no use for bears. Even the smell of them makes a horse nervous."

"Ain't you ever noticed," broke in Mull, "how a bear almost never kills a colt, but will make off with a calf, while a mountain lion will go for a colt first every time?"

"That's the nature of the beasts for sure," agreed Aleck; "but, as I was going on to say, Old Roughneck caused considerable disturbance in our neighborhood. At first he would make us a call only occasionally, but after a while he got so sociable that he wanted a side of bacon every night or two. The men used to sit up and wait for him, hoping to get a good shot, but though they often caught sight of him and wasted good cartridges on him, he never so much as got a scratch as far as we could learn. He seemed to have a charmed life like the hero in a drama. Naturally, all this interested me so much that it got to be the ambition of my life to earn the honor of killing Old Roughneck. Being only a boy, I began boasting that I would have his hide, or bust. The men used to make lots of fun of me, and every time I came back from hunting, some one was pretty sure to ask me if I was busted yet. Now all that nagging made me uncomfortable—made me feel cheap—yet it also made me more determined than ever to shoot the big grizzly.

"In order to make short work of our troublesome guest, my dad one day made a box trap out of three-inch plank—you know how a trap of that kind is constructed, don't you, George?"

George shook his head.

"It's very simple," explained Aleck. "All you have to do is build a big box of heavy timber or logs, and rig it up with a heavy door which drops when the animal goes inside and tackles the bait. The inside of the trap is driven full of spikes sharpened so that the captive will wound himself if he tries to break out. Our trap was nailed securely between two pine trees about twenty rods above the camp at the edge of the clearing on the mountainside, and baited with bacon and molasses. Once a bear gets caught in a contrivance of this kind, he is done for. You might naturally suppose that Old Roughneck would soon have become our prisoner, and so we thought, but events turned out otherwise. Though we often noticed his tracks all around the box, still he was too cunning to enter. We did catch a black bear in it, however.

"Young as I was, I knew how to shoot. I had been raised to the use of firearms, and at this time was the proud owner of a splendid repeating rifle with which I alone was able to keep the camp supplied with venison. In addition to being a good marksman, I had plenty of self-confidence, so it pleased me to see that the trap wouldn't work with Old Roughneck. After the bragging I had done, it was necessary for me to make good.

"One morning I started out to track the old bear, he having paid us one of his unwelcome visits during the night. There had been a heavy rain, and I found little difficulty in keeping on his trail for half a mile up the gulch; then I lost it as it led up along the slope of a mountain. I kept on in the direction I thought the animal had taken, and by a rare chance came upon him about a mile and a half east of the sawmill. He was feeding contentedly on sarvice berries not more than a hundred yards below me on the opposite side of a draw, and the sight of him so delighted me that, fearing I might not get a nearer shot, I raised my rifle and blazed away. It was a long shot, and a down-hill one—which is hard to judge—yet I hit him in the hind quarters, wounding him slightly, which was a thousand times worse than not hitting him at all. The old fellow looked up surprised, snarled viciously several times, and then began sniffing the air. As I foolishly had not taken the precaution to avoid being to the windward of him, he almost immediately scented me and started in my direction. About that time I felt the need of exercise and began to run also, not toward Old Roughneck, but toward camp.

"I had never been chased by a bear before, and this fact, together with my nervousness upon being suddenly confronted by the famous old grizzly, seemed to rob me of my nerve and wits. My dad had repeatedly told me in running from a bear on a mountainside to keep as nearly as possible on a horizontal line, as thus a man can outrun the animal, while in going up or down hill, he is vastly a man's superior. You see a bear is built higher behind than in front, and in running horizontally on a slope he is placed in a most awkward position, and so is more apt to slip and stumble than a two-legged creature. In my excitement, I ran obliquely down grade, and it was only when I glanced around and saw Old Roughneck gaining on me that my dad's advice popped into my head. After that, you may be sure I kept to the horizontal as nearly as I could, and the result was that Mr. Bear began to lose ground. Then little by little I regained my courage; I remembered how I had boasted that I would kill the bear or bust, and I longed to get another shot at him. I saw my chance as he was descending into a gully which I had just crossed; he was scarcely thirty yards away from me, and I stopped for a moment, steadied myself against a tree, and gave him a ball in the shoulder.

"That made him more furious than ever, but it did not wound him in a manner to prevent him from running. He let out a roar of pain, rose up on his hind legs, snapped his jaws and tore around slapping his wounded shoulder with his big paws for a while, and then plunged after me again. In the meantime, I had shot at him twice and missed—my hands trembled so that I couldn't shoot straight. It is hard racing in a high altitude where the air is thin, and over rocks and fallen timber, and in an endurance test a bear is more than a match for a boy, but still I made much better speed than Old Roughneck until my wind showed signs of giving out. I was nearing camp—that was a comfort—but still the bear had a good chance of catching up, even if I did not have the misfortune to stumble and fall. The rate he was gaining on me at every bound, instead of spurring me to run faster, seemed to paralyze my legs; no matter how I strained myself, I could not seem to cover the ground the way I ought. Nearly exhausted as I was, I was fast losing heart, when abruptly my hopes were revived by the sight of the bear trap just before me. Acting upon a wild impulse in my desperation I darted into the box and slammed down the door behind me.

"I lay gasping for breath on the floor when a few seconds later Mr. Bear came tearing up. 'O, you old demon,' I said, 'I beat you that time! I'll have your old hide yet!' I felt that I was as safe as I could be, for the box was built to withstand hard usage, yet it seemed that as the old fellow went sniffing about outside he was secretly laughing at me for getting caught in the very cage set for him. But if he was at first inclined to take the matter as a joke, he soon gave up the idea, and commenced growling and snarling as he circled around making a careful inspection of the fortress. Then he began banging the planks with his paws. Every blow caused the box to tremble, and me to shiver with fright. The worst of the situation was that, excepting in the floor where they were useless, there was not a crack large enough to stick my rifle barrel through and shoot. I now doubted the wisdom of seeking refuge in the trap, and wondered how long I would be kept a prisoner. Of course, I could have shouted for help, and, since the sawmill was temporarily shut down, the cook, who was probably the only man at camp at that hour, would come and kill the bear, but when I thought of how the men would ridicule me for getting into such a fix, I made up my mind to risk death rather than call for aid. After this resolve, I conceived the idea of cutting a hole in the door to shoot from, and taking out my jack knife I began to whittle. I dared not raise the door so much as an inch for fear my besieger would take the hint and raise it himself.

"All the time I was whittling, Old Roughneck kept nosing about outside, expressing his disgust now and then by giving the trap a terrific bang with his paw, and by grunting and growling savagely. Judging by the strength he displayed, it was evident his wounds had not weakened him very much and that he was in no danger of bleeding to death. Cutting a hole through a three-inch plank is no quick or easy task, and I must have been working fully half an hour when the anger-crazed brute heaved his whole weight against my prison, causing such a shock that I staggered back and came within an inch of being pierced by the sharp spikes which bristled about me on the walls. That jolt awakened me to a new danger. What if Old Roughneck

Well, as I was saying, what we're after now is what was in the trunk on that car—the product of a few years' labor, sonny—to put it lightly—plans—specifications—model—and I guess, all the rest of the paraphernalia—to Denmore's New Gyroscopic Mono-rail Car. He was just going to—float stock in the thing—good business proposition, too, by the way, Henri—and now it's gone. Get busy, Henri! Get busy, I say! Chase around here and do things—and do 'em quick, too! So long!'

"Reamer almost chased me out of the library in his anxiety for me to 'get busy,' and I had no time even to ask questions. I'm afraid I chuckled a little as I left the room, for mine host glared at me and mumbled something about 'these young fools!' which I did not quite catch. But I paid no attention, and walked on wrapped in my thoughts. Once out of the host's sight and hearing, I chuckled out loud, for, as you may imagine, I had begun already to piece the two discoveries together, mine of the early morning and Jack's when he found his auto gone.

"Those fresh footprints on the drive leading to the garage surely had some bearing on the case, and if so I had an important clew. Of course, as could be expected in an emergency such as this, I had completely forgotten who had prepared the dancing floor the previous evening—my memory has a habit of tricking me in that fashion. I hoped to be able to find my man without arousing suspicion.

"I hurried to the breakfast table, where everybody was seated and waiting except Jack Densmore and Mr. Reamer. Reamer soon arrived with excuses from Jack which the rest of the guests accepted apparently without suspicion, although I watched them as closely as possible. Reamer and I merely exchanged glances.

"Curiosity soon overpowered me, and I appealed to my pretty neighbor, the host's daughter, Elise, for the information I wished. She turned on me with a petulant smile, saying: 'Oh! you stupid, why Charles and George, of course! Don't you remember what a mess Charley made of it? He is such a clumsy boy, spilling that white stuff all over himself and everything else.'

"'Oh, yes!' I slowly assented, 'that's right.'

"'Of course it's right,' she said, 'and, by the way, what do you want to know for? Are you up to some of your usual tricks?—playing secret service, eh?'

"'Nothing at all, nothing at all!' I replied with an attempt at cheerfulness, and immediately took pains to change the subject.

"Even I was somewhat surprised when, at the close of the meal, Mr. Reamer quietly informed the guests of the crime, told them I was working on the case, and said that it would perhaps be better for the party to adjourn under the circumstances, to reassemble when some definite conclusion on the case was reached. Meanwhile, I watched the effect on the faces around the table, especially on those of Charley Gray and George Reamer. Not a guilty sign! Absolute innocence and surprise depicted!

"In the old days before I was a detective, Elise Reamer and I used to be pretty good friends, but my change of profession seemed somehow to turn her affection or whatever you'd like to call it. Now, when she saw what was doing by the way her father spoke, she turned on me with a glance that meant volumes. But the trouble with those volumes was that they were in a foreign language and mighty hard to translate into United States. However, they seemed to say to me: 'Henri, do your best, and we might be fr——' and there the telepathic message seemed to stop and blend into a sort of warning. I never could understand Elise. She always was a peculiar girl—and I always seemed to like her for it.

"While the guests were packing up, ready to depart, I watched them all pretty carefully and managed to get a word alone with Charley Gray's room mate. I trusted his word, and after careful questioning discovered to my relief and satisfaction that Gray had not been out of the house from dinner time the previous evening till breakfast time that morning. I knew the auto had been taken, and the footprints made between those times. A satisfactory alibi had been proved for Charley Gray.

"If my first conclusions were correct, George Reamer, the son of the host, was next in line for my suspicions, but it was pretty hard to believe that he was the thief. I feigned to be at a loss for a clew so as to protect George, should he prove innocent, and meanwhile hastened to put the clew I really had to all the tests I knew. After secretly comparing foot measurements with footprint measurements and discovering that they tallied correctly; after comparing secretly-made chemical analyses of the 'white' I found on the drive, and the dancing-floor preparation, and finding these precisely the same; after diligently searching for others of the guests whose shoes might have been coated with the substance, I finally admitted to myself that nothing could be done but wait and watch George Reamer and find out what connection he had with the case.

"For two days I watched George most carefully. He seemed to be as merry as ever and as little self-conscious. In short, he did not act at all as I thought a conventional criminal should, or even the grossest professional, under the circumstances, and soon I was beginning to wonder whether my suspicions were well founded after all.

"The third morning after the occurrence, however, the mystery was cleared, and so peculiarly that I set it down as one of my red-letter cases. George came down with the rest of the family to breakfast, but he seemed remarkably silent for so talkative a boy. His usually placid manner and rather pleasant face was a study. His brow was wrinkled with emotion, and he was strangely excited. He ate hurriedly and twitched nervously from head to foot. To tell the truth, I was rather excited myself. I could feel that something of interest and importance would happen in a few moments. It did!

"Suddenly he put down his knife and fork and exclaimed: 'Say, listen, folks! I had a mighty strange dream last night. It was a dream that would upset most any man's nerves, I guess, under the circumstances. It has mine. The dream was a complete reproduction—and no details omitted—of the first evening and night of the house party. Perhaps you'll remember that something happened during that night which was called "a mysterious crime" the next morning. Maybe it wasn't a crime after all—unless—well, they say that crime is a disease; if the reverse proposition is true, that disease is a crime, I will have to believe that the disappearance of Jack's auto was due to a crime. You know, walking in my sleep is a disease with me, and I dreamed that I walked in my sleep that night and stole that auto, and I believe the dream is true. Anyway, as soon as I've finished telling you folks I'm going to take Henri here and test it.

"'I dreamed that I arose, dressed myself exactly as I had for the dance and quietly slipped out by the side door. As vividly as can be in my dream I raced down the road in the big green car to that deserted barn, about a mile down the main road toward the city. The doors of the barn open, I guided the dream car into it, shut the doors and walked home again. The dream ended with my safe arrival in bed once more, and it was not till I woke up this morning that I realized how horribly vivid and realistic it all was. Now, Henri, if you'll come with me, we'll get in the machine down here and make a flying visit to that barn to verify my suspicions.'

"The trip was a record one, on which complete silence was maintained, and in fact, till the big doors of the deserted barn were swung open disclosing Jack's unmistakable big green auto. There seems to be no expression in the English language that fits better in such a situation than 'Well, I'll be ——!' and we both slowly, impressively and simultaneously said it at this moment.

"George and I made a hasty examination of the machine, and in doing so, made two important discoveries. One was that the plans and model so prized by poor Jack Densmore were perfectly safe, and the other that George's pocket-knife monogrammed with his initials lay on the seat, practically proving his dream correct. This latter was further proved a minute later when George recalled his thoughts, the morning of the theft. He said that he woke up with a feeling that some important event had taken place during the night of which he ought to have known, but did not, and that he discovered his evening clothes and shoes quite dusty, a peculiar circumstance of which he did not try to find an explanation at the time.

"Of course, we immediately notified poor Jack, who was overjoyed to find his machine and models safe, and the house party reassembled as per programme upon assurance that George would indulge in no more somnambulism.

"At the reassembling I told the guests the story of my part in the affair and received not a few compliments on my discretion in withholding the evidence. I'm not sorry that George walked in his sleep that night. You knew, didn't you, that I named our baby Elise Reamer Lavedi?"

English as It Is Spoken.

Speaking last night at University College on "Phonetics," Prof. Jones said that phonetics was not, as was often suggested, a newly-discovered science. It was a science which was brought to a very high degree of perfection by Indian priests and scientists 4000 years ago, whose object in studying pronunciation was to preserve unaltered the pronunciation of their ancient hymns, which were supposed to lose their efficacy if not pronounced according to ancient usage.

It was only within the last thirty years that the science of phonetics had become known to the general public. The pronunciation of children in London schools was universally admitted to be deplorable, and it was complained that teachers did not improve it; but the reason was that those teachers did not possess the necessary knowledge of phonetics to correct the bad pronunciation. Before long, however, there would probably be a marked improvement in this respect, because the Board of Education had recognized the importance of phonetics, and had introduced the subject in the regular course of training for elementary school teachers. The English language had very much changed since Shakespeare's time, and to show how it was pronounced 300 years ago, Prof. Jones recited "It was a lover and his lass" in sixteenth-century pronunciation. He added that to a person who had accustomed himself to the old pronunciation, Shakespeare lost some of his expressiveness—often to a marked extent—when read in the ordinary modern southern English pronunciation. It sounded better in Scotch. Pronunciation continued to develop until in the present day the system of spelling was such that the spelling was absolutely no guide to the pronunciation.—[London Standard.

The Go-Devil.

Instead of employing hundreds of men with picks to dig up streets for the purpose of resurfacing them, the city of Cincinnati now uses a 15,000-pound rake, which enjoys the gentle name of go-devil.

When dragged along by a steam roller it does the work of the laborers with their picks in about one-fifth of the time and 50 per cent. better. The big steel teeth dig into the street six inches deep and three feet wide and travel about twenty-five feet a minute. It is estimated that the machine saves the work of hundreds of laborers and pays for itself in every two days' work.—[Popular Mechanics.

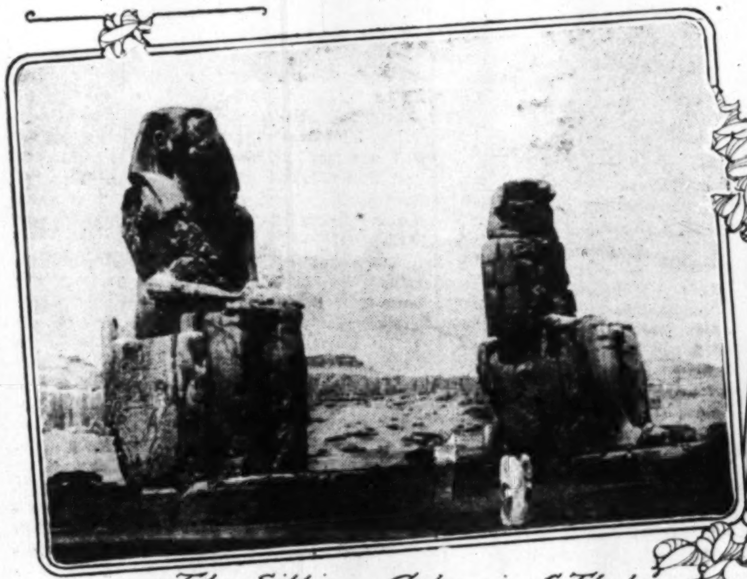
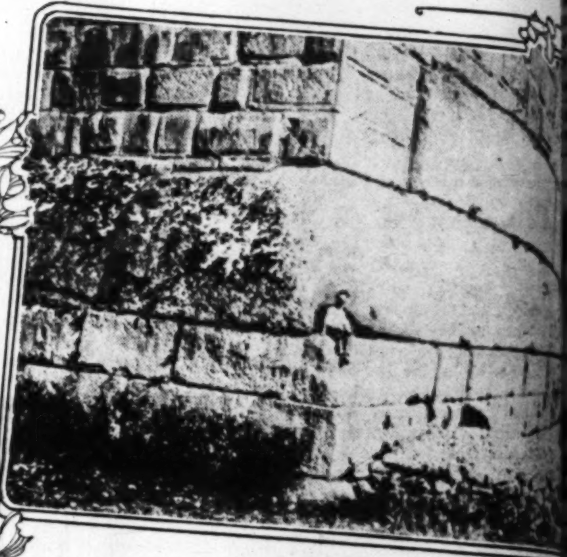
MARVELS OF A BYGONE AGE WHICH STILL AMAZE THE WORLD.

By a Special Contributor.

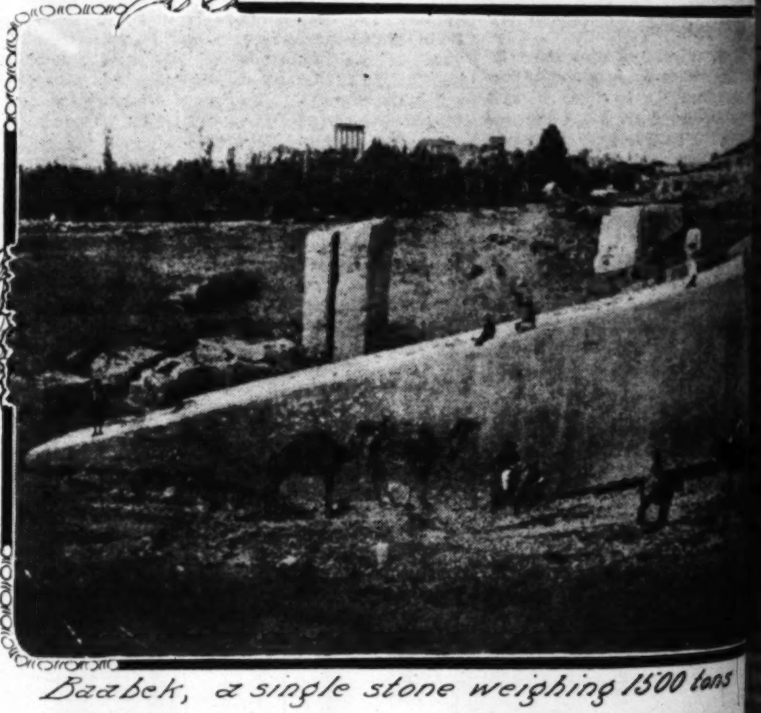


The Sitting Colossi of Thebes, each weighing 1000 tons.



Baabek's Cyclopean Wall.

"Time Sitteth on a Sphinx."



Baabek, a single stone weighing 1500 tons

THE solemn Pyramids, enthroned upon their golden sands, the awe-inspiring grandeur of Karnak's mighty sanctuary, and the lonely majesty of Baalbec's cyclopean wall, all unexampled wonders of a bygone age, find their best expression in the calm, grave, questioning face of the Sphinx, the symbol through uncounted ages of the Great Unknown—the Everlasting Question.

What manner of men were they who carved these stupendous masses of granite from the mountainsides, and reared aloft such gigantic temples that the world has never ceased to be amazed at their contemplation?

Were the ancient Egyptians, Assyrians and Phoenicians familiar with mechanical forces unknown to the engineers of this present and supposedly more enlightened age?

These are questions which inevitably present themselves to the mind of the thoughtful traveler, as he stands for the first time in the mighty Hall of Columns in old Thebes, or gazes, awed and overwhelmed, upon the colossal foundation stones of Baalbec.

That mere brute strength could have ever raised those huge stone beams of the Egyptian temples a hundred feet in the air, or dragged from their rocky beds the mightiest monoliths ever quarried by the hand of man, is almost beyond human comprehension, and through all the ages the greatest minds of the known world have puzzled over this fascinating problem. And still the Sphinx smiles on and guards his secret!

Baalbec, the Ghost of Rome.

Forty miles inland from the blue Mediterranean, and surrounded by the snow-covered mountains of Lebanon, lies Baalbec; in its day the most magnificent of Syrian cities; full of marble palaces, plashing fountains and beautiful monuments—now famous only for the splendor of its ruins.

All the ruins of Rome itself do not equal in magnificence that awe-inspiring group of shattered temples, which even to this day crowns the Acropolis of Baalbec. But marvelous as are the Roman temples whose broken walls and majestic columns still lift themselves upon these lonely heights, they are as nothing in comparison with the stupendous masses of masonry composing the Cyclopean outer wall, upon which the ancient Phoenicians reared their earlier and more magnificent temple.

The origin of Baalbec is lost in the dim mists of the ages. Like Damascus, its beginning is beyond the reckoning of man. According to the Moslem tradition, the city was founded by Caini, the son of Adam, after his tragic murder of Abel. It was the Baal-gad of Joshua, and was called by the Greeks Heliopolis, or the City of the Sun.

Situated at the junction of two great caravan routes, one leading from Damascus, the solemn and secluded capital of Syria, and one from the desert city of Palmyra, joining here and continuing as one route to the sea, Baalbec was in ancient times a city of vast commercial importance. Great caravans of camels, laden with the wealth of Arabia, Persia, India and far Cathay, stalked in stately procession through her streets from morn until night, on their way to the waiting galleys at Tripoli; for the Phoenicians were the first great seafaring people of history.

Often have the splendid streets of this Syrian metropolis resounded to the echo of martial uproar, the blast of the trumpet, the rumbling of chariot wheels, the triumphant shouts of victorious armies. Phoenicians, Assyrians, Greeks, Romans, Byzantines, Turks and Saracens—all have fought and conquered here. And in later times this fated city has even known the unspeakable horrors which ever followed in the footsteps of Timour, the Tartar, the self-styled "Scourge of God."

But Baalbec has gone the way of other great cities of the ancient world—Babylon, Nineveh, Tyre, Carthage, Memphis and Thebes—all mighty cities in their time, and now but splendid memories. Titanic ruins alone today mark the site of this Syrian metropolis, but ruins which are unquestionably the most magnificent in all the world.

Baalbec in its foundation walls preserves the most important ruins of the ancient Phoenicians now existing in the world. Tyre, Sidon, Carthage—all have disappeared utterly from the earth, and nothing now remains to the knowledge of mankind of the great Phoenician civilization excepting the

The largest of the two statues forty-two feet in length and weighs not far 400 tons.

138 miles north of the Cataract, is full of marvels from these famous quarries, chief of may be mentioned the colossal statue of Rameses the Memnonium, which weighed nearly 1000 tons, the two great obelisks of Queen Hatsu, in the Temof Ammon at Karnak, each one of which weighs 1,000,000 pounds. All of these great stones were from Assouan; and the hieroglyphic inscriptions the base of the great queen's obelisks record that were both cut from the quarry and transported to , a distance of 138 miles, carved with their hieroinscriptions, and erected in the Temple of Am, within the short space of seven months. The great Hall of Columns at Karnak has been for forty centuries the wonder of all mankind; its columns, sixty feet in circumference, and towernearly a hundred feet in the air, bearing huge roof of solid stone twenty-five and thirty feet long. lofty doorway leading to the grand Hall of the As is covered with sandstone blocks upward of feet in length.

antic Statues.

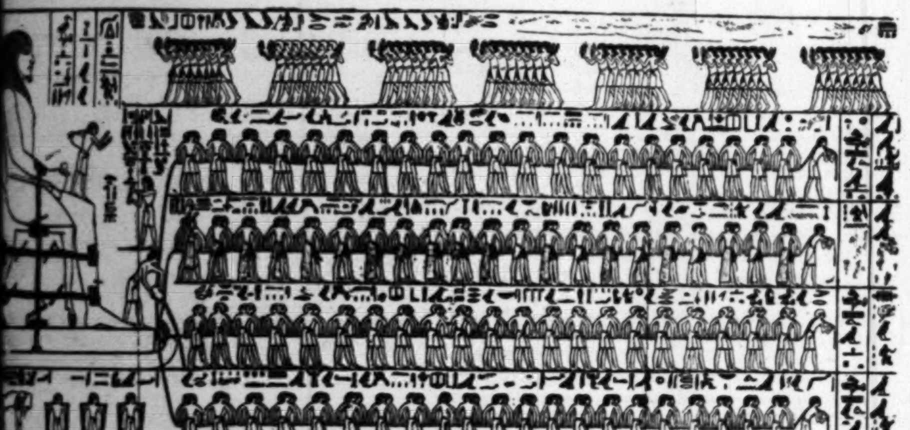
gigantic of all the statues of Upper Egypt are two sitting Colossi of Amenhotep III, at Western Each statue was originally carved from a solid of stone sixty-four feet high and weighing over tons, and made from a variety of granite not known several days' journey of Thebes. The northernof the two statues, known as the Vocal Memnon antiquity was shattered by an earthquake in the 27 B.C., and was rudely restored during the reign Septimus Severus.

Throughout the Valley of the Nile may be seen hunof wonderful examples of the ability of the anEgyptians to transport stones of vast size and weight; and according to the ancient writers, were able to do even greater things than these of we have tangible evidence. Herodotus the Greek "Father of History," tells of a monolithic temple sixty feet square, composed of one solid block of granite, and which weighed not far from 5000 tons which was quarried on the Island of Elophantine, near the First Cataract, and transported to Buta in the Delta, a distance of over 600 miles!

The great question of all ages has been: How did they do it? Eminent scholars have esserted that many an Archimedes flourished among the ancient Egyptians who far excelled in wisdom the Sage of Syracuse; but a quaint hieroglyphic picture which has been discovered on the walls of a tomb at El Burcheh, dating from the reign of Usertsen II, in the twelfth dynasty, seems to shed considerable light on the subject, and would seem to prove that the whole secret of the ancient Egyptians consisted of their unlimited command of individual labor. In other words, instead of by the use of an unknown power, all of these marvelous works have been accomplished solely by the vast aggregation of brute strength.

Explained by Picture.

In the hieroglyphic pictures referred to, the method of moving these huge stones is most admirably portrayed. The picture is carved in the conventional style of ancient Egypt, and shows a colossal seated figure of granite, about twenty-six feet high, and probably weighing about 500 tons, secured by tightly-twisted ropes to a wooden sledge, which is drawn by a great throng of almost naked slaves, who are harnessed two-by-two. The engineer in charge of the work is seen standing upon the knees of the statue, marking time to the measured cadence of a song, very much as the Egyptians of today are accustomed to sing as they go about their work.



ANCIENT EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHIC PICTURE, SHOWING METHOD OF MOVING A COLOSSUS.

Upon the toes of the colossus, at the front of the sledge, stands a man who pours oil from a jar upon the causeway, in order to lubricate the passage of the sledge, and also to prevent fire from friction. Other slaves remove the wooden sections of the causeway after the colossus has passed over, and place them again before the sledge.

Some of the hieroglyphic inscriptions upon the walls of the tombs and the temples also make reference to this method of moving great masses of stone; and in the tomb of an Egyptian noble who lived in the sixth dynasty, we learn of a monolith of such gigantic proportions that it required the combined efforts of 3000 men to move it; and Herodotus tells of a single block of stone which was transported by order of King Amasis from the city of Elephantine to Sais in the Delta, and which required the undivided efforts of 2000 men for three whole years to complete the task.

How far these ancient writers may be believed is a matter for conjecture, but Pliny tells of an obelisk ninety-nine feet high which needed the united strength of 20,000 men to raise it into its upright position. It is also recorded in many of the hieroglyphic inscriptions that huge boats were often used in transporting obelisks and other great stones for the temples. Among the most interesting of these inscriptions is that to be found on the walls of the terraced temple of the great Queen Hatasu at Der-el-Barhi, in which she tells of transporting the two great obelisks from the First Cataract to Thebes on a huge barge which was towed by thirty galleys, rowed by 960 oarsmen.

All of which would seem to prove that the marvels of quarrying and building performed by the ancient Egyptians and Phoenicians were not accomplished through the instrumentality of some tremendous unknown force, but were the result of forced labor, and at the cost of unnumbered thousands and tens of thousands of wretched human lives—the lives of slaves taken in battle, and of miserable subjects dragged from their families to labor without pay, for the future glory of their Pharaoh or King.

And so, as the blood from the guillotine besmeared the fame of the new-born French republic and dimmed its glory for all time; we come to look upon these ancient marvels of architecture with less of admiration, as we begin to understand the full measure of human suffering which was their price; and in the new Egypt of the twentieth century, with its schools for the common people and the bettered condition of its teeming millions, its magic transformation of the desert into fertile acres by the great Nile dam, and in its steady trend toward the better things of the age—we find a broader interest and a deeper satisfaction than in those mighty monuments of human woe which fill the wondrous Valley of the Nile.

MONSTER LINERS.

NEW TRANS-ATLANTIC BOATS TO CARRY FIVE THOUSAND PERSONS.

[London Daily News:] Twelve thousand tons represents the increase in size of the two mammoth liners, Olympic and Titanic, now being built by Messrs. Harland & Wolff, Belfast, for the White Star Company, over the leviathan Cunarders, Mauretania and Lusitania. The tonnage of each of these is 33,000 tons; that of each of the new White Star boats is to be 45,000 tons, and possibly more. Among the Belfast shipyard workmen these great vessels have been known for months past as the mystery ships, because of the extraordinary precautions which have been taken to prevent their dimensions and design becoming public property. Something, however, may now be said on these points.

The new steamers will be completed about the end of next year, and will go on the Southampton-New York service in the following spring. They will be by far the largest in the world, and in equipment and decoration will be the finest on the water. The new vessels will have a displacement of 60,000 tons. They are to be about 840 feet long, with a beam of 90 feet, and the boat deck will be more than 60 feet above the water.

Neither the Olympic nor the Titanic will be high-power boats, nor are their lines designed for great speed, 21 knots being the average aimed at, as against the 25 of the Cunarders. An immense amount of space, which in fast boats is devoted to machinery, will thus be saved for cabin accommodation. The carrying capacity of the great boats will exceed that of any afloat today by at least one-third. Each steamship will carry, under normal conditions, more than 5000 persons all told.

The crew will be the largest every employed on one merchant ship—more than 600 in all. The monster new liner will have nine steel decks. The steamers are not only designed to eclipse everything else as yet achieved in passenger shipbuilding as regards the size, but in their novelty of equipment as well. There will be a large entrance hall, a spacious dining-room, smoking-room, library, women's parlor grill, and lounging-rooms, elaborately furnished to the last detail.

Swimming and Diving on Board.

One of the upper decks is to be completely inclosed to serve as a ballroom or skating rink. By day this inclosure may be used as a sun parlor and promenade. It will be large enough to accommodate several hundred passengers. In planning the cabins of the new liners, the luxuries of the most up-to-date hotels have been kept in sight, and even improved upon. These boats will offer not only extended suites of rooms, but complete flats, which will make it possible to cross the Atlantic while enjoying all the privacy of one's own home.

The Olympic and Titanic will be the first steamers to offer cabins with private shower baths attached. In addition, there will be a great swimming bath aboard both the Olympic and the Titanic, large enough to permit of diving. A gymnasium, the largest and most completely equipped afloat, will be found on each of the new boats. The main dining saloon, which will seat more than 600 passengers, will be the largest single cabin on the ship, and in its furnishing and decoration the most elaborate. Should a guest tire of this apartment in the week he is at sea, he can wander from one café to another enjoying practically as much variety as he might ashore.

A veranda café will be built on one of the upper decks far astern, looking out over the sea, and about fifty feet above the water. The decorations and general management will carry out the idea of the open-air cafés of Southern Europe. The café will be erected with exposed rafters entwined with vines, and the sides will be latticed effects, to make the illusion of a café at the seaside as complete as possible.

Another novelty will be a grill room. The cabin will suggest an old English chop house, with high-backed stalls of ancient oak, and broad, low tables. It will be possible at any hour of the day or night for a passenger to use the grill room. The palm garden will be still another refuge for those who weary of the confines of the ship during the passage.

A Deck Garden.

A garden will be located on the sun deck, and in the winter months will be protected by a glass roof. Here will be found, perhaps, the most complete illusion of the hotel ashore. There will be arbors artfully contrived to give the effect of gardens covered with vines and flowers. The children's room of the new liners will be the most sumptuous apartment of its kind ever attempted.

The new liners will be as complete in their safety devices as in their luxurious equipment. Each boat will be divided into upward of thirty steel compartments, separated by heavy bulkheads. An automatic device on the bridge will control all these heavy steel doors, making it possible for a single hand to close them all in case of danger. Each of these doors in turn will be electrically connected with a chart on the bridge, and will be represented by small electric lights. When one of these doors closes, the light will burn red. The officer on the bridge will thus be able to see at a glance if all the compartments are closed. Still another set of safety devices will guard against fire in every part of the ship.

A combination of turbine and reciprocating engines will propel the vessels. It is expected that a great economy of coal will be effected by this arrangement. The berths in Harland & Wolff's yards, at Belfast, in which those wonderful ships are being built, are each 1000 feet long, and capable of bearing a dead weight of 75,000 tons. The Olympic is expected to be ready for launching in the early autumn of 1910.

A Sacrificial Fire.

THE TEST OF LOVE THAT CAME TO HARTWELL MATTHEWS.

By a Special Contributor.

"HAVE you seen the portrait of Marcia, Harty?" Hartwell Matthews, dilettante, appropriately known as "Harty," scraped a splotch of burnt sienna from his sunburnt nose before replying.

"No. Steve will guard it like his very soul till he's placed the last stroke. We'll all want to kneel to it—first because Marcia's been our fresh air on dog days and our sunlight on rainy ones; second, because it's Steve's masterpiece. Steve's a marvel! Some day he'll have a town studio besieged by the lovely—and unlovely—daughters of the rich."

Four of the five artists at work in the big room assented heartily. But the youngest, Pascal Curtiss, whose sketching seemed unusually erratic, stared moodily at the speaker with restless dark eyes.

"By George! Harty," he exploded, "that confounded prig has hung around my sister all summer on pretext of painting her. Now he thinks he's going to marry her, but he won't. I'm the only relative she has, and I'm looking out for her."

"You young cad!" was Harty's mental reply. At the same time, his buoyancy collapsed like a pricked balloon. He had feared that Marcia was engaged to Ledyard, because of the new something in their faces, and Steve's unexplained departure for the city that day. Now the last shred of doubt to which his sanguine temperament had clung was banished by Pascal's words. He had lost in the race, lost that for which he had labored during three years of alternate depair and fond, foolish hope. Gritting his teeth, he worked like a fiend for awhile.

Finally he said quietly: "A man's dislikes stamp him, Pascal; so don't advertise your aversion to Stephen Ledyard. Strange—you've been sore at him ever since he got you out of that ugly scrape at college, for Marcia's sake, against your will. It cost him time, effort and money, and he kept it from Marcia, but you hate him. The old story: the dog snapping at the hand that holds the bone."

"You needn't moralize, Matthews." Pascal flashed back haughtily. "You were no saint till Marcia took you in hand."

Harty's vanity was unassailed.

"Well, I've dabbled in highballs and polo ponies," he conceded, with his good-natured grin. "What can you expect of a kid whose dad buys him a season box at the Metropolitan when he makes his first touchdown at Princeton? But if I'd had a sister like yours—why, boy, I'd never have found out how the amber fizz tasted!"

Curtiss threw down his palate knife and stood up. Despite his boyish slenderness, the lines about his mouth made him look old. His eyes burned.

"Marcia won't marry him," he said. "You'll see." Then he stalked away.

With Pascal's somewhat melodramatic exit, the atmosphere seemed to clear. But Harty's thoughts were tumbling over one another. He knew how fiercely Pascal's pride had resented an interfering finger in his youthful pie. Would the boy really act to prevent acquiring the owner of that finger as a brother-in-law? Harty resolved to play watch dog after Stephen's return.

He sat with his mind immersed in reverie and his elbows in pigments until extricated from both by Taylor, who rubbed the stains off his sleeves with turpentine. Taylor had lost his right hand in the Spanish War and received enormous prices for the miniatures he painted with his left.

"Come to, boy," he remarked. "We hate to lose her, but if any one deserves her, it's a man like Steve, big in stature, heart and mind."

Harty winced at this unconscious cruelty. He was too short, and indubitably would be, at no distant date, too stout for romance; and he knew it. But he did not know that his pinkness radiated irresistible good cheer, and that the world upon which his alert, astute, adroit eyes beamed so genially could not help loving so genuine a heart as his. For three summers he had been the life of the esthetic brotherhood which assembled in this picturesque country village for comradeship with nature and one another. To all of them except Harty, art meant bread and butter as well as inspiration. Yet he, the only rich man's son among them, was the most whole-souled of them all. His friends were legion: Bohemians, bankers, children, the tailors who kept him in faultless trim, the society girls whom he had adored and who "liked him awfully well," and never went any further.

"Marcia's clear-headed enough to appreciate Steve," said Beasley, putting a kink in the tail of a charcoal bear. "Some women wouldn't."

"Too clear-headed, I sometimes think," added Terrill, who was only 22 and had been "made" by his first cover for the Friday Evening Dose.

"Humph!" ejaculated Harty. "When a man says a woman's head is too clear to suit him, it's usually a sign his record isn't clear enough to suit her."

"Deuce take your epigrams!" But Terrill laughed. Harty's bluntness never stung.

Again his recreant mind strayed, this time in pleasant paths. Unconsciously, he spoke aloud, running his fingers through his shock of light hair.

"A portrait of Her!" he mused. "It would have the keen freshness of a breeze straight off the ocean, and the haunting sweetness of violets, too. She'd wear a filmy gown the color of the upcurled crest of a wave, sweeping in long lines against a piny background of dull green. Her head would be held high on the slim column of her neck, and her ethereal face would be modeled all of mother-of-pearl and purple shadows, thrown out in high relief against a big black hat. And color's self would concentrate in the warm carmine of her mouth. Oh, the distinction of her, the look of race, and love, and life!"

Then, facing four open mouths, he regained rationality.

Terrill voiced the general amazement: "Didn't know you were a poet, Harty!"

"Discovered!" said the poet sheepishly. But he looked a shade less pink than usual, and cold perspiration beaded his brow. "That was a close shave, my sweet child!" he told himself. "In another minute you'd have given yourself away!"

That afternoon he did not drop in at the farmhouse where Marcia dispensed tea and encouragement daily to a masculine throng. He went straight to his boarding-place, knowing himself unequal to facing her dear, dreamed-of beauty just then.

Late that evening Ledyard dashed into Harty's room, nearly capsizing its occupant, who was pacing the floor in the dark.

"Go slow, Steve! By thunder! you walk in bunches!"

"Look, Harty!" Ledyard's deep voice rang with rapture. "Marcia's been angel enough to—I'm the happiest—well, look here!"

Harty blinked at the splendid diamond that winked back at him like a mocking star. Then he scrutinized Stephen, who seemed, in the flickering candle light, a statue of triumph. Ledyard's face had that rugged strength which marks the man who has had to fight to live when a boy in years. The self-denial and tireless energy which had made him what he was had left their lines. The poise of his head, the turn of his jaw, spoke an uncompromising rigor. But joy had awakened the boyishness slumbering within him.

Harty extended an unfaltering hand, saying, "You deserve her, Steve. You're a man—and a genius, self-made, by the grace of God."

Ledyard's silence was eloquent as he grasped Harty's hand.

"The portrait's finished, old man," he said. "I want you to see it tonight. I put the last touches this morning before rushing off to the city for this ring. Tomorrow I'll give them both to her. The portrait's been so bound up with our deepest happiness, Harty, that it's almost sacred to Marcia and me. And when I stood back and looked at it this morning, I thanked God for creating such loveliness. I didn't do it; it just grew—and it's Marcia herself, with the radiant essence of her spirit penetrating the flesh."

The two men started down the road. Ledyard did his portrait work in an old barn which stood on the edge of a pine wood. It had been transformed by the artist's touch into a unique and delightful haunt.

Stephen fumbled for a match while Harty stood there in the darkness, his heart aching heavily.

"So it goes," he thought. "Some things have always come my way and passed Steve by. But when it came to a girl's heart, I had no more chance against him than a gutter pup in a dog show. It's the law, I guess, the law."

The light flared up palely, revealing the warm bits of color, the unfinished sketches on their easels, the quaint pottery and rich tapestries which lent such a fascinating atmosphere to the place.

Stephen threw a cloth from the largest canvas and stood behind it eagerly watching Harty's face.

Harty's first thought was that disappointment in love had turned his head. For the leering countenance upon the canvas bore some such resemblance to Marcia as Caliban might have to a human being. It was the portrait of a once beautiful woman distorted, disfigured, by some evil influence as sinister, as resistless as hypnotism; something which had laid its awful clutch upon her loveliness and choked it. The figure was Marcia's, the blue-black hair was hers, but the face—had Steve been mad when he painted those hateful eyes, that hideous mouth?

"Shades of Botticelli!" burst from Harty.

Stephen stepped forward and looked at his masterpiece. There was a terrible pause. Then the artist's breath began to struggle from his throat in guttural, choking gasps. The agony in his ashy face made Harty groan.

"Somebody's tampered with it!" he managed to articulate.

Great beads of perspiration stood on his forehead. He turned to the door, his eyes flaming.

"By God!" he almost yelled. "Whoever he is, I'll break every bone in his body!"

Harty grabbed him.

"Don't be an ass," he cried. "Only one man could have done this, and you won't touch him. Listen, Steve. Remember your saying: 'I could forgive Marcia's brother anything,' and my answering: 'You may have to—he's capable of putting you to the test?'"

Ledyard sank into a chair. His strong frame shook from head to foot. Never before had Harty seen his self-control desert him; never, even when Stephen was penniless, had that lean face spelled defeat as it did now.

"Harty," he said hoarsely after a moment, "take it and come out to the pine woods. I'm going to burn every inch of it. Marcia must never know. I can't have it here—an angel besmirched with soot!"

"But Steve, Marcia expects to see it tomorrow, and how will you explain? You can fix it, old fellow. Don't give up hope. You've done harder jobs with that brush of yours."

"Harty, do you think I'd touch that cursed thing and try to lift that coat of malice? Marcia is buried under there. I can't resurrect her. I said I didn't paint that portrait, and I'd make a botch of it

," explained Egeria optimistically, "even with one pigeon left, it seems one needn't quite give e of a flock. Our Neighbor says if Tinker is a it will be in the course of nature for some other to come and fly away with her; but if Tinker is tleman, things will be much more satisfactory. the proper time comes, he will simply go forth ring home a bride."

neither of these predictions was fulfilled. Weeks d. Tinker's whistle softened to a throaty croon. attered patches of pinfeathers spread and devel- into a glossy coat of iridescent sheen; but as to most extended use those airy wings were put to an awkward flutter from the shelf-like porch of little house to the chicken corral. Here, snubbed he pirate Black Minorcas, chased by the nervous horns, our little pigeon picked up a precarious ex-ce, roosting in a despised corner of the poultry by night. The conclusion was gradually forced s that Tinker, never having met another pigeon, ust suspect that she herself was a pigeon—mistak- herself for some inferior brand of barnyard fowl!

his will never do!" exclaimed Egeria. "If Tinker a celibate, how are we to acquire our flock?"

uppose," I cried, "we buy a pair of pigeons and a mate for Tinker!"

sooner thought of than set on foot! That very rnoon, Candida, Egeria and I visited a pigeon farm, thousands of rainbow wings flash in the sun, list- d to so many dove-like voices crooning together that dida clapped her hands to her ears, complaining they sounded like "the roar of a herd of bulls."

mong such bewildering variety of pigeon pulchri- choice was difficult. But the owner of the farm, ttle Scotch lady who had been a milliner (in Cali- you will generally find that everybody has been ething else, before he turned into what he has now) helped us with disinterested advice. So at a selection was made. We brought them home in ket box, with holes punched in the lid. Don Juan Santa Rosa, as pretty a pair of pigeons as heart ld desire—and established them temporarily plebian brooder run till they could settle and raise a mate Tinker.

The new arrivals interested her from the start. Flus- , fascinated, deserting the Leghorns and the pirate rcas, she hovered restless outside the brooder, ing, dancing, flirting, till it was quite evident to that Tinker was a gentleman—and heels over head love with the charming Santa Rosa!

Here was complications! Yet who could blame poor er? Any pigeon would have proved a revelation. Santa Rosa, snowy-white from base of rosy bill to tip of coral toe, except for iridescent crest and bars across the tail and wings, was irresistible, bewitching. Alas! shyly fascinated, too. Don Juan, her rightful lord, a handsome, full-blooded Homer, scolded and fumed. Tinker, outside the bars, strutted and crooned. For a day or two the situation remained doubtful, delicate; till Santa Rosa, returning somewhat sadly to a chastened sense of duty, retired within the little house to lay eggs, leaving poor Tinker on the peak of the brooder, deserted, forlorn.

What would be the next step in the little drama? Eagerly we awaited developments, even Candida being betrayed into an expression of interest not exclusively gustatory.

"If Tinker weds one, may the other be a squab?" she wished to know.

At last the pearly eggs were chipped. Danger of a return to the pigeon farm having passed, Don Juan's and Santa Rosa's cottage might be safely transferred to the fig tree in the chicken corral: where——

It isn't nature faking! It really happened! Tinker, the humble Tinker, sinking pride, self-interest, promptly installed himself in unique family triangle—as nurse! Awkward, astraddle, vicariously paternal, he brooded the young birds, while Don and Santa Rosa, glorying in recovered freedom, dipped and swept in happy far-flung circles to the misty blue of the morning Sierras.

But was virtue rewarded? Did Tinker win a bride? Again one squab died. Again it was the male pigeon which grew up!

Everybody resented this—Candida, Egeria, Don Juan, Santa Rosa, Tinker and I! So that Peter, as the overgrown, unwelcome addition to our flock was called, passed anything but a happy youth. Pecked at by his parents, bullied by his quondam nurse, he sat a melancholy hunch on the peak of the brooder roof, while Don Juan, Santa Rosa and Tinker Bell (who had at last discovered the use of wings,) soared and darted in happy flight.

"Drat Fate!" quoth Egeria, provoked from her usual equability of temper. "Two bachelors on our hands! We might as well give up the flock!"

And it was at this juncture that Macaroons, our tactful Macaroons (the buff-colored puppy, who can generally be depended upon to do the proper thing at the proper moment,) appeared late one afternoon upon the lawn with——

"Engeria!" I cried. "Whatever has Macaroons in his mouth?"

"A chicken! He must be whipped," Egeria was prompt to reply.

So we ran. And Macaroons, the impeccable, the maligned, presented us with—not a chicken (chickens weren't what we had been wishing for!) but——

Wendy bird! The prettiest, snowiest of lady pigeons, with frightened coral eyes!

"Poor, poor little creature!" cried Egeria, while Macaroons, having gracefully relinquished his booty, waved feathery obsequious tail. "One wing is clipped. How cruel! How stupid! How lucky our nice Macaroons wasn't a cat!"

So we carried Wendy to the chicken corral. A bride for Tinker at last!

But pigeon preferences proved as irresponsible, as difficult to guide, as those of human sort. Don Juan, paying ardent attentions, conceived the prompt ambition of setting up a second establishment—turning Mormon, in short! Peter, waking to a tardy sense of personal prowess, disputed his father's claim; fought him; whipped him; strutted bully-wise about the corral; while Tinker, taking advantage of Don's preoccupation, returned to his first allegiance, fluttering softly about the little house in the fig tree, where Santa Rosa brooded her second pair of eggs.

Thus, for a few days, complications became excessively complicated. Jealousy raged; love songs and battle songs resounded. Nobody dared go far from home, for everybody wanted to watch everybody else—Wendy being in no hurry to commit herself.

One could imagine the sad little story. Frightened, bruised, deprived of flight; most inexplicable, most poignant grief of all, again and again as the others rose to soar, Wendy would squat, would push, would almost spring, almost succeed in raising her little, maimed body, only to settle back despondent; snatched from familiar haunts, from her former mate—from babies, perhaps—the little pigeon drooped and pined, reconciliation to the new surroundings coming slowly. So gentle! so sensitive! so shy! It seemed an odd contradiction that Peter, the bully, the tough (somehow Peter never did acquire manners!) should at last have won her preference. In a hen's nest on the ground, very still, Wendy brooded her pearly eggs, just as Don and Santa Rosa's new family hatched out.

"Squabs?" questioned Candida, perennially hopeful. "Will we have them next Sunday for breakfast?"

"They are too young, yet," Egeria and I compromised; so put her off from day to day, till——

Like butterflies emerging from the cocoon, weak of wing, timid in the light, fluttering a little way, catching and clinging among the trailing grapes, boldly trying anew (so beautiful is the first flight of pigeons!) Shasta and Lucky, surviving squab food, ("Disappointment, I shall call him," Candida affirmed, "for to me he is!") took their place among the pigeon flock.

There were now three mated pairs, the ladies snowy of plumage, slender of form; their lords proudly purple, strutting iridescent in the sun; dipping and glancing, dancing with rosy feet, bobbing and courtesying, squabbling, crooning and chuckling, prinking and preening on the brooder roof, darting swiftly to our whistle—a pretty study, a charming sight! There was also Tinker, the slate-gray bachelor, more chived, more put upon, day by day. Even Santa Rosa, the ungrateful, had not a glance for him now; while Shasta and Lucky, impudently evicting him from the little green house in the pepper tree, helped with the others to pull out his back hair.

So much for pigeon ethics!

"Why in thunder," demanded Egeria, "doesn't he go forth and bring home that bride?"

Then one morning she came—a little drab lady, very meek, attaching herself doubtfully to the fluttering outskirts of the flock. Timid and insignificant, no one paid much attention to her—not even Tinker.

"Still, in very self-defense, he'll settle down at last," we opined, and were duly elated over the thought of Tinker mated. Unlucky bird! That same week came sudden word from our perennially attentive real-estate man that our rented bungalow was sold! We and the pigeons must seek another home. There was a fortnight to find it in.

Which we did—our adventures during the quest being various and instructive. Here, faithful to my theme, I follow up the brief but veracious history of our pigeon flock.

Though there were brooder runs on the new place, a pepper tree, they never settled down. In confinement their happiness was gone. They fretted, quarreled, drooped. One attempt at escape they made, led by Peter, ever the boldest of the band. He, discovering a break in the poultry netting, pushed and shoved his fellows through. Egeria and I, hearing the flutter, ran. Too late! The flock had fled toward its Altadena home—all but Wendy of the clipped wing, the broken heart.

Poor little Wendy bird, ever unfortunate! This last desertion proved too much for her. Though we hastened to the recapture of our pigeons, warned by impassioned telephone messages from the fat gentleman who had bought our home—who didn't like pigeons, "not even in pie!"—Wendy refused to be comforted; refused to return to her half-hatched eggs; refused attention to Peter's imperious dance and call. Pretty as ever, unruffled of plumage and very still, she lay in Egeria's pitying palm. Poor little Wendy—dead of a broken heart!

"And lice," added the practical Egeria. "I told you we should have whitewashed those runs!"

There is no pleasure in quarrelsome, unhappy pigeons. By this time, Tinker, deserted of the drab lady, had not a feather in the back of his neck. So we prevailed upon our Neighbor from Missouri (he'd expressed himself as very regretful to have us move away,) to take Shasta and Lucky off our hands. Don and Santa Rosa we gave to a black-eyed, teasing boy, who promised solemnly, "if one died, to eat the other to keep it from being lonely!" Peter and Tinker we set free. Dipping and skimming, they sped to the misty blue of the morning Sierras. Fate from the first had been against our pigeon flock.

"And I," quoth Candida, "must return to New York for my squabs!"

ALICE CALHOUN HAINES.

The Discovery.

In wrath from her I parted,
When Celia said me nay;
I deemed her stony-hearted,
And went my weary way.
'Tis thus her wont to use all
The swains lured to her side,
For each a curt refusal—
"She has no heart," I cried.

Thereafter once I heard her—
I could but listen there—
While in my mind was murder
And in my heart despair.
Unkempt, sore needing barber,
And scarcely to be known,
Hard by fair Celia's arbor
I hid with grief alone.

Then was Love's every term heard;
'Twas each she would repeat:
"My love!" she fondly murmured,
And fondlier yet, "My sweet!"
Of grief must I today sing,
For next came, I profess,
The sound of close embracing
And many a dear caress.

Grief wrapped me round like cerements,
Life seemed a heavy load,
To know these wished endearments
On one unseen bestowed.
At last I broke from cover
In agony acute—
To find the hidden lover
Her little terrier brute!

The "Con" Knew His Duty as Usher.

The congregation of a certain church is not "exclusive," but some of its members were surprised at the appointment of a new usher. They said that he might be a very good young man, but he had not belonged very long to the church, and, besides, it seemed unlikely that a street-car conductor would suit the etiquette of a house of worship. But the trustees said that he had been chosen for that very reason, adding: "We need a man of that kind to deal with the end-seat hog. He is a greater nuisance in the church than in the cars. Early in the service he plants himself at the aisle end of a free pew and later-comers who are ushered into that pew fall all over him taking their places. It takes a man with grit to make him move along. This former conductor has the grit, and he has tact gained from experience. That is why we made him usher."—[Washington Herald.

A Whistler Story.

CHARLES L. FREER of Detroit is America's leading collector of Whistler paintings, among Mr. Freer's treasures being the famous peacock-room decorations from the dining-room of the Leyland House in London.

Mr. Freer is also a collector of Whistler anecdotes, one of which he told at a recent dinner.

"Whistler," he said, "once undertook to get a fellow-painter's work into the autumn Salon. He succeeded, and the picture was hung. But the painter, going to see his masterpiece with Whistler on varnishing day, uttered a terrible oath when he beheld it.

" 'Good gracious,' he groaned, 'you're exhibiting my picture upside down!'

" 'Hush,' said Whistler. 'The committee refused it the other way.' "

Not Literary.

"THE late Frederick Burton was the world's foremost authority on the American Indian," said a Yale ethnologist. "Burton was almost alone in his field. There are, you know, so few students of Indian lore.

"He said to me once, with a vexed laugh, that he found it quite as impossible to discuss the Indian with people as a Boston critic found it to discuss poetry with the girl he took down to dinner.

"The girl was very pretty. Leaning her dimpled elbows on the table, she said to the critic:

" 'And what is your lecture to be about, Professor?'

" 'I shall lecture on Keats,' he replied.

" 'Oh, Professor,' she gushed, 'what are keats?' "

But Seldom.

PROF. BRANDER MATTHEWS, the brilliant essayist and scholar of Columbia, said at a dinner party, apropos of changes in the meaning of words:

"At the height of our mayoralty campaign a little boy, looking up from his adventure book, said to his father:

" 'Father, what's a cormorant?'

" 'A cormorant,' the father answered, as he turned the huge pages of his newspaper, 'is a corrupt and hoggish politician.'

" 'But,' the lad objected, 'I thought it was a bird.'

" 'Oh, yes, to be sure,' the other agreed. 'The word is used in that sense now and then.' "

Church and School.

"WHEN the late Philip Auld Harrison Brown, rector of St. John's Chapel, was a young man, he used to go to Maine for the summer," said a Trinity trustee in New York. "Dr. Brown often told of an unforgettable incident connected with one of his first Maine sermons.

"Two children had come to church alone, and the minister noticed them from the start of his discourse. They sat in a great, high-backed pew, side by side, very solemn.

"After a while they got tired. Evidently they thought that church etiquette was the same as the etiquette of the village school. They climbed down from their pew, and the boy took his tiny sister by the hand, and led her up the aisle, stopping in front of the preacher.

" 'Please, sir,' he said, 'may we go home?'

" 'Yes,' said Mr. Brown.

"And they turned and soberly departed, hand in hand."

How She Entered Society.

DR. COOK, discussing with a group of Washington interviewers his famous banquet of "putrid seal," said with a laugh:

"Sacrifices are always being made. Men, in order to succeed, sacrifice pleasure, they sacrifice their honor, they sacrifice their youth. These sacrifices excite no remark. But any sacrifice of the stomach arouses wonder and awe.

"Women have sacrificed, for instance, much to enter society. I've heard of many of their sacrifices, and yet there's only one that I remember vividly.

"A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of fowl and salad, she noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess's eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe.

"The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and swallowed it calmly. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

" 'Do you think,' she said to her daughter afterward, 'that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?' "

The First Bath.

MARSHALL J. WINSLOW, the charity expert of Duluth, said at a charity-ball supper:

"The time is now at hand when tramps come in out of the cold to sleep in wayfarers' lodges. There they must, alas for them! strip and bathe. Among the stripped tramps crowding about the baths really amusing witticisms on cleanliness are sometimes heard.

"One bitter autumn night, I saw two tramps, bared for the watery ordeal, regarding one another quizzically.

" 'Bill,' said the first tramp, 'yer dirtier than I am. Ye certainly are.'

" 'Well, ain't I older?' Bill replied."

The Cook of Hoboken.

POLICE COMMISSIONER BAKER of New York, anent a policeman who had made a particularly daring and successful arrest, said:

"He got his man by working out his clew with daring logic. He didn't let any timidity stand in his way. He didn't, out of false delicacy, hesitate like the Hoboken cook.

"A Hoboken man whose hen roost had been robbed said to his cook:

" 'See here, Lily, sleeping as close to the hennery as you do, didn't you hear those chicken thieves last night?'

"Lily hesitated. Then she stammered:

" 'Yes, sir. I certainly did hear them chickens hollerin', and I heard men's voices.'

" 'Why in thunder, then, didn't you do something?'

"Lily burst into tears.

" 'Oh,' she sobbed, 'I knowed my old poppy was out there in that hen coop, and I wouldn't have had him think I'd lost confidence in him for all the chickens in the world.' "

Farthest North.

THE following conversation, heard on an electric car, between Redondo Beach and Los Angeles, as will be seen, throws an entirely new light on the North Pole controversy, and settles the whole matter.

One of the talkers was a veteran from the Soldiers' Home, who had been enjoying a mild spree out of bounds. The other, old also, had, by his own account, been a soldier of fortune. Their voices were high and shrill in the effort to reach each other's deaf ears, and they cackled with senile laughter at their own cleverness.

"How many times did you say you had been to Alaska?" asked G.A.R.

"Twelve times," replied the other.

"My," admiringly said G.A.R., "that's traveling!"

"Yes, sir, I've been to as far as Cape York, and there ain't a man can go farther north than that! I know that country! Cook and Peary ain't neither of 'em been to the Pole! Did you ever see a dog that'd eat your boots like Cook said his dogs did? No sir, that ain't no proof that he's been to the Pole! Say, I'll tell you what those fellers have been doin'! They've been anchored up some river there, comfortable as you please, drinkin' good whisky and fixin' it up between 'em.

"Peary says to Cook: 'You go down and tell your story and fool half the people, and then I'll come along and fool the rest of 'em, and we'll make a lot of money! Sure! And all the poor fools are a buyin' the papers and Cook and Peary are a shakin' hands over it and laughin' at 'em! Why, I guess I know nobody can't get further than Cape York!" A. G. G.

The Bad Bill.

"HE reminds me"—Senator La Follette was condemning a corrupt politician who had come a cropper—"he reminds me of Harrison and his bad $5 note.

"Harrison hurried down to New York for the Hudson-Fulton celebration. He had in his vest pocket a bad $5 note, and one night after a banquet, getting out of a taxicab, he handed the driver this bad note by mistake. The driver gave him his change—a dollar bill—and drove off very hurriedly.

"Then Harrison became aware of what he had done, and he shouted to the man:

" 'Hey, stop! That bill's bad.'

" 'It's good enough for you!' the driver called back defiantly, putting on even greater speed.

"And Harrison, examining his dollar change under a street lamp, perceived that it was a counterfeit."

Before the Drug Act.

"BEFORE we had governmental inspection of drugs," said a chemist of Washington, "queer things used to happen. Here is one.

"A Washington man was taken violently ill, and his wife got him a box of nux pills. He took three and recovered. The remainder of the box was put away in a damp closet.

"Some time later, going to the closet, the man found that two of six pills left in the box had sprouted. A healthy green shoot had sprung from each. Instead, you see, of being nux pills, they were nothing but peas covered with a coat of flour."

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Ground

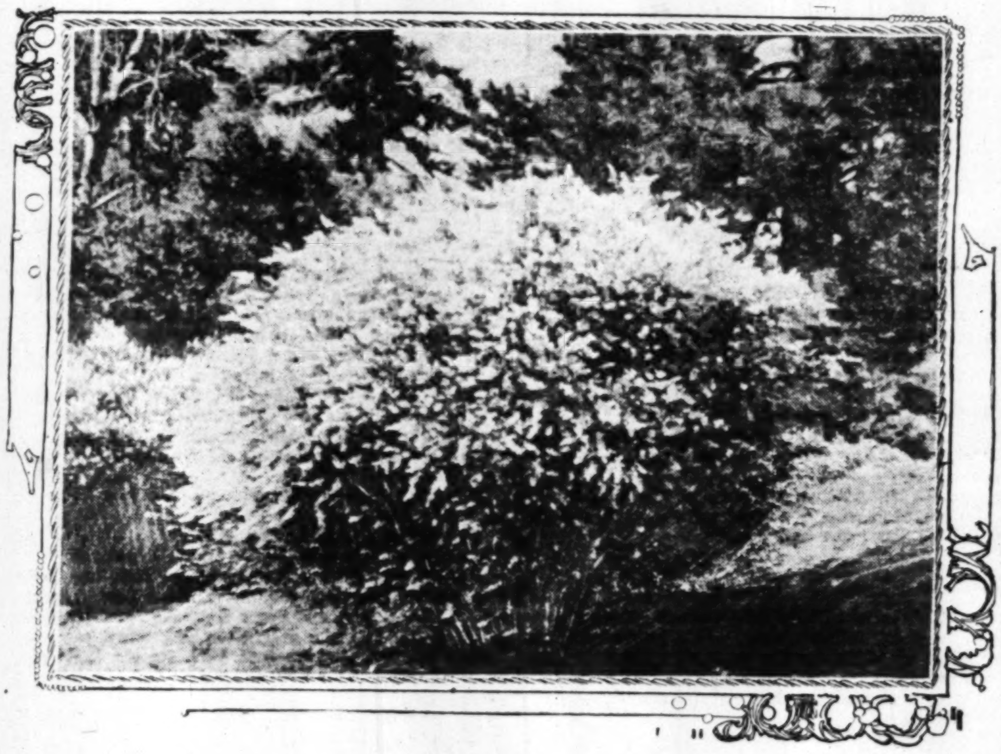
HOME SURROUNDINGS.

THEY INDICATE THE CHARACTER OF THE OWNERS.

By Ernest Braunton.

IF one is possessed of sufficient means, the home surroundings are supposed to express the ideals of the owner. In the case of a home owner of limited means there must still be visble, both indoors and out, somewhat of an index of the character of the occupant. It is because of the great range in ideals (and ideas) that we have such a complexity of houses and gardens. Usually among the middle classes, where the owner, man or woman, has made the garden, there is evident, somewhere, an insight into the leading characteristic of the builder.

The writer has been in Los Angeles as gardener, nurseryman, and landscape designer for more than a score of years, and has learned fairly well to judge of the character of the inmates by the home surroundings as viewed in passing. Plants are often purchased for the same reason that jewels are, not because the buyer especially admires them, but it is "stylish" to possess them or is considered an evidence of wealth or "ability to pay." In the nursery trade the writer met nearly as many sorts of people as may be found among the customers of a grocery store, except that all purchase groceries while a very few do not buy plants. The trend of our people is to have gardens, and they cannot well escape it in a land of perpetual summer. So it comes about that nearly all are forced to buy plants.



CEANOTHUS INTEGERRIMUS MOUNTAIN LILAC.

In planning home grounds, one meets a far better class of people, our very best. Seldom, indeed, does one find among the people one who might not be truly classed as among nature's noblemen or noblewomen. Other persons of means will have gardens, comparatively fine ones, too, but seldom are they of sufficient extent, so that a plan and specifications are imperative; or if large, they are meaningless and without beauty, being merely a jumble or collection of plants of more or less beauty. Those who have home grounds properly planned and planted are not confined to any particular class or classes as regards possession of this world's goods, but are found among people of all degrees of wealth. If often occurs that owners who can afford but a two or three-thousand-dollar cottage will pay a hundred dollars for plan and specifications for the proper use and planting of their grounds. The writer has found these people, in every walk of life, to be true nature lovers, by nature refined; also educated, whether at school or through observation, and study by the light of the "midnight oil." They are always democratic, sometimes to a most unusual degree, are generous, amiable and slow to anger, are rejoiced to hear an interpretation of nature as applied to the home grounds, and are invariably looking to comfort rather than appearance or "style" in the home surroundings. They are, on the whole, the most agreeable people the writer has ever met. Seek the garden lover; you will find that person a jewel, even though a "diamond in the rough."

Our California Mountain Lilacs.

In the vicinity of Los Angeles, on hill and mountain, we have nine species of ceanothus or wild lilac (so-called.) The popular name is given them because of their resemblance to the lilac of the garden both in form and color, for the flowers of these shrubs are either white or some shade of blue, by far the greater number being blue.

They really are buckthorns, and belong to that family, the natural order being Rhamnaceae. Not all species are thorny, though nearly all are more or less so. Not all the species have the same range, for some are found on the mesa below the foothill and others inhabit the pine belt at an altitude of 5000 feet. All are showy, worthy of a place in any large garden, easy of care and respond well to cultivation. They are quite easy to transplant when young, and may even be moved when of large size if proper precautions and care are exercised. Other species abound farther to the north and a collection of all in one of our parks would prove a valuable and interesting addition.

A Botanic Exhibit.

At the recent Pasadena Flower Show, P. D. Barnhart had a botanic exhibit of more than 100 species and varieties of plants; in most specimens showing flowers, fruit (or seeds) and foliage. For one who has time to study them, these exhibits prove quite a liberal education in the recognition of our garden plants. These exhibits used to be a feature of our Los Angeles shows, and each one is made better than the last. By the way, some of our gardeners and tradesmen in the plant line seem to regard Mr. Barnhart as a joke, especially since the recent local Burbankian controversy. But whether he was right or wrong in that acrimonious discussion, the writer wishes to testify to the fact that the "insuppressible Barnhart" has been one of the most thorough and persistent students of plant life that ever came to Southern California; and the writer knows of no person of the same number of years residence in our end of the State who has gleaned and retained more practical and technical knowledge of exotic plant life than Mr. Barnhart. His exhibits of a large list of plants at our local flower shows evidence a wide knowledge of the contents of our gardens and a most persistent effort to secure the greatest variety possible of the better and more interesting subjects.

A Correction.

An article has been freely copied by Los Angeles and other papers in which it is stated that the specific name of our red-flowering eucalypt (E. ficifolia) means "fig-leaved," and is a misnomer. This statement is wrong—the name means "ficus-leaved," the fig only being one member of the great ficus family. Ficus is the botanical name known all the world over so that plantsmen of all nations recognize the meaning of "ficus-leaved," while "fig" is only an English word for a part of the family, and not in use except where our language is spoken. The ficus family contains at least 500 species and the leaves of our red-flowering eucalypt resemble those of a considerable number of species. Were they several times their actual size they would not be unlike some of the species known locally as rubber trees.

The Landscape Designer.

The lanscape gardener must understand the fundamental principles of architecture in design and proportion, and some of the technical work of the architect. He must, for instance, be able to make a plan on a scale, and be skilled in geometric and mechanical drawing. STREET AND ROADSIDE TREES.

ROADSIDE IMPROVEMENT IMPELLED BY ECONOMIC CONSIDERATIONS.

JUST in proportion as it has been proven to have paid the ornamentation of streets and roadsides with trees has progressed. Where keen business men have bought land for subdivision it has almost invariably been sidewalked, curbed and planted with trees. The long-time owner, having clung to his land only for having been thrown in with the progressive spirit of the day, seldom improves his property even though it be cut up into lots. It is to the business man of affairs that we must look for all reforms of value.

As an illustration, prohibition has been a party cry for many generations, but is not being brought about by the party bearing that name. When manufacturers who work men in gangs found that on Monday mornings one or two men in each gang were absent because of a Saturday-night's spree, and the efficiency of the whole body of workmen was thereby impaired, they became ardent prohibitionists. The question became an economic one, and no questions of morals or sentiment was considered. When representative business men are impressed with the pecuniary profit to be derived from having streets and highways planted with suitable trees,

"It is no sooner said than done,"
"The field is in a moment won."

The country roadsides are, as a rule, more unbeautiful than our city streets because of the weeds and rubbish allowed to accumulate. Before trees are planted, this condition should be remedied. If the roadsides were plowed after the close of the rainy season, harrowed down, smoothed and either cultivated or harrowed when the weeds were all started, no further growth would be made for the season. We have territory now in the city, however, which is sadly in need of improvement. What has been done of late has but slightly changed conditions obtaining a few years ago. That part of our city known as Gardena, then a village, was but four years ago the most unkempt center of population of like size to be found within a score of miles of our city limits. The writer looked it over in company with the business manager of our largest farm paper, returned to the office and wrote it up under the name of "Sleepy Hollow." The streets were dirty and weed-grown, vacant lots were covered with weeds and heaps of tin cans and similar refuse. Roadsides were lined with worn-out farm implements and vehicles, houses were unpainted to a far greater extent than noticed elsewhere. Yards were untidy, fences in need of repair and a general shiftless and untidy atmosphere hung over the place. Last week, it was noted that conditions have somewhat improved, but more remains to be done in this and nearly all of our territory properly known as "suburbs." Little is lacking to make these districts attractive, for the possibilities are considerable, but that little is one or more determined persons to awaken interest to the point where all will aid in correcting this slovenly community housekeeping. Investors and home seekers are not attracted by dirty streets bare of shade or shelter. After cleaning up a district, nothing will bring the property more quickly into demand than well-planted streets and roadsides.

A Great Natural Park.

In the Angeles Forest Reserve, near Los Angeles, the people of this section of the State have one of the grandest natural parks to be found anywhere. In it may be found nearly every variety of scenery the heart could wish, being surpassed in varied scenic splendor only by such noted parks as the Yosemite, Yellowstone and those containing some of the world's greatest wonders. In years to come, we shall have highways making this great park available. At present, the general public does not sufficiently appreciate the privileges extended by the government, and on account of rank vandalism and carelessness, our Uncle Samuel discourages visits to his immense domains. Should the public become sufficiently educated to the value and importance of this immense tract and help to jealously guard it as their own private property we may see the time when we may easily visit all parts and enjoy it to the fullest, but that day is not close at hand.

A GREAT NATURAL, ANGELES FOREST RESERVE.

Pasadena Flower Show.

The Pasadena Gardeners' Association held another flower show last week at which were exhibited some of the finest flowers ever seen on the Pacific Coast. It was remarked by many visitors that the standard of flowers of all sorts was slightly higher than those of any previous exhibit. Some jealousy may be aroused if any particular party or parties be given mention to the exclusion of others, but among the finest chrysanthemums ever seen in Pasadena there was one exhibit of pot plants that calls for special mention. Louis Fried, gardener to C. H. Garvey, had on exhibition a pot plant about three feet high and five feet across on which were blooming 723 full-sized white 'mums of the sort known as Beatrice May—the finest flowering-pot plant ever shown in Southern California. This gardener's effort is worthy of a valuable cup. Another plant in this lot had eighteen named varieties in bloom, of all colors and shades. These had been very skillfully grafted while the plant was young. Space forbids further mention of fine exhibits, of which there were scores.

In spite of the excellence of the material, the show was the most disappointing of any ever held in Pasadena, though no fault attaches to the management or exhibitors. Pasadena has no hall fit to exhibit plants or flowers in and the association was forced to procure a storeroom that lacked the three essentials so vital to success: space, light and air. The exhibits would have made a much better appearance if twice the floor space were available; the paucity of light precluded the possibility of seeing the flowers at their best, and the lack of fresh air caused the flowers to "go down" very soon after the opening, and of course that means both "down" and "out." Many renewals were necessary on the second day; something most unusual in a flower show. This association is not organized to make money—all the income is put back into the next show, the exhibits are drawn for the most part from the finest gardens in our State, owned by our wealthiest people. It seems a crying shame that a rich city like Pasadena, whose gardens are noted the world over, cannot erect a cheap but commodious and satisfactory pavilion for these exhibits that would soon make her flower shows famous the world over. No city of like population in the world has such fine gardens or fine flowers, none other may boast of such aggregate wealth; it seems a pity that these exhibits cannot be made such an attraction that it would be the proud boast of Pasadenans that the fame of her flower shows had spread around the globe in every civilized land. Such may come to pass if a few of her well-to-do citizens will that it should be.

Our Housing Commission.

This is a body that needs and merits the active support of every citizen, for it is engaged in the work of providing proper shelter and sanitary conditions for those who either cannot or will not live up to a reasonably human standard.

The whole idea is to procure homes for the laboring classes who are too poor to secure homes for themselves, and to do away with the overcrowding of tenement-houses. The trend of housing conditions throughout the world today is that of the establishment of individual home life, and the abolishment of the overcrowded and unsanitary conditions in the tenement mode of life.

Investigators have found that the establishment of small homes, or the improvement of old resident property so that two or three families may be properly housed, gives more privacy to such families and develops a more sanitary, healthful, and moral mode of life than is to be found in dark, illy-ventilated, poorly-lighted, and improperly-constructed tenement-houses. The formation of such a company, vigorously and intelligently managed, would be the greatest boon to our city, and would meet a requirement of which there is a sad need at present, for a great hardship is worked upon the inhabitants of our poorer tenements and house courts when the buildings are ordered demolished and no provision is made for the shelter of the evicted tenants.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

THE VALUE OF BIRDS.

ONE'S LOVE FOR THE BEAUTIFUL AND RARE SETS THE PRIZE.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THERE is probably no subject more elastic in its solution than that dealing with the relative value of birds. We read of show-room specimens bringing what seems excessively high prices, and then again we all know of sales in the market-place that are correspondingly low. It all depends on what you are playing for. A show-room bird possesses the same relative values to the fancier and sportsman that fast horses do to a Robert Bonner, or choice works of art to a Pierpont Morgan. The gratification of one's love for the beautiful and exceptional is the gauge that sets the price to the lover of beautiful birds much as it does the lover of art in rare and beautiful objects of art. So that when you read of a bird bringing $50 or a pen $250, just bear in mind that the sum represents what the buyer is willing to pay. If he wins heavily with the birds, and thereby gains prestige and much publicity, the investment may also prove of commercial value—but that is more or less a speculative consideration.

When it comes to economic values based on commercial returns, the value of birds for breeding purposes is based on much more practical lines. Here the figures vary from $3 and up for males, and $2 and up for females. Quality cuts some figure, not only as to product in hen fruit and carcass, but also from a breeding point of view. Birds that have been carefully bred and managed by their owners, thus breeding reasonably true to type and color of plumage, with good economic values as producers, possess a value peculiar to the strain which other specimens of the same breed may be shy of, though appearing to the general observer to be equally as good. Breeding stock from such a strain may well be worth $3 and up for females, and $5 and up for males. Eggs for hatching should be worth at least $2 for thirteen, and day-old chicks 25 cents each. These suggestions have nothing to do with market poultry, which is purely a matter of local prevailing conditions.

In a country which is still largely in its period of development, it is reasonable to expect many changes in all lines of rural activity. To no business does this apply more forcibly than to poultry culture. The man owning a poultry ranch today is possibly running a grocery store six months later, or has left the country for other pastures green. This constant changing throws many poultry plants as well as breeding stock on the market, so that the beginner can often secure good stock of well-known strains, at bargain prices. The great clearinghouse for this business is the liner advertising in The Times, which gives an epitome of available openings in the business, and to which the buyer's attention is directed.

The Dragoon Pigeon.

The pigeon fancy in Southern California certainly a growing one, and the local association will undoubtedly be in line with a fine show this winter. Among varieties bred quite extensively it is quite safe to say that the Carriers and the Hen pigeons are prime favorites, with Tumblers, Runts, Pouters and Dragoons as close seconds. In England, the latter is very popular, and it also finds many friends in New England. In type, the Dragoon should be nearly as large as the carrier, with a commanding and graceful carriage, plump and compact; neck, short and thick; breast, broad and prominent; back, flat; wings, strong with flights well above tail, which should be short, also the legs; head wedge-shaped with stout beak and mandible. Usually the bird is a rich deep blue, with broad bars clearly defined, though like all pigeons variants in color of plumage are easily obtainable by cross-breeding. The illustration shown herewith pictures the champion Chequer Dragoon Cock at the Birmingham (England) Dairy Show.

Proper Foods and Good Conditions.

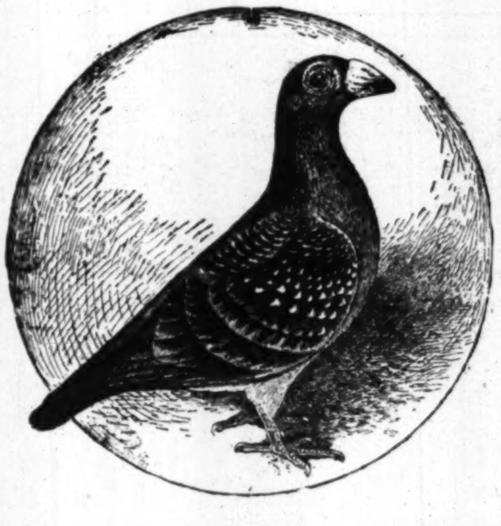
The following observations from the pen of an experienced Australian breeder contained in a letter to The Times are so pertinent with valuable suggestion and sound reasoning that we give them place:

"The hen in best laying condition has surplus fat. She has surplus energy. A very fat hen seldom lays well; a poor hen cannot lay well. The first part of the egg to be formed is the yolk, which contains 30 per cent of albumen and 64 per cent. of fat. Food is first used to maintain the body. New growth and production generally comes from the surplus after the bodily wants have been satisfied. A very fat hen does not lay because her condition has become one of debility, and because her tissues are weak and flabby. Fowls are naturally grain eaters. A large part of their food therefore should be the cereals. Note the wide variation in the composition of the various grains, each one of which has its own peculiar flavor and value. Corn is an excellent grain. It is perhaps the grain most relished by fowls. Therein lies the danger. Fowls eat it so greedily that it being a fattening food they are likely to become overfed when it is fed too freely. When properly cooked, though fed every day, no evil results follow. Wheat is perhaps the best grain for poultry, and its byproducts are among the safest and most satisfactory of foods. Heavy oats are perhaps next in value, light oats are a delusion. Peas are the richest, and one of the best of poultry foods. Barley is excellent."

The Sages and the Prophets.

The movement to carry university education, and especially from the College of Agriculture, direct to the farmers is in every way commendable. For the most part the movement finds its strongest expressions in the Farmers' Institute and in the University farm schools, one at Davies, in the Sacramento Valley, and the other at San Luis Obispo. There was held at the former a short course in poultry culture covering the period from October 11 to 23, at which a number of experts together with the university authorities gave a course of lectures and practical demonstrations treating of the salient features of successful methods in handling poultry in this State. The topics commanding widest attention had to do with Feeding and Management, Houses and Yards, Methods of Judging and Applying the rules of the Standard of Perfection, Artificial Incubation and Brooding, Line Breeding, Marketing of Carcass and Eggs, Insect Pests, and Diseases and their Remedies. Much of this information gleaned, we understand, is to be published in bulletin form later on, thus making it available to the poultry fraternity at large.

In connection with this work we should like to see the university import outside talent of recognized authority. Men like Drovenstedt, McGrew, Rice, Butterfield, Babcock, Sewell, Dryden, and others, all of whom are to poultry culture what Bailey is to horticulture and Burbank to plant breeding. Then we have our own sages and prophets in such men as Henry Berrar, who has served at leading shows from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and S. Tyler of Pasadena, who served his novitiate with such veterans as Felch, Williams, Becknell, Crawford and others, gaining a training in web and feather, spanning England, Canada and the United States, and covering a period of fifty years. And there are others. Why not throw them into the university agricultural spot light?



A CHAMPION CHEQUER DRAGOON COCK.

The Homing Pigeon vs. the Swallow.

Pigeon fanciers and sportsmen will be interested in an experiment recently made in Antwerp, Belgium, testing the flying speed of the ordinary chimney swallow of Europe (Hirundo rustica) as compared to that of the Homing pigeon. Several pairs of these birds had nests under the eaves of his house, and without great difficulty he caught one of the swallows and marked it with a splash of red paint for identification. Then he shipped the bird by rail, together with a consignment of Homing pigeons that were being trained to the town of Compiegne, in Northern France, a distance of 147 miles. The morning after their arrival, pigeons and swallow were liberated simultaneously at 7:15 o'clock. The Homers, following their natural instinct, circled round and round many times before getting their bearings, but the swallow darted away toward the north immediately after its cage was opened. Sixty-seven minutes later the watcher in Antwerp saw the swallow enter its nest, while the first pigeons did not arrive for four hours and seven minutes. The former flew at a rate of nearly 132 miles an hour, but the speed of the pigeons averaged only slightly more than thirty-five and one-half miles an hour. This latter time is considered slower than that at which the Homer is capable under ordinary conditions, but, granting this fact, the superiority of the swallow is only too evident.

Counting Chickens After They Are Hatched.

It seems that Uncle Sam wants an honest count and correct returns on his chicken business in 1910. The last census was incomplete from the fact that it eliminated poultry under three months of age—thus "counting out" nearly all the birds hatched for that year. Another "missing link" in the census of 1900 was the elimination of all small or family flocks, because they did not come under the classification of "farms." The aggregate value of these two omissions runs into big money, hence it will be Uncle Samuel's his many enumerators to include all three months and also all the back-yard cities and towns. A request for names of all city poultrymen is being sent out Bureau, and it is hoped that the inform may be sent in direct to the director of Washington prior to January 1, 1910. tion is wanted for the purpose of checking tors in the cities where poultry plants are it is urged that all persons interested lend their coöperation in an effort to obtain census of the poultry industry for 1910.

aria Ivanovna laughed, and then there was a move- in the crowd, and we saw that the iron gate was opened. We flocked through, crossed the court- and went to a large and light room in the great building opposite. A few minutes later we were shown to the room where the prisoners received their guests. I followed the little bride, and Maria Ivanovna called to me to visit Cage 27 later.

On either side of the reception-room was a partition of white wood with little windows covered with wire netting. Behind each window could be seen the blurred face of a prisoner. We found Arkady Dmitrovitch's cage.

"Miloshka, darling," said a voice from within, and the little wife twittered back. I stood aside, but she insisted on my coming forward, and presented me to her husband.

"Very agreeable," he said, in the polite formula; then the two went on twittering with great rapidity, as though they were afraid they would never have time to say all the charming things lovers tell each other. I closed my ears, not difficult, for at all the thirty cages people were talking to their friends. At the next window a wrinkled old woman and a ragged urchin of about six years old were speaking with a man. The boy was standing on tiptoe so as to see the face behind the grille. My reputed brother was in hilarious spirits, bubbling over with excitement at having a chance to talk, but it made one feel almost giddy to look at him long, for between us were two grilles, the first of wire work with a rather coarse mesh, and about ten inches from it an inner grille of a much finer mesh.

The door at the back of the cage opened for a moment, and a warder thrust into the prisoner's hand a little box. It was a present his wife had brought, some collars and a silk scarf.

"How you spoil me," he said to her; but he could not kiss his thanks, for the double grille was between them.

Then he told her that he was reading a great deal, and giving part of his time to learning English.

. . . .

"Quick," said Maria Ivanovna, running up to us; "come and see my student."

She took me down to Cage 27, and a golden curly head bowed at the other side of the wire lattice.

There was no time to talk, the twenty minutes were up, and the prisoners had to make way for a new batch.

"Come another day," said he of the golden curls, and disappeared from the cage.

ROTHAY REYNOLDS.

Conscription in Europe.

In most continental countries military malingering in order to avoid compulsory military service has reached the stage of a fine art. In fact, a formidable list of new crimes has been added to the statutes as a result, and medical men frequently have to suffer for their assistance in this particular kind of fraud.

Thus some time ago a number of Cologne doctors were arrested upon a charge of having administered pills to young conscripts. These pills consisted of drugs which produced the symptoms of heart disease so effectively as completely to deceive the military authorities, with the result that the conscripts were declared unfit for service. In this case, the fraud was brought to light by one of the conscripts dying as a result of an overdose of the medicine.

In Germany, where the conscript is frequently treated with the greatest harshness, there are very few towns where there are not specialists whose living depends solely in inducing such a condition of affairs as will render young men exempt by reason of unfitness.

In the French army it is quite common for youths to feign all manner of ills, deafness being the usual ailment trusted to in order to escape the service. As a result, the military doctors have made an especial study of methods of detecting feigned deafness and to trap the cunning youth who acts the part of a deaf man.

Another common practice in France is to tamper with the eyesight, though this frequently results in permanent injury. For instance, short sight is produced by wearing powerful concave glasses for a considerable time, despite the risk of bringing about permanent blindness. It is no uncommon occurrence for men to commit suicide rather than submit to forced service in the army.

In Eastern Europe most brutal methods are adopted by parents in order that their sons may be able to work for them instead of serving in the army. The boys are frequently ill-treated, and it is not at all uncommon even for their limbs to be broken or their sight to be destroyed in order to prevent any likelihood of their having to become soldiers.

Switzerland probably has the cheapest army and the least burdensome methods of conscription, the service being much lighter than in the other continental armies. Indeed, the conscript in the infantry army has to undergo actual training for only 135 days during the entire period of his service.

It is fixed by the constitution that no standing army can be maintained within the limits of the confederation, though every citizen is liable to military service for a period of twenty-five years. In addition to this all able-bodied men between the ages of 17 and 50 years are enrolled under a special category.

Th training during the first year is the heaviest; afterward the man has to practice with a rifle each year, while he is called out for training every alternate year. Every man is compelled to fire a certain number of rounds of ammunition under stringent regulations. In this way, by constant rifle practice, every man knows how to handle a rifle, while a large number are taught to ride, and all have a good knowledge of drill.

The officers are taken from the rank and file, but have to devote a lot of time to the practice and study of military operations. Those persons who are exempt from service for any reason have to pay for the luxury, being subject not only to a personal military tax, but also to special military taxes on their income and property.—[Pearson's Weekly.

but mum's the word. There's another alternative, though."

"What?" Ledyard's eagerness was pathetic.

"Leave it to me, old man. Go to Marcia's at 10 tomorrow. She'll be waiting for you."

As they parted, their hands met in a terrific grip.

Early the next morning Harty, in immaculate white flannels, and with a cheerful countenance which he had practised long before the mirror, presented himself at Marcia's abode. Her first words, however, nearly wrecked his debonairness.

"Harty, Pascal went away last night. He left a note for me."

A wild hope that the boy had confessed seized him.

"He was discontented," she continued sadly. "He's so talented I can't blame him for seeking advantages. He's going to Egypt."

"That's all he said?"

"Yes." Suddenly, with a tired sigh, she put her hand to her cheek, and her head drooped against Harty's shoulder.

"Harty," she said brokenly, "you're all I have left. You've said, more than once, that you wanted the right to take care of me. If you still want it, it's yours; but, oh, Harty, be kind to me!"

The man's heart contracted as he looked at the black head against his sleeve. How kind he could be, only he knew. This was the sorest temptation of his life. Then the unforgettable moment passed. He gave Marcia's shoulder a brotherly pat.

"Steve's the man to take care of you, Marcia," he said in his old brisk way. "He's worthy; I'm not. Steve would have gone to purgatory before destroying that portrait, but it was for a friend."

Marcia's eyes filled with a light that both blinded him and cleared his vision to what his course must be.

"I believe you, Harty," she said. "But who——"

He looked long into her eyes, praying that the recording angel's ears might be mercifully stopped for awhile. Then he plunged.

"Marcia, girl, you remember I didn't drop in as usual yesterday? I hated to disappoint you, but I was—drunk. I went to Steve's studio and cavorted about in tipsy idiocy, and with the aid of all the pigments I could find succeeded in ruining the portrait. At least, that's what I judge occurred. Steve is a friend, Marcia. He was willing to burn the portrait so you wouldn't know and despise me."

There was a free, straightforward grace about this girl that made her every movement characteristic and revealing. Now she drew away from Harty with a gesture of repugnance that sent the blood rushing to his face. But instantly she cried: "Oh, Harty dear!" and her tone both caressed and stabbed him. "After these three splendid years!"

"I know it, Marcia," he answered. "You taught me to keep eyes and conscience clear, and I thought 'twould be milk and soda pop for H. Matthews till kingdom come. But these are troublous times—I'd been dipping into racing and lost, and——"

Glancing up, he saw that his fiction fell on deaf ears. Marcia had forgotten his presence. She had caught sight of Ledyard through the window, and the proud yet humble glory of her love transfigured her face. Harty, gazing into her unseeing eyes as she stood there all of a lovely glow, knew that through the call of spirit she was asking Stephen's forgiveness for her lack of faith.

The next moment, Ledyard's big figure filled the doorway, and Harty looked away, gulping. Marcia's soft cry of rapture and Ledyard's fervent "Thank God!" reached his ears. Then he escaped, and tramped down the road, whistling jubilantly. Joy, bubbling, transcendant, flooded his soul, sweeping all the bitterness away.

"Lucifer himself couldn't keep those two apart," he thought, as he entered the shadow of the pines, "and it was too hard a job for Pascal Curtiss. Hartwell, my blessed infant," he said aloud, "you lighted a sacrificial fire last night—a fire that welded together two souls of twenty-two carat gold. This bottomless, seasick feeling will wear off, but by the great horn spoon! I hope you'll never have as severe an attack again!"

Suddenly he heard the whistle of an approaching engine. It was the train to the city, which would stop a hundred yards away. Harty looked down at his white flannels and shook his head. Then his hand, thrust into his pocket, encountered the crackle of bills. The old rollicking light kindled in his eyes. Three hours away were good fellows—a host of them—who would welcome him with wine and song and rousing cheer; there were charming and fashionable women in whose smiles the eligible Mr. Matthews might bask; the shifting kaleidoscope of mirth and froth and idleness, and—best of all—oblivion in place of racking memory.

When the train rounded the bend, Harty was sprinting toward it. But something stopped him. He turned, and walked slowly back into the woods.

Throwing himself down on the brown carpet, he lay staring up at the indigo summer sky through the delicate tracery of pine boughs. Then he turned his face to the friendly earth and fell asleep like a tired child.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

FIELD NOTES.

Why?

SOME one has stated that there may be growing in California eucalypts as tall as the famous trees of their nativity; one of the large real estate firms of the State is continually advertising the "fact" that Pasadena's loveliness is a myth, and the San Gabriel Valley a barren waste with only here and there a little "oasis" to relieve the eye of the hoodwinked tourist; a firm is selling a pear-blight remedy after the Department of Agriculture has announced that there is "no sich thing;" the Argentine ant has devoured no California babies; the white fly is always to be, but never found in a lot of new and unsuspected places; lemons have become the object of renewed interest to the railroads; the deciduous-fruit shippers have to pay $1.45 per hundred while the citrus growers pay $1 and $1.15; the railroads do not grant a "postage stamp" rate to the deciduous-fruit shippers, as is given to the citrus men; the constitution of California requires the assessment of bearing trees and vines in addition to the value of the land on which they grow; the county horticultural commissioner's offices throughout the State have not secured a decree of divorce from petty politics; the average grower knows well how to produce fruit, but insists on leaving the sale thereof to the other fellow; our university and other educational institutions have no department in which the agricultural student is taught the economics of selling the products he expects to raise.

The Tokay Market.

THE table-grape market has presented new and more puzzling features this season. The parent of these disconcerting conditions is the same old progenitor that has set the fruit business back a decade in so many other lines of this industry—lack of organized distribution. It is raining viciously as this is written, ond has been so doing for two days, and the Taft platform of six-by-sixes under my window will not creak with the weight of statesmanship tomorrow. However, the belated grape shippers can watch the President go by without neglecting their work, for what can they do but stand idly by and wish they had cleaned up their Tokay crops a week ago.—"There is a reason," as "Postum" says, and it is that a number of large growers have been holding away from shipping till the other fellows slaughtered their fruit in congested markets and thus leave a free and lucrative finish for the big producers. It was an ideal strategem, but Weatherman Taylor in the tower up on K street was unable to deliver one great essential to the coup—clear weather—and the largest shipper of the valley says the remainder of the Tokay crop is ruined. And the worst part of it is some of the finest and most abundant crops of this fruit were on the waiting list when the floodgates of heaven were opened.

It is no great evidence of prophetic power to have forecasted an outcome of this character by one who has seen the results of having to delay shipping fruit from any cause, as I have seen in the south during the nineties. And when I admonished one of the principal losers in the Tokay game that he was on the ragged edge on account of general indifference to systematic distributing of table grapes, it was not prophecy, but merely handing out the result of observation in other fruit lines. Some of the heaviest grape growers of the Sacramento have for years taken their chances with the weather man and made good just often enough to keep them from joining in a general plan to distribute the grapes systematically and evenly throughout the season, congesting no markets, but exploiting new fields wherever Tokays are in demand. Experience is a dear school, but I miss a good guess if the downpour of the first few days in October this year does not induce a frantic effort to keep the Tokays moving promptly and widely next season.

Dipping Tents.

S. A. PEASE, a most able and progressive horticultural commissioner of San Bernardino county, says to the Cultivator readers that tannin is the best filler for fumigating tents. He writes:

"In reply to your query about dipping fumigation tents will say that we do not use the cactus dip or mineral-paint solution, and have not done so for a number of years for the reason that we have found a more satisfactory formula for the purpose which is oak extract. We have a tank over a furnace. The tank is 3 by 3 by 10 feet. Into this, filled two-thirds with water, we put enough oak extract to make the tents quite dark brown. Bring it to the boiling point, then immerse the tent for thirty minutes. Draw up on a derrick that stands over the vat, and after draining spread out to dry. The oak extract prevents mildew and partially fills the cloth, thus making the tents last longer. Nothing but oil will make the tents gas-tight, and that makes the tents too heavy."

It is doubtful if oiled tents would be advantageous even if the extra weight did not have to be considered. The quarantine office at the Ferry Building has an oiled tent used principally in fumigating pineapples from the Sandwich Islands. In its use for this purpose, the airtight cloth makes the work very effective. But when this tent was used in the late warfare against the white fly, the process was very destructive to the trees, though handled by the most expert fumigators, of whom I believe Mr. Pease was one. Many competent fumigators believe that good diffusion of the gas cannot be secured under an air-tight tent; that a certain amount of circulation is necessary within the tent, and that it cannot be had unless the material of the tent is somewhat porous. This is one of the undetermined points and should be investigated. Perhaps Mr. Pease has found the happy medium between imperviousness and wastefulness in the use of the oak-bark solution.

Humbugging the Farmer.

FROM what we may see in a number of eastern papers the prosperity of the rural population is being shared largely by the promoter of worthless "enterprises." One journal runs every week a whole page of matter devoted to the exposure of these schemes. This fact will give California readers an idea of how prevalent are the separators of coin its lawful place. These columns of exposure show what a beneficent institution is the postoffice in protecting the unwary. Fraud orders are catalogued, warnings given and particular instances of cheating and swindling are recorded, with the names of the firms and of the people they have defrauded.

One of these journals is doing a good work in individual cases in causing justice to be done to rural investors in cases where wild-cat schemes have failed and yet were not perhaps as fraudulent as they were foolish or injudicious. Liquidation is often the occasion of some of the stockholders' getting a part of their unwise investment. It is the part of this journal to secure to its bitten subscribers their share of the wreckage wherever possible. Thus a good paper may noiа its patrons to cover part losses as well as to warn them against present and future perils. After all, a general enlightenment upon business methods is the best protection against fraud. The farm papers are doing much to spread information upon business principals as well as to safeguard the people by the insistent publication of fraudulent institutions.

New Creations.

I HAD supposed that the recent controversy over the new things in plants advertised so broadly by John Lewis Childs had some of the elements of novelty in it. But the more we see of the world the more we are convinced that there is nothing new under the sun, either in incident or principle. A few days ago I picked up an old, dusty and forgotten number of the Knickerbocker Magazine, printed when I was just four years old. From it I extract the following delightful incident:

"Shucks and Goby were horticultural neighbors, and matured vegetables for amusement. Goby frequently produced meritorious pumpkins, for which great praise was awarded him. Shucks, also emulous of fame, tried his hand at pumpkins, and maturing one which was approbated by his neighbor Goby, exhibited it to an 'agricultural committee,' who instantly voted it to be a genuine 'Goby,' and by no means to be attributed to Shucks, saying that though only indorsed by Goby shouldn't be surprised if Goby himself 'had some little hand in it.' Thus, the modest efforts of Shucks brought him little credit, and his cherished pumpkin, though good-naturedly endorsed by Goby, was not, in fact up to the Gobian standard of excellence. Both, therefore became malcontents—Shucks at the loss of his labor, and Goby at the damage to his reputation."

The Santa Ana River.

(Written under the bridge near Corona.)

Beautiful stream of the valley, how swiftly you glide through the rushes,
Flower and willow and pasture fringing your silvery way;
How many half-wild creatures your crystalline water refreshes!
How many men have used it for profit or pleasure or play!

Bringing the snows of the mountain to water the mesa and make it
Green with fodder for cattle or golden with fruit for man;
Harnessed to capture the lightning in sinuous wires and take it
To cities and towns far distant from the wastes where your free course ran.

Beautiful, strong Santa Ana, fit subject for poet and preacher,
Various, happy, helpful, so may our own lives be;
Prodigal not of the present, nor fretful to fathom the future,
Simply to fill each hour as we glide toward the unknown sea.

an With the Hoe.

ONG all civilized nations the tiller of the soil has en held in high esteem because through his efforts harvests are brought forth which feed the hungry l classes. The soldier on the battlefield, the king is palace, the professional man in his study, the arti- in his shop or factory, are all dependent upon the with the hoe for their daily bread.

n amateur farmer writes that the only objection to present work is that he is obliged to stoop. "The nd," he says, "is too far away. It ought at least come up to man't waist." He should be reminded he comment made by a western editor on the pa- of the stooping figure in "The Man With the Hoe." that tiller needs is a longer hoe."

n fact, the modern American farmer and gardener the wheel hoe a good deal, and bends, saving time; ploughs and squares his shoulders instead of bow- his form like the man in the famous painting.

The artist and the poet have given a picture of one type of the hoe man. They have painted for us on the canvas and in words the picture of the European peasant, degraded, brutalized and ignorant. They have yet to paint the American farmer, the man who is the backbone of the nation. The farmer is a sturdy defender of home and country, freedom and republican institutions, not because he is braver than other men, or better than the man of the city. The American farmer as a rule owns the soil which he tills. Here were born his father and his grandfather. The soil is sacred to him. The very air which he breathes, his manner of living, his associations, all suggest freedom and liberty. It was the pioneer farmer who cleared away the forest, made the waste places pleasant, and caused the desert place to blossom like the rose. The country has grown rich and prosperous through his efforts.

In farming, as in all other kinds of business, the man who makes his calling a study will succeed the best. Skill, enterprise and common sense have always taken the lead in every vocation, and they always will. As our country becomes more densely populated, and there arises a greater demand for the food productions of the soil, our thousands of acres that now produce little will have to be made more productive, and it will be done by those people who will possess the requisite skill to enable them to feed the masses. All honor, then, to the intelligent, honest American farmer!—[American Cultivator.

Yard and Garden.

IF your lawn is larger than you can care for properly, plan now to have it of suitable size by filling in with hardy, thrifty growers that will take care of themselves.

Don't neglect to drop a few seeds of perennials in the bare places this month for bloomers next year. Seedlings cost but little, while plants are expensive. Many beautiful things can be raised from a package of mixed seeds of perennials.

Now is a good time to plan changes in the border and the flower garden, and do not make the same mistake this year and plant the tall growers in front of the low ones; in grouping ill-matched plants and mixing in harmonious colors keep a note-book and pencil in hand.

In arranging the home lot, whether for fruit, shade or ornament, plant the tallest growers well to the rear, grading down to the lowest or creeping things.

Don't buy spongy, soft bulbs if you want good results. The bulbs worth having are solid and heavy. Heavy Dutch bulbs of the single variety make fine plants and give fine spikes of flowers, but many prefer the double-flowered ones for the house. Insist on having good, fresh stock. Send your order early.—[California Cultivator.

Winter Vegetables.

SUMMER vegetables will soon be out of season. Even the luscious watermelon or the rich muskmelon or canteloupe lose their desirable flavor when colder weather comes. The fresh tomato, however, for cooking, will be in favor as late as the frost keeps away. This is also a reminder that a few vines may be preserved until later in the season by a light covering if we should have an early and destructive frost. Very late in the season the growth and maturity of fruit is so slow as to make less of a point in favor of late-grown fruit. In choice, warm, foothill locations, with sunny exposure, conditions are more favorable, especially for summer planted roots, which are more vigorous than those that have been bearing heavily for the whole season. This all reminds us that if we are to have a continuous supply of vegetables in season, we must keep planting and sowing seed. All of the commoner hardy vegetables will give a good supply for the table if sown at once in rich soil. Onions, turnips, carrots, peas, cabbage and the various salad and pot herbs for flavoring will give a good supply for the house during winter and spring and until they begin to run to seed, when the spring supply from sowing in early spring will furnish the table through all next summer. To grow the best, rich soil and plenty of water are essenial conditions, and without them success will be only indifferent. With these factors an enjoyable meal is always at hand. In very favorable locations early potatoes may be still planted for family use, or if near a good market. A good quality of new potatoes may bring fancy prices along with green peas and other luscious vegetables for eastern tourists' use.—[Rural Californian.

Thunderberry—for J. L. C.

I AM a plant wizard. A plant wizard is a fellow who introduces unrelated plants to each other with a view to matrimony and then gets some other fellow to blow his horn. I began monkeying with plants in 1898, when I first came to Florida and saw the saw palmetto. I saw that great possibilities could be accomplished in improving the saw palmetto berry, and I promptly tackled the job. The berry is about as large as a Damson plum, black, very prolific and has a flavor unlike any other berry on earth. The berry is relished by a few people, but most folks have to acquire a taste for it, and the taste has to be acquired by main strength, same as for whisky, quinine and olives. It is used in some patent medicines, but I never heard what it will cure, and don't know that it will cure anything. To give it more stamina and pungency, I decided first to cross it with the northern pepperidge tree, but my friend to whom I sent for pollen sent pollen from the ironwood tree by mistake. The result was amazing. I had a plant on which the leaf stalks were perfect saws; hand saws, buck saws, rip saws, and key-hole saws. The berries were like iron bullets—just the thing to bring down any editor who felt inclined to throw cold water on this wonderful plant creation. To render the berry more succulent I crossed the saw palmetto in rapid succession with the huckleberry, wintergreen berry, elderberry, and pokeberry. But the large pit or seed still remained. To eliminate this and produce a seedless berry was the next problem. It is well known that the seed pods of certain plants burst when ripe and scatter the seeds in all directions. To assist my wonderful hybrid berry to do the same thing I bored a small hole in the body of the plant and put in a thimbleful of nitroglycerine and plugged the hole. This nitro-glycerine was absorbed into the circulation of the plant, and a small quantity deposited at the base or butt end of each seed. This was acted upon by the sun, moon and stars, and just before the berry ripened it exploded with a loud report, hence the name Thunderberry, and with force sufficient to knock a small boy down, but not to kill him. This has a tendency to discourage pilfering. After popping its pit the Thunderberry immediately closes up, and in a few weeks the cavity is filled with a most delicious and exhilarating beverage which will be a boon of inestimable value to the thirsty inhabitants of the dry States, North and South. Mr. John Tight Younger has kindly consented to introduce this astonishing berry to the world, but this will not be done till 1912, so as to utilize the vast amount of wind and hot air that usually goes to waste Presidential years. Merely to mention the name of John Tight Younger will cause the dear public to separate themselves from their money without a murmur.—[Old Thunderation, in Rural New Yorker.

A Woman's Rights Man.

IT is a mistake—an excusable mistake—to suppose that Los Angeles has a monopoly of all the cranks in Southern California. There are many scattered through the length and breadth of the Golden State, outside of the limits of this overgrown municipality.

A Tulare-county correspondent of the Care of the Body sends the following article in regard to one of those strange characters that seem to flourish particularly in this Land of Out of Doors:

"In the colony of Alpaugh, Tulare county, has lived for several years an elderly man named W. J. Thompson—Thompson with a p. He is variously known by the younger fry as 'Professor,' 'Grandma,' 'Gen. Genius,' 'Lady Thompson,' and other names that to the growing generation may seem to fit his case. His chief peculiarity is that he delights in dressing himself on all occasions as a woman, not only in the matter of outward garb, but even in such details as shoes, side garters, ribbons, laces, and fancy gewgaws in his slivery hair, for the 'Professor' is 73 years of age.

"Apart from the peculiarity referred to, Thompson is a peaceful old gentleman, who attends strictly to his own business and leaves that of others severely alone. Although he now lives alone, he has reared and sent out as useful citizens into the world a family of tall, handsome sons, and a fine daughter. He is an advanced thinker, and in practice a strict hygienist. Especially is he an advocate of 'equal rights for all, and special privileges for none.'

"Thompson is by no means backward about talking on his favorite subject—woman's rights and her place in society. Apparently poor man has no rights or wrongs that are worthy of his respect or regard. Woman is the only being worth consideration. He is convinced that one of the most potent influences in creating inequalities between the sexes is our present method of dress. In a recent interview, he discussed this subject as follows:

"'Dress is an unmistakable language which all may read, and the peculiarity of the female dress as surely holds man—the inferior creature—under thrall—as does omnipotence hold sway over finite expression thereof. When "mere man" has become educated and advanced by repeated reincarnations in female form to properly appreciate woman's mission, and become chivalrous enough to acknowledge her equality and co-partnership with him, he will then adopt—at least in part—her more beautiful, artistic, soul-elevating and inspiring method of dress. Then, and not till then, will the creators of the race hope to enjoy the "liberty and pursuit of happiness" which is their birthright.

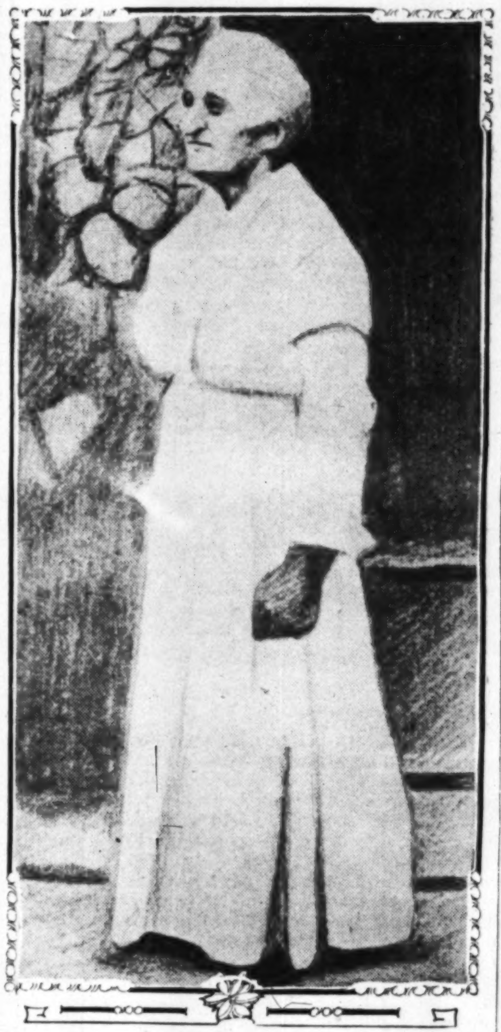
"'I regard it as my mission in this world to elevate men's thoughts regarding womankind. I am convinced that in order to impress a new doctrine the teacher must practice what he preaches, or get no converts, and having the courage of my convictions, I say by my female costume that I am as good possibly, but certainly no better, than the mother who gave me individual existence.

"'Would you learn how I can accomplish results, how to fulfill my mission of restoring to the creative part—woman—her birthright of equality, of which she has been unjustly robbed by the very creatures she has created? By beginning, like Froebel, with the kindergarten—or the cradle—and expanding onward thence to the race problem. I would begin by dressing all children alike, regardless of sex, and turning out the finished product—perfectly natural men and women who would be fit temples for hallowed thought, and never refer to the human form as vulgar or obscene.

"'The question of dress has long been a grave study with me. I am abreast of the times on progressive thought, and on some lines ahead of them all. The adoption of the spiritual law of sex relation symbolized by uniform method of dress in childhood, would eliminate evil thoughts, bad practices, and innumerable other consequences of our present-day sex ignorance—which is but a pretence at best. Boys and girls in our schools by being kept separate in manner of dress and play are thereby tempted to be curious and meddlesome, whereas, if dressed alike and treated alike, they would respect each other as friends and comrades. To the pure, all things are pure, and to my mind there is a grand opportunity for some uplifting work among the children, by founding an institution along the lines of education I have suggested in the matter of dress, and comradeship, such an institution as will turn out to the world natural people who know themselves, and who understand each other, because they have been so educated. To lay the foundation of such an achievement has been for years the goal of my ambition.

"'Give me control of the most degraded criminal on earth, allow me to dress and feed him, both physically and mentally, for a time, and also furnish such associates as I deem best for him, and I will guarantee within a few years to so change that criminal in character and facial expression that his own mother might not be able to recognize him on the street. Under such régime, law and lawyers, prisons and prisoners would be relics of bararism.

"'We consult with an architect concerning our plans and specifications when we contemplate building an edifice, and when leaving the final plans in his hands, we let him alone concerning the sources from whence he is to gather material, or whom he shall employ to construct the building. We only demand a perfect result. By the same law we expect of woman that she shall construct for us a perfect specimen of manhood, and instead of giving her carte blanche in the selection of her material and co-workers, we crowd her into a limited area, and presume that she can only accept as her co-workers those who imagine they can do the work, with no question as to their fitness, and the woman dare not go beyond the prescribed circle of choosing her helpmate. And it is because of man's thus limiting the area of a woman's scope that she cannot perforce turn out many high-class products. No condition of society should possibly exist which in any way tends to deprive woman of absolute and unqualified control of her conditions and her person.'"



PROF. W. H. THOMPSON OF ALPAUGH, TULARE COUNTY, IN HIS EVERY-DAY COSTUME.

The correspondent did not say whether the Tulare-county recluse wears a "straight-front corset." Apparently he does not. He is surely too sensible to adopt such an unnatural infliction.

There are some good ideas in what this would-be reformer says, but so far as dress is concerned, the ordinary dress of women, while possessing advantages over that of men in that it allows the air more free access to the body, is, on the other hand, a great drawback, owing to the fact that skirts prevent a free movement on part of the woman. In fact, some reformers have gone so far as to claim that if it were not for women's skirts, which have kept them backward in the race, they would long ere now have acquired what they are pleased to term their "rights." A loose knickerbocker suit or loose pants of light texture like those worn by the Chinese women are preferable to the ordinary skirt, which not only hinders natural movements, but when at all heavy, does great arm by bearing down on delicate female organs. Many of the serious ailments so common among "civilized" women may undoubtedly be traced to this habit of suspending heavy weights from the center of the body, where nature never intended any waist line to be drawn.

The Greek costume was both artistic and hygienic, but the Greek women did not incumber themselves with a lot of heavy underskirts. Recently fashion has, for a time, done away with heavy female underclothing, but Mouth Breathing—Adenoids—Enlarged Tonsils.

A WOMAN correspondent in Petaluma asks how to prevent mouth breathing in children. This is an important subject. Many evils arise from the unnatural practice of breathing through the mouth.

The North American Indian women always close the mouths of their infants when they find them open, so that you never find a grown Indian who breathes through the mouth. Following is from "What the White Race May Learn From the Indian," by George Wharton James. It answers the correspondent's query:

"The Indian believes absolutely in nasal breathing. Again and again I have seen the Indian mother, as soon as her child was born, watch it to see if it breathed properly. If not, she would at once pinch the child's lips together and keep them pinched until the breath was taken in and exhaled easily and naturally through the nostrils. If this did not answer, I have watched her as she took a strip of buckskin and tied it as a bandage below the chin and over the crown of the head, forcing the jaws together, and then with another bandage of buckskin she covered the lips of the little one. Thus the habit of nasal breathing was formed immediately the child saw the light, and it knew no other method."

Closely connected with the subject of mouth breathing are adenoid growths and enlarged tonsils.

Much attention is beginning to be devoted to the physical imperfections of school children—to imperfect vision, unnatural growths, etc. As to the proposed treatment of these affections, that is a question open to discussion.

One eastern school superintendent recently declared that adenoid growths in the nose and throat were responsible for most of the depravity of the boys and girls in the public schools, and suggested that we should have legislation giving the right to compel the removal of adenoids. Yet another compulsory surgical onslaught on the human body.

These growths are but a sign of a general wrong condition of the body, due to errors in living. After an operation they will return again in a more malignant form, if the cause is not removed, and other evils will result.

Again, there are the tonsils, which the doctors are fond of cutting out. Now, the tonsils are excreting glands for the elimination of impurities from the body. They constitute a valuable part of the drainage system of the body. When such a drainage system is destroyed the impurities must travel either upward into the brain or downward through the neck into the tissues of the lungs. The child will grow nervous and irritable, and may develop hysteria, St. Vitus dance, or epilepsy, unless the impurities find an outlet through the ear drums, which may avert inflammation of the brain and insanity.

Adenoids, or enlarged tonsils, should be treated through the general health—diet, air, exercise, bathing, sleep, etc. They are often due to malnutrition—to living largely on starvation foods, such as white flour, and sugar, and the absence of the important mineral elements which abound in leaves and fruits.

A Menace to Public Health.

NOTWITHSTANDING all that has been said against it; in spite of strong protests from many citizens, and ignoring the advice of the City Health Officer, the Los Angeles City Council has made a five years' contract for the feeding of hogs on city garbage, a few miles south of the city limits.

That hogs fed in this manner are utterly unfit for human food admits of no question. Fifty years ago the subject was thoroughly investigated by the late Dr. J. H. Salisbury at Newark, O., where 1200 hogs were being fed on slops and swill. Dr. Salisbury showed conclusively that slop-fed hogs inevitably develop the disease known as "hog cholera," which is really chronic diarrhoea, or consumption of the bowels. He showed that every hog fattened upon sour fermenting food is a consumptive hog, and if allowed to continue long enough on this diet, would sooner or later die of this disease. At first, when hogs are put on fermenting and sloppy food, they eat ravenously for a few days. After a day or two, they become constipated and bloated with the carbonic acid gas developed from the fermenting food in the stomach and bowels. This constipation continues for one to three weeks when yeast diarrhoea, or consumption of the bowels sets in. The ravenous appetite passes away, they eat more daintily, and begin to fall off in weight. After the diarrhoea sets in, they soon began to die. Paralytic symptoms begin to show themselves. There is a gradual weakening in the limbs, labored breathing on exercising even moderately, and the tendency to stagger and reel, and often a dragging in the hind legs. The immediate causes of death are produced by the large amount of acetic acid already in the slops, or developed in it in the digestive apparatus after being eaten.

It may be that care will be taken to see that hogs that have died a "natural" death at the city garbage dump are not used for food, but those that are diseased, and at the point of dissolution when killed, are no more fit for human food than those which have actually died.

It would be a case of poetic justice if some of the members of the city government, or their families, should be made deathly sick by partaking of such filthy food as the flesh of these garbage-fed swine.

It is of vastly more importance to the health of the citizens of Los Angeles that they should be protected from such filthy food as this, than that they shall be forbidden to eat a cheese sandwich in place of a plate of beef stew with a glass of beer on a Sunday.

Those Los Angeles people who value their health will, during the next few years, absolutely refrain from using hog flesh in any way, shape or form, unless they know where and how the animal has been raised.

John Q. A. Walker of the San Fernando building writes to the Care of the Body about a new and improved method of collecting garbage in closed cans from the rear of residences, using sanitary garbage receptacles such as are now in general use in eastern cities, thus protecting the premises from rats, mice, flies, dogs, stray cats, etc. It is said that in St. Louis, since the introduction of these sanitary receptacles, thousands of rats have died of starvation.

This is all right, so far as it goes, but it does not make slops and garbage a wholesome food for the feeding of animals whose flesh is to be eaten by human beings. The mere fact that the stench arising from this offal at the present garbage pile in Vernon is so horribly foul as to excite almost a riot down there should be sufficient to show the danger of feeding upon it animals that are intended to be marketed and eaten.

When a few cases of smallpox break out in a community there is a great scare. That, however, is not anything like so dangerous a menace to public health as is the promiscuous scattering around in the markets and restaurants of the flesh of thousands of sick hogs The danger may, of course, be avoided by those who, as above suggested, abstain from eating pork in any form, unless they know just where it comes from.

Oh, yes, hogs are fed on garbage in some other cities. Quite so, but that does not make the practice safe or wholesome. How many thousands of cases of sickness arise from such unsuspected causes as this? A man will not drop dead suddenly after eating a "delicious" chop, cut from the body of a garbage-fed hog that is full of impurities. Perhaps it would be better if they did so occasionally, for then the public might be aroused to the danger of indulging in such filthy food.

Charoppin and the Comet.

THE following article appeared in the Care of the Body department on October 17:

"Now comes another prophet of evil and tells us that the world is likely to be destroyed this winter by a collision with Halley's comet. This time it is a Catholic clergyman—Rev. Father Charles M. Charoppin, S.J., of St. Louis University—described as 'one of the greatest living astronomers,' According to the dispatch published in The Times—which came from Las Vegas, N. M.—'Father Charoppin believes that the comet is of a sufficiently solid mass to shatter both our planet and itself in the event of a collision.'

"If Father Charoppin is really an eminent astronomer, he should certainly know that on one of the previous visits of this comet the earth passed through a portion of its tail, and the inhabitants knew nothing about it, except what they may have read in papers or reviews.

"Such alarming suggestions as this are exceedingly dangerous and harmful, as they are quite likely to drive some weak-minded person to insanity or suicide."

Father Charoppin writes as follows to The Times from the Grand Cañon, Arizona, under date of October 19:

"In your edition of October 17, 1909, Page 510, I am supposed to have said that Halley's comet will destroy the earth. Now no one but a crazy man could utter such an absurdity.

"I believe in the Bible, and our Lord says: 'That the angels themselves do not know that day.'

"As you are a fair-minded man, I am sure that you would not willingly and knowingly destroy the reputation of any one. Please inform your readers that I have never said such an absurd thing.

"The path of Halley's comet is well known to astronomers. It can no more strike the earth than Mars or the Moon could come in contact with our little planet.

"Halley's comet will pass much nearer to the planet Venus than to the earth.

"It may be asked: 'Is it possible for a comet to strike the earth?' This is possible; but there is one chance out of five million chances."

Eating for Efficiency.

FOLLOWING is from an address delivered at the Battle Creek Sanatorium by Horace Fletcher:

"It is a fact, and a fact that we should all bear in mind, that it is entirely possible to feed for efficiency or for inefficiency, to feed for morality, or for immorality; to feed for temperance or intemperance; to feed for irritability or for amiability. And with such objects before us to avoid or secure, is it not a sacred function that we are called upon to perform within the beautiful area of the mouth? And what a wonderful place the mouth is! It will stand more heat, it will stand more cold, it will stand more abuse, it will give more pleasure than almost any other area of the body; and we have neglected it frightfully.. We have not only

The Color Line.

A WISCONSIN court has decided that Syrians, of whom there are many in this country, are not entitled to vote, because they are Asiatics, and consequently not "white people" within the meaning of the law, although as a fact, Syrians are lighter in complexion than many natives of Southern Europe and of the United States. A similar case has been up before a court in Los Angeles, where there are many Syrians.

Under this ruling, Jesus of Nazareth could not become naturalized and vote in the United States.

The Assyrians, from whom the modern Syrians are descended, were indexing their libraries when the ancestors of the Anglo-Saxon race lived in caves and dressed in the skins of animals.

Aqua Pura.

AT the latest meeting of the Sunset Club, Mr. Mulholland gave an interesting talk about the Owens River water supply. He quoted a chemist as saying that the water was the purest he had ever analyzed. Mr. Lippincott, who also delivered an entertaining address, said that the covering of the acqueduct, while not provided for in the estimates, could be paid for with the funds that will be available.

It is probably not too much to say that Los Angeles will soon have the finest water supply in the world—water brought over 200 miles from the virgin snow fields of the highest mountain in the United States.

Lager Beer.

FOLLOWING is an extract from an article on "Beer and the City Liquor Problem," by George Kibbe Turner, in McClure's Magazine for September:

"Beer, generally speaking—that is, the drink fermented from the sugar obtained from grain—is as old as Egypt. But lager beer is a very modern product. Its manufacture originated in Bavaria in the '30s. Former beers—or ales, as we know them—were brewed at a comparatively normal temperature; lager beer must be brewed, kept, and served cold. It is a highly artificial substance, in the early days brewed only in winter, and even then preserved through the warmer months by the artificial cold obtained by digging caverns in the rock. Bock beer—flamboyantly advertised every spring—is merely a reminiscence of the time when lager could be brewed only in winter. It was the choice beer simply because it had been brewed and ripened through the best and only certain time of cold storage—the winter months."

Caffein-Free Coffee.

IT is announced that a German firm has succeeded in manufacturing a coffee free from caffein, the stimulating quality of the berry, and that it will soon be introduced in the United States.

This may, to some extent, interfere with the business of the near-coffees that are so widely advertised, but it will never replace the real thing with those who are much addicted to the use of coffee. Your regular coffee drinker will not be satisfied with a caffein-free coffee any more than the regular toper will be satisfied with an alcohol-free whisky, or the regular smoker with a nicotine-free tobacco. It is the effect that they seek, not the flavor.

Good Suggestions.

"A LITTLE SERMON ON HEALTH," a pamphlet published by L. L. Denny, "Health Sientist" of Los Angeles, contains sensible things. Dr. Denny condemns eating too much, too fast, and too often. He emphasizes the value of the organic salts. He tells of the value of the sun bath, but wisely warns about overdoing it. He tells his readers when they get the blues, not to send for a doctor, but to think for themselves, and after thinking, to decide to fast. Good advice that. He adds:

"The idea of sending for a doctor every time you get a pain cross-ways is a nuisance, and it bores the doctor, unless he is in need of that medium of exchange manufactured by our government. When the world learns to live rightly, doctors will have to seek another occupation. It would be an excellent plan to pay your physical director when well, and stop the payments when sick. Learn how to live correctly and thus keep well. That is the secret of this whole business."

Two Stages of Married Life.

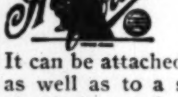
"I HAVE reached the 'wifeless breakfast' stage of our married life," recently remarked a husband. It was said as a joke, but the wife was quick to take up with the remark, and she asked the husband: "And do you know why, dear?"

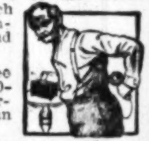
"No," answered the husband laughingly.

"Because I first reached the 'newspaper at the breakfast-table' stage of our married life."

"Well said, dear," said the husband smilingly, and then he added seriously: "And justly, too."

And the wife-and-husband breakfasts were resumed. But the newspaper is now read on the trolley car!





Why Suffer With That Rheumatism?

An Arnold VIBRATOR

Insures You Perfect Health and Vitality.

It can be attached to any electric lighting current as well as to a set of dry batteries. For poor circulation and ailments of the nerves, brain, heart and vital organs. Invaluable for rheumatic, neuralgic and paralytic affections. Endorsed by physicians. Produces health, strength, beauty, vigor and vitality.

The Arnold Massage Vibrator increases the circulation of the blood in the small capillaries and stimulates the nerves. It is impossible to get any electric shock, and there is absolutely no danger whatever, even a child can learn to use it.

By following the book of directions you can immediately relieve any kind of pain or chronic disease. You can secure perfect health and complexion and improvement of figure.

Poor blood circulation anywhere in the body causes ill health, and the congested blood in the small capillaries causes pressure on the thousands of little nerves, thereby causing an ache or pain.

The Arnold Massage Vibrator perfectly takes the place of drugs and medicines in successfully treating all the common family ailments. It is particularly effective for children, whose little stomachs cannot stand drugs without permanent harm.

Vibratory Massage with an Arnold Vibrator is Nature's own remedy. The healing power is in the blood; IT IS THE BLOOD THAT HEALS. No disease or trouble can exist in any part of the body if good rich blood is sent coursing through the tissues. Vibratory Massage with the Arnold Vibrator, gives to every nerve and blood vessel the needed stimulation, increasing the rate and force of the Heart beat and circulation. Where good rich blood, supplied with the necessary nourishment, circulates regularly, all disease and congestion disappears.

Dear Sir: I am more pleased with my Stolz Electrophone than with any instrument I have ever tried to assist the hearing, and I have tried them all during the past twenty-five years.

I can hear music very well. At a dinner lately I put the transmitter on the table and heard every word the hostess said without effort.
